major crush

Terex EvoQuip crushing and screening equipment can handle anything you throw at it, says Tricon

Tricon Mining Equipment has brought the full range of Terex EvoQuip crushing and screening equipment to the Australian market, with a machine suited to almost any crushing or screening application.

This, coupled with Telestack mobile bulk handers, Anaconda Equipment International, Matec Italia, Simem and various other brands, has cemented Tricon as a premier player in the Australian crushing and screening industry, Tricon's Rob Price says.

"The most exciting thing about EvoQuip," he says, "is that there is a machine to suit everyone.

"For a long time, customers had been forced to either buy a machine that was considerably larger than it needed to be, or one that was lacking in both build quality and throughput. Now we have a range of crushers, as small as 3,400kg, that can handle anything you throw at them."

Price says the Cobra series of impact crushers are also set to shake up the sector, offering class-leading throughput and reliability, with compactness and cost effectiveness.

"Every machine in the EvoQuip range has a focus not just on performance, but also useability, transportability and fuel economy," he says.

"The Cobra range is introducing a new breed of customer to impactors, which in the past have more often than not been looked at as being cost prohibitive.

"This has allowed people in smaller operations, or on tighter sites, a genuine option when it comes to processing material."

The EvoQuip range also covers screeners, from the compact Harrier 220, to the 2.7m x 1.2m (9-foot x 4-foot) Colt 800, with even larger machines coming later in 2018.

"As with the crushers, the broad spread of both incline and scalping screens mean Tricon is able to supply customers with a machine that perfectly suits the application," Price says.

"We now have screeners that you can tow on a small trailer, unload on site and have ready to screen in less than three minutes. This opens up amazing opportunities for customers running rental equipment, earthmoving equipment and even in the farming and agriculture sectors.

"To have brand-new, fully-warranted Terex crushers and screeners starting at under $100,000 really has changed the game."

The smallest jaw crusher in the range, the Bison 35, is suited to contractors who need a machine with maximum power but a tiny footprint. At less than 4.5m long, the rubber-tracked crusher has the ability to fit on almost any job site without worrying about damaging concrete, asphalt or even grassed areas, Price says.

The machine can crush at up to 30tph, while sipping as little as four litres of diesel an hour thanks to its 28.5hp Isuzu engine.

At the other end of the scale is the new Bison 280 jaw crusher, which uses Terex's 900mm x 600mm crushing chamber, and is at home in both quarry and recycling applications.

"With hydraulic jaw adjustment, two-stage grizzly feeder and CAT C7.1 engine all standard, the Bison 280 allows customers to get into a brand-new Terex jaw crusher at a price that has previously been reserved for used equipment," he says.

> Every machine in the EvoQuip range has a focus not just on performance, but also useability, transportability and fuel economy.

Topcon's new rugged FC-6000 survey tablet now available from Position Partners

Topcon Positioning Group has released its latest survey tablet that powers all Topcon GNSS, optical instruments and MAGNET software, simultaneously. The Topcon FC-6000 is an evolution of the FC-5000 tablet, popular with surveyors, engineers and others working in the construction industry for its durability, ease of use and powerful functionality, says Topcon.

"The FC-5000 was the first tablet that truly blended the power of a desktop computer with an exceptionally field-hardy design that doesn't miss a beat in bright sunlight, rain or dusty, windy weather," says Cameron Waters, geospatial business manager at Position Partners.

"This latest model brings even greater processing power and functionality, offering surveyors and other geospatial professionals unrivalled performance for all field applications," he adds.

The Topcon FC-6000 has a large seven-inch display and the highest environmental rating available, with the latest Intel Quad-Core Pentium processor, plus front and rear cameras.

With standard 4G SIM, internal GPS and an optional external keyboard for those that prefer them over a touchscreen, Topcon's FC-6000 is a full-featured system.

"If you're relying on a tablet for most of your working day, it's important that it performs well and feels good," Waters says.

"This new Topcon field controller does exactly that – our customers have raved about the 5000 model and this one trumps it. Couple it with MAGNET Field, office and Enterprise software and I believe we have the most compelling workflow solution on the market," he adds.

Tigercat releases new 850 roadside processor

The Tigercat 850 processor is a purpose-built roadside processor designed for high volume roadside processing.

Tigercat says the 850 offers many advantages over excavator conversions, including better service access, higher cooling capacity and processor head optimized hydraulics.

The Tigercat FPT N67 engine delivers 159kW (213hp) at 2,100rpm for Tier 2 and Tier 4f emission compliance.

An efficient load sensing hydraulic system allows simultaneous machine and head functionality. The combination of high horsepower and harvester head optimised hydraulics lead to responsive control, quick feed speed and powerful de-limbing capability for high productivity.

Left: The Tigercat 850 has been designed for high volume roadside processing

A high capacity swing system with dual swing drives provides ample torque and speed for high performance processing.

The powerful, strength-to-weight optimised boom is designed specifically for processing and high stacking.

Operator visibility is unmatched in the quiet, comfortable, ergonomically designed cab. The hooked boom design, and narrow side posts provide excellent right-hand side visibility.

An integrated cab riser and the rear view camera system contributes to all-around visibility for the operator.

Optimally positioned controls and a large touch screen display improve ergonomics and machine monitoring.

Reduced noise levels help the operator enjoy the auxiliary audio input port, Bluetooth audio and hands-free calling.

To improve service access, there is now the ability to step down into the centre of the machine for clear, unobstructed access to the engine and daily service points.

Large enclosure doors and a service platform provide easy access to other service points and a large cast counterweight with a swing-out door allows access to the engine from the rear of the machine.

Coronavirus hits JCB component supply as production reduced, reports Chris McCullough

Workers at JCB's UK factories face a shorter working week due to fears that the coronavirus will have a huge impact on component parts arriving in from China.

Production levels at UK factories are being reduced as 4,000 JCB workers and agency shop floor employees had their hours cut.

"The disruption to the component supply chain in the UK comes at a time when demand for JCB products is very strong, so while this course of action is very unfortunate, it is absolutely necessary to protect the business and our skill base," says JCB chief operating officer Mark Turner.

"Production in the UK has so far been unaffected by the situation in China. However, more than 25 per cent of JCB's suppliers in China remain closed and those that have reopened are working at reduced capacity and are struggling to make shipments.

Left: As component production is hit in China, there will be a knock-on effect

"It is therefore clear that the inbound supply of certain components from Chinese partners will be disrupted in the coming weeks as they seek to replenish their stocks.

"This inevitably means we will not have the required amount of parts needed to build our forecast number of machines in the short term."

Turner emphasised that production would continue with the same number of employees, albeit in lower numbers of machines on the lines.

"These measures will ensure that, while we will produce machines in lower than anticipated numbers, we will do so with the same number of employees, whose skills we will need to fulfil customers' orders when the situation returns to normal.

"We are keeping the situation under review and we anticipate a surge in production levels once this period of supply disruption has passed," he says.

MB Crusher is touring the major construction fairs

Italian crushing specialist MB has been touring its crusher units across the US and Europe, giving construction-fair visitors a live look at the machinery in action.

The machines were designed for operators looking for a way to reduce the costs of disposal and transport of material, fuel and personnel, says MB, which over 15 years in business has expanded into sieving, milling, handling and selection systems.

With a crusher on site, says MB, material is recycled on the spot through reuse of the crushed material, transport and management costs are reduced, landfill disposal is eliminated and the crushed material is produced at the desired size.

Left: See the MB crusher in action at DD&T 2020 in May

MB's next big show will be CONEXPO-CON/AGG 2020 in Las Vegas from March 10 to 14 where MB Crusher will set up a test field at the Silver Lots 1 and 2 on stand S5003, as well as a stand inside in the Central Hall.

The crushers will then be displayed at Samoter 2020 in Verona, Italy on March 21-25 before heading to Smopyc 2020 in Saragoza, Spain, April 1-4, stand C-D 1/10.

At the end of April, the company will be at Scotland 2020, while on May 4-8, MB products will be on display at the IFAT 2020 fair in Germany (stand B4.445).

■ The tour will continue Down Under on May 15-17 at Diesel Dirt & Turf 2020 at the Panthers Penrith Showgrounds on the outdoor stand #82A.

active TO THE CORE

With a long history of providing quality equipment for a variety of businesses, Active Machinery is one of the most trusted names in Australia's earthmoving sector

Active Machinery's AL938LE multi-purpose wheel loader is one of the company's most popular models. This 14-tonne wheel loader has been used by earthmoving businesses, construction companies, nurseries, farmers, landscapers and contractors alike.

Built to withstand tough Australian weather conditions, the AL938LE is powered by a genuine 150hp (112kW) Cummins engine, while its ergonomic design allows comfortable operation. Its features include extended load frame, certified ROPS/FOPS cabin with a pillar-less wrap around windscreen that creates excellent visibility, single lever hydraulic pilot control, and four-speed electronic transmission.

It has a bucket capacity of 2.5 cubic metres and a maximum 3.25 metre dump height. Maximum load lifting time is 5.3 seconds. Other features include full-powered third function hydraulics (third valve), easy access to service and maintenance compartments, quality standard inclusions, auto lubrication system and a range of optional buckets and attachments.

Active Machinery also has 12 other models of wheel loaders ranging from a gross weight of five tonnes to 24 tonnes. It also offers a range of diesel and gas forklifts, and excavators. Backing its entire range of machines, Active Machinery also provides a host of attachments and parts.

For over 16 years Active Machinery has been providing Australian businesses quality and affordable earthmoving equipment including a range of excavators, wheel loaders, skid steers and forklifts.

Active Machinery is headquartered in Melbourne with a state-of-the-art facility in Dandenong South, Victoria. Its manufacturing unit, Active Construction Machinery, is based in China.

"We are one of the longest-standing manufacturers of equipment from Asia that imports into Australia," founder and managing director Garry Willis says.

"Our quality has stood the Australian standards. We've established a reputation for quality – both in terms of the products we offer and our service. Quality control is our biggest priority.

"We are over and above our Chinese counterparts. Many businesses say their cabins are CE certified but it doesn't always mean they are structurally tested. Ours, on the hand, are not only structurally tested but are also certified to meet European standards, which are more rigorous than Australian standards."

As a result, Active Machinery offers on-site repairs and workshop facility for other repair and maintenance works.

Active Machinery is constantly advancing its current range of models to include latest and most innovative technologies.

"We are advancing to German design and quality for our products. We use T4 technology engines with ZF quality transmissions. Our aim is to manufacture best-quality equipment at the most affordable prices for our customers," he adds.

"Our company has in the last six years expanded quite quickly and dramatically. While we currently concentrate on agricultural and construction industries, we are now starting to branch out into the mining industry as well."

■ When you want the best quality products at the lowest prices, look no further than Active Machinery. For more info call Active Machinery on 03 9799 7707 or visit activemachinery.com.au.

mental health

CJD Equipment supporting Beyond Blue

CJD Equipment has announced that from February 1 until May 31 it will be donating $1,000 to Beyond Blue for every new general-purpose Volvo excavator it sells.

Mental health is a significant issue affecting many Australians and CJD Equipment says it is proud to be constructing a path to better mental health through raising awareness and funds for Beyond Blue.

One in five construction workers experience a diagnosable mental health condition and one in 20 experience suicidal thoughts, which is why CJD Equipment and Volvo Construction Equipment want to acknowledge this struggle and contribute to supporting not only the people in the industry but across the country as well, they say.

Beyond Blue helps equip Australians with the knowledge and skills to protect their own mental health, helping to give people the confidence to support those around them, as well as tackle the stigma, prejudice and discrimination that prevent people from speaking up or reaching out for help.

CJD says that it is committed to maintaining a workplace that prioritises the health and wellbeing of its staff, customers and the communities in which it operates.

Hidromek has won a design award for its Hicon 7W electric excavator Turkish manufacturer Hidromek was a winner at the German Design Award 2020 competition recently for its newly-developed 100 per cent electric wheeled excavator Hicon 7W.

Organised every year by the German Design Council, the awards are granted to projects that make pioneering contributions to the area of international design. Hidromek, which was granted 'Special Mention' at the German Design Award 2017 with its HMK 600 MG motor grader and was a winner at the German Design Award 2018 with its HMK 640 WL wheel loader, has now added a third to its accolades with the Hicon 7W.

Left: The all-electric Hicon 7W wheel loader has been designed for urban environments

The 100 per cent electric Hicon 7W stands out by being smart, economic and eco firendly, says Hidromek. The Hicon 7W can be easily used in tight spaces in urban environments, with its zero emission and compact dimensions, whilst its Environmental Safety System provides the operator with a camera view from behind the machine, increasing safety.

Efficient power consumption and low maintenance costs make the machine an economical option, Hidromek says. One-time charge of the lithium ion batteries provides eight hours of usage. It can be fully charged in three hours or a 30-minute quick charge is also available.

The Hicon 7W was displayed for the first time at the prestigious Bauma 2019 show in Germany last year. Serving in the construction equipment sector for 41 years, this latest win has increased the number of Hidromek's design awards to 18.

Hidromek machines are distributed in Australia by Onetrak.

Cat driverless training hub to be opened in Western Australia

Main: Initially, the focus will be on fit-out and maintenance of Cat haulage vehicles, before expanding the range of courses offered

Inset: Breaking turf on the site. The new facility is part of a $20 million investment into Collie's local economy

The investment includes a new, fully autonomous Cat 789D off-highway truck.

Collie in WA will become home to the southern hemisphere's first Caterpillar training facility that is solely focused primarily on providing courses in autonomous operations, with people from all over the world expected to visit to use the facility from May this year.

The facility, located at Coolangatta Industrial Estate, about two hours' drive south of Perth, will deliver training courses to technicians and operators of autonomous equipment.

WesTrac CEO Jarvas Croome says the investment includes a new fully autonomous Cat 789D off-highway truck, construction of an autonomous operations zone and training room facilities.

It is expected to train approximately 204 students during the first year of operation and is projected to grow to 320 students in its third year, delivering training courses to technicians and operators of autonomous equipment and to support the growth of this technology in mining.

"The initial focus will be to provide training in fit-out and maintenance requirements for the conversion and operation of existing Caterpillar haulage vehicles," Croome says.

"Over time, we anticipate expanding the range of courses on offer to ensure the facility caters for the recognised skills of the future that will be in demand as the resource sector evolves.

"It's an opportunity to position Collie and Western Australia as a world leader in advanced technology and skills development in automation and autonomous operations."

Croome added that while WesTrac had evaluated a number of potential locations, Collie was the ideal centre for the training facility.

"The town has a long mining history and an experienced workforce with the potential to help run and develop the training facility over time.

"There's also a vibrant community and plenty of supporting business infrastructure, plus a unique range of natural attractions and easy access to the wider south west region, which adds appeal for Australian and international training participants," he says.

Croome says WesTrac and Caterpillar clients from across the Asia Pacific region had shown significant interest in having access to such training and strong demand was expected when the facility commenced operations.

WA premier Mark McGowan, regional development minister Alannah MacTiernan, and Collie-Preston MLA Mick Murray announced the Western Australian Government has delivered $2.7 million to WesTrac and Bluewaters Farm Holdings to help get the trailblazing initiative off the ground.

The initiative is the latest investment in the McGowan Government's $20 million Collie Futures Fund, aimed at diversifying Collie's economy and creating jobs.

Australia's first Volvo EW160E is proving vital for AME Civil Contracting

Queensland company AME Civil Contracting is using Volvo Construction Equipment (Volvo CE) excavators for infrastructure projects in Australia. The customised excavator helps the company with detailed excavation projects.

AME Civil Contracting is the first in Australia to add a customised EW160E wheeled excavator from Volvo CE to its fleet, which also includes a Volvo ECR145C excavator. The EW160E offers a range of attachments for a wide range of configurations to offer flexibility in application.

To efficiently carry out detailed excavation works, AME customised the excavator with GPS so it can excavate based on models and plans.

"Our dealer CJD Equipment helped us customise the machine from the factory so it's a perfect fit for our niche type of construction work," says AME managing director Mick Schmidt.

"Instead of single tyres, we also customised it with dual tyres, so it doesn't damage the roadwork, plus it provides more manoeuvrability on job sites."

Above: AME Civil Contracting is the first in Australia to add a customized EW160E wheeled excavator from Volvo CE to its fleet

> It's a perfect fit for our niche type of construction work.

EW160E CUSTOMISED

The EW160E was also customised with a wider undercarriage of 2,750mm. The standard EW160E is equipped with a Volvo D6J engine that delivers up to 115kW gross power and has maximum digging reach of 9.3m.

The EW160E also offers a wide range of boom and arm options to expand its capabilities. The grapple manoeuvrer connection on the wheeled excavator enables easy exchange of tools.

On the EW160E, oil is redirected directly to the attachment instead of going to the cylinder, which enables the operator to steer the attachment with the right-hand joystick.

AME Civil Contracting purchased its fleet of Volvo machines from CJD Equipment, Volvo CE's long-time dealer partner in Australia.

HARD AT WORK

For AME, the EW160E works an average of nine hours daily and excavates up to 60 tons per hour on projects like highway upgrades, road replacements and bridge improvements. The EW160WE is typically used for detailed excavation works for road widening and pavement upgrades.

"The first day I drove the EW160E, I knew I had a spectacular machine in my hand," says Schmidt.

"When it comes to Volvo machines, I don't have to compromise on quality. The EW160E is everything I wanted – it is stable, delivers good fuel savings, functions very smoothly, ensures efficient operations. Plus, our operators love to drive the machines as they offer good visibility and is easy to operate."

Left: The excavators are often used to clear foliage and feed it into large-scale horizontal grinders

Savco Vegetation Services has a big machine fleet that is required to travel some big distances. It's all in a day's work for this busy family firm, aided by some of the company's latest additions to the frontline machine fleet: two new Hyundai excavators supplied by Porter Equipment

You can't talk about Ipswich-headquartered Savco Vegetation Services without mentioning some big numbers.

This family-run company – celebrating its 43rd year in business in 2020 – has grown to employ over 150 staff across no less than seven depot locations.

Despite the Queensland roots, Savco now has a foothold right across the east coast of the country, from Tumut, New South Wales in the south, to Rockhampton in the north and in various locations in between. All told, the company covers Queensland, New South Wales and Victoria comprehensively, representing an impressive growth trajectory since Les Savige founded the firm in 1977.

Specialising in rural vegetation services including powerline and gas pipeline clearance, land clearance and shelterbelt and hedge trimming, the distinct through-line with each Savco site is its rural setting, servicing the needs of local landowners and councils.

The distances the company's field teams often travel in the course of a day's work can be massive.

Want another big number? The company runs a fleet of over 150 machines. Because of the nature of the work, much of the gear is specialised to suit, including truck-mounted elevated work platforms, tractor slashers and purpose-built spray vehicles. Among all the industry-specific hardware, however, there remains room for a handful of conventional excavators.

Like all of our gear, we want to make sure we're buying good equipment.

www.portergroup.com.au

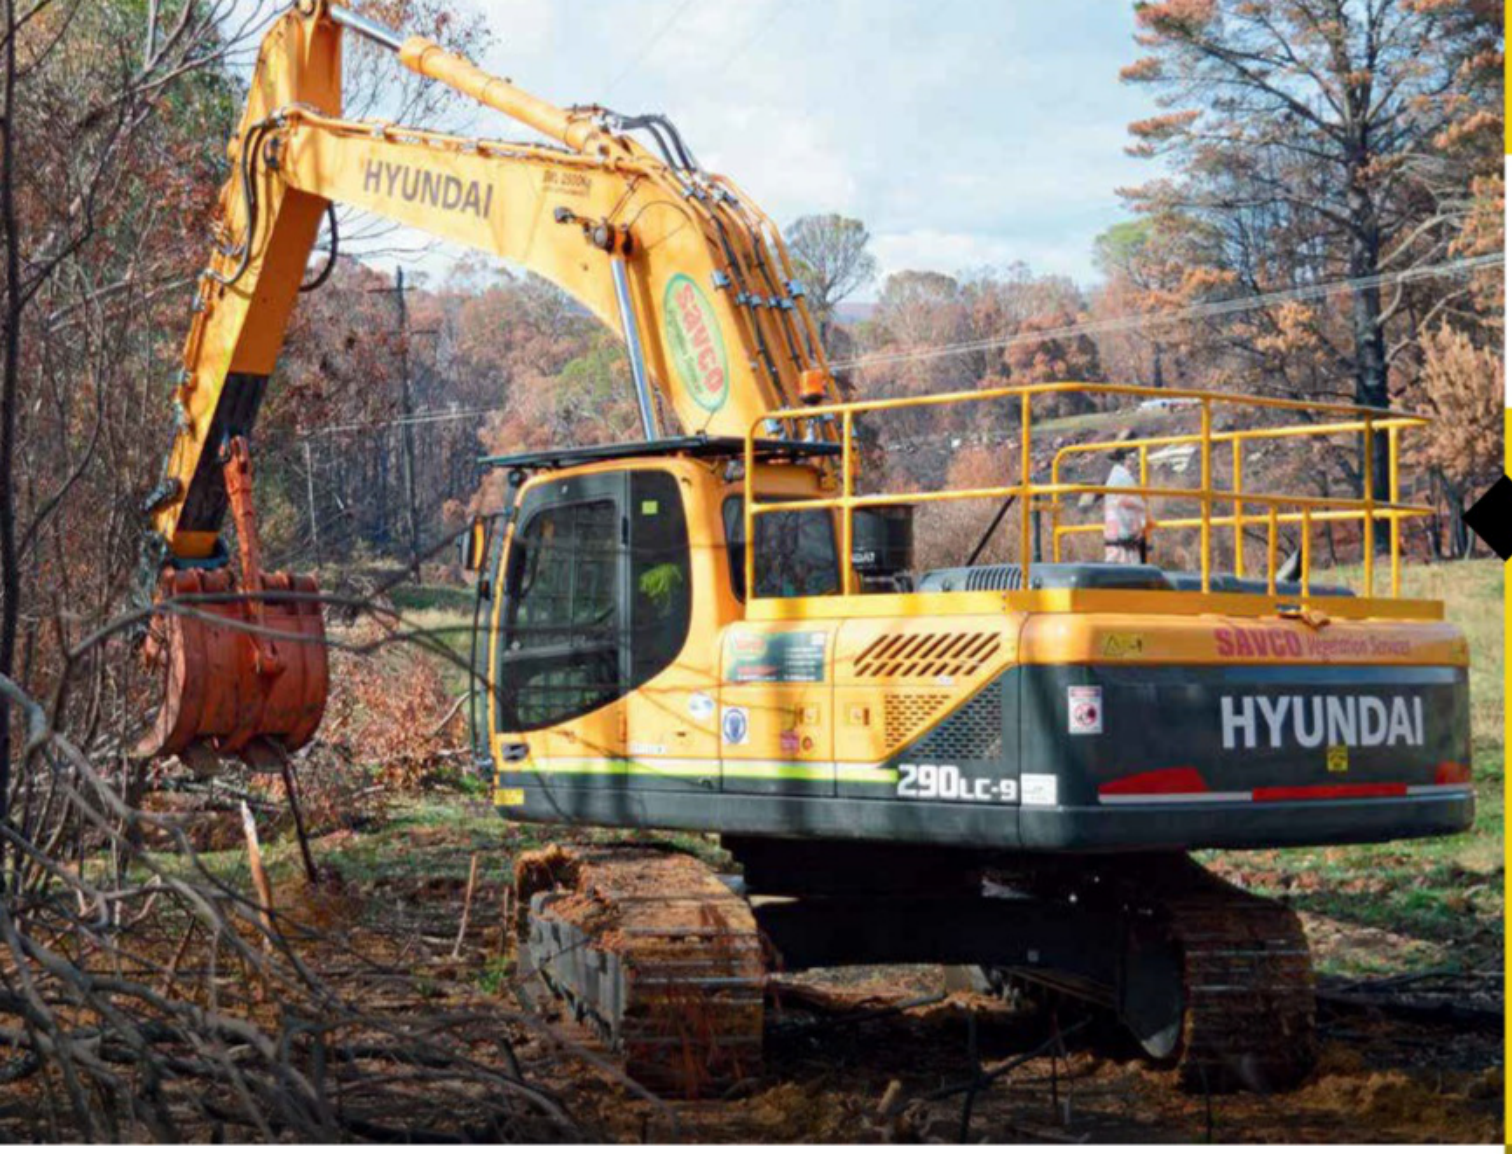
"Our excavator fleet isn't big, but like all of our gear, we want to make sure we're buying good equipment," says Savco's Queensland manager Simon Savige.

"We have two Hyundai excavators supplied to us by Porter Equipment on the fleet: a 29-ton Hyundai R290LC-9, which replaced a similar-sized older machine, and an eight-ton Hyundai R80CR-9 mini digger, which we've brought in as an additional machine. We've been very pleased with the performance of both those machines."

Savige says he has been impressed with both the advice and assistance Porter Equipment were able to give his team when purchasing the machines, as well as the back-up service offering the distributor is well known for.

"Our depots are generally a fair way from a major town, so we will be relying on Porter Equipment's mobile servicing team when it comes time for those regular services to be completed. If they can come to us, that takes the pressure off our guys to get the individual machines to another point beyond wherever the job has already taken them.

"We already cover large areas, so to be able to schedule in with the Porter guys and say 'Yep, we're at this location today' and have them come to us, then that's great," says Savige.



PORTERGROUP

Far left bottom: Savco's Queensland manager Simon Savige says rehab work is a common project

Of the machines themselves, Savige is a big believer in sound endorsements from other operators.

"Look, it would be very easy to go and buy machines from brands that some might consider household names. But actually, when you do your research, Hyundai has got everything the other diggers have got; they've got the wide range of models, they've got the powerful engines, the spacious cabs – especially that 29-tonner, which is fantastic – and the built-in technology.

"I actually noticed a couple of big corporates investing in Hyundai equipment and you have to take note of that sort of thing. If they're going that way, then there has to be a good reason for it. So yeah, I think they're a strong machine and we're putting them through their paces now."

Savco Vegetation Services have plenty of work ahead of them in the wake of the devastating 2019/20 bush fires.

The Hyundai R290LC-9 is working in Batlow, on the edge of the Great Dividing Range between Canberra and Wagga Wagga, in some of the worst-affected hill country. Savige's brother, Anthony, is the company's New South Wales manager and will be overseeing this project, among many others nearby.

"We've been using the 29-tonner up there to clear out some pretty massive trees along the fire front.

"We're using it to mechanically fell damaged trees; some of them are over 80 years old, so they're of a decent size. You need to have a lot of hydraulic strength to complete that sort of work, and the guys tell me the Hyundai is working well," says Savige.

The scale of the fire damage aside, Savige says rehab work of this nature is a common project for the Savco team, and the excavators are often used to clear foliage and feed it into large-scale horizontal grinders.

Illustrating the breadth of scale involved when it comes to the combined regions Savco services, the Hyundai R80CR-9 is heading over 1,100km north, to help repair firebreak tracks in bushland near Chinchilla in Queensland's Western Downs, around two hours north-west of Toowoomba.

"The Hyundais are good machines with all the latest technology in them, and we got them for a good price, so I'm happy with that," Simon concludes.

And there's no truer assertion than that, regardless of where you are in the country.

> I actually noticed a couple of big corporates investing in Hyundai equipment.

Screenmasters has recently introduced its range of bespoke crushers, screens and conveyors into the marketplace, purpose built for the Australian conditions

With the harsh climate and vast distances faced in Australia, Screenmasters machines are designed with five principles in mind: simple to use, reliability, productivity, fuel-efficient and low maintenance/wear costs.

The new fleet includes the SMA1210 Impactor with 1,200mm diameter rotor with extra grinding and shaping path; SMA1150 cone crusher; SMA110J and SMA700 jaw crushers that are ideal for hard rock applications; SMA1860 20x6 scalping screen; SMA2600 20x5 incline screen and a range of 23m tracked mounted, radial and direct feed conveyors.

Unique changes and enhancements on these units include higher horsepower engines where needed, to increase production and lower fuel consumption and drive direct systems and load sensing hydraulics for lower running costs.

Screenmasters also highlights a new feeding system (step deck) for higher throughput, extended main conveyors, gear box drive on conveyors rather than pump for more torque and fewer blockages, oversize main drive bearings and shaft that are standard on the company's jaw crushers, limited automation and simple to use controls.

The machines also use hydraulic pipes in place of hoses, oversized hydraulic coolers and radiators, rip stop belts that last four times longer than standard belts, and 400mm-wide heavy duty tracks.

Community SUPPORT

Construction industry rallies to help families of heroes who died protecting our community

1. Industry members come out in force to support community causes
2. All concentration at the 2019 Diesel Dirt & Turf golf day
3. One for your calendar

> It's a great way to build networking with others in the industry and enjoying a great day while raising money for charity.

The National Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo is not only Australia's largest construction and earthmoving equipment expo, it's also a time when the industry meets, networks and experiences a great feeling of fellowship.

FUNDS FOR FAMILIES

Australia's disastrous fire season has seen much personal tragedy and when volunteer firefighters lose their own people in the line of duty, families are seriously impacted.

This year, all proceeds from the National Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo golf day will go directly to the families of Geoff Keaton and Andrew O'Dwyer, the two fire fighters from the Horsley Park Rural Fire Service and the family of Samuel McPaul of the Morven Rural Fire Brigade, who all lost their lives earlier this year.

TRADITION OF GIVING

Established in 2018, the Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo golf day has raised money for MIRAA House, a not-for-profit, learning and life skills centre that offers a post-school program for women with an intellectual disability.

In 2019, the golf day raised money for the Ovarian Cancer Research Foundation, sponsored by Digga Australia.

The 2020 Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo annual charity golf day is being held on Friday, March 20 at the championship Twin Creeks Golf and Country Club at Luddenham. Golf teams enjoy an early breakfast, followed by a putting competition with prizes before hitting off.

"It's a great way to build networking with others in the industry and enjoying a great day while raising money for charity," says expo manager Marti Zivkovich.

In addition to funds raised by the entry green fees, there is a raffle for amazing prizes, with loads of others to be won for nearest the pin, longest drive and more.

AN ANNUAL EVENT

Many people look forward to this national expo that continues to attract large crowds from the earthmoving, construction and related industries, their colleagues, associates and friends who come to check out the latest technology and special expo prices.

The dates for the 2020 National Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo are Friday, May 15 to Sunday, May 17.

This popular venue is conveniently located at the centre of Western Sydney. Entry to the Expo is free and there's plenty of free parking, lots of accommodation for people planning a visit over several days and easy access by freeway and public transport.

■ You can check out all the details of the 2020 National Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo by visiting www.dieseldirtandturf.com.au.

RAM OIL

The Ram 1500 Laramie V6 EcoDiesel isn't a shrinking violet by any means, but it also comes with an impressive fuel consumption and unfussy performance. Dean Mellor put it through its paces

There's no doubt the V6 EcoDiesel is the pick of the range for those who need to travel long distances between fuel stops.

Eats utes for breakfast, drinks fuel like a sailor? Well, not quite, because when we tested the 5.7-litre Hemi V8 that exclusively powered the Ram 1500 pick-up until now, it proved surprisingly frugal … for a huge petrol donk, that is. But with the recent release of the Ram 1500 Laramie V6 EcoDiesel to the Australian market, you can now have your big slice of American pie and eat it too.

Sure, some of the charm of driving around in a Ram 1500 is the fact it has a stonking great V8 under the 'hood' that pumps out a more-than-handy 291kW (395hp in the old language), but for those who can live without that top-end poke and the sweet V8 soundtrack, the new 3.0-litre V6 diesel engine is a more-than-worthy Ram powerplant.

POWERTRAIN AND PERFORMANCE

The EcoDiesel is essentially the same VM Motori three-litre V6 turbo-diesel engine that powers other FCA products including Jeep Grand Cherokee, and the obvious benefit in choosing the oiler over the petrol V8 is the former's better fuel economy, which brings much greater touring range – no doubt attractive to those who intend to tow a 'van and the like over long distances.

This diesel is no one-trick pony; as well as impressive fuel economy it also packs a decent punch in the torque stakes, producing a meaty 569Nm at 2,000rpm. By contrast, the Hemi V8 only makes 556Nm at a considerably higher 3,950rpm. Yep, for those who have heavy loads to carry and/or big trailers to haul, the EcoDiesel suddenly starts to make a lot of sense.

Like all Ram 1500s, the V6 EcoDiesel is an auto-only proposition, scoring the same eight-speed TorqueFlite transmission as the Hemi V8, with the same gear ratios. Even the final-drive ratio is the same 3.92:1 offered with the Hemi V8 for those who want a 4,500kg towing capacity, but in the case of the EcoDiesel the maximum braked towing capacity is limited to the class-average 3,500kg.

For the record, the third option in the Ram 1500 line-up is the Hemi V8 with a taller 3.21:1 final drive ratio, and like the EcoDiesel this model has a 3,500kg towing capacity.

The Ram 1500 runs a selectable on-demand full-time 4x4 system operated via small buttons on the dash below the gear-selector dial, allowing the driver to choose between 2WD, 4WD Auto, 4WD Lock and 4WD Low.

At $109,950, the Ram 1500 Laramie 3.0L V6 EcoDiesel doesn't come cheap – that's a full $10K more than the equivalent Hemi V8 1500 Laramie – but like its petrol-powered stablemate it's packed with creature comforts and standard equipment.

The Ram 1500 Laramie is also a lot of ute for the money, measuring 5,817mm long and 2,017mm wide, with a long 3,569mm wheelbase.

And while its relatively modest 735kg payload doesn't match dual-cabs like the Ranger or Hilux, the Ram's tub is enormous at 1,712mm long, 1,687mm wide and a full 1,295mm between the wheel arches.

Above: Ask it the question and it answers with linear acceleration, pulling all the way from idle to the 4,500rpm redline

ON-ROAD RIDE AND HANDLING

Climb aboard the Ram 1500 and fire up the engine and one of the first things you notice is just how quiet it is. There's no diesel clatter at idle and even a blip on the throttle results in a muffled response. There's no doubt about it: the V6 oiler is one of the smoothest turbo-diesel engines around, and the Ram adds to this feeling of refinement thanks to an abundance of sound-deadening material that ensures the cabin is whisper quiet, even at freeway speeds. Sure, there's a hint of wind noise around the mirrors, but it's nothing too intrusive, and road noise is also well-suppressed.

Performance isn't what you'd call scintillating, but the V6 EcoDiesel Ram ain't no slouch either. Ask it the question and it answers with linear acceleration, pulling all the way from idle to the 4,500rpm redline, where the auto will smoothly grab another gear that sees the Ram continue on its way. You need to keep an eye on the speedo on the open road because the unfussed and quiet way in which the Ram goes about its business could soon see you exceed the speed limit without realising it.

Like most of the dual-cab 4x4 utes on the market the Ram 1500 has independent front suspension, but you won't find leaf springs on its live-axle rear-end; instead there's a live-axle with coil springs, which no doubt aids the impressive unladen ride quality. Even as road surfaces deteriorate the Ram remains composed and predictable, with the electric power-assisted steering offering good feel and feedback.

You could be forgiven for thinking a vehicle this big wouldn't be much chop on crook secondary backroads, but again it surprises with its impressive ride quality and assured handling. Push it through corners and it holds its line nicely with minimal body roll, and it doesn't get unsettled by minor mid-corner steering corrections.

For those who want a turbo-diesel Ram 1500 Laramie, the wait is finally over.

Those big 20-inch rims wear 275/60R20 Hankook Dynapro HT tyres that offer a reasonable sidewall, which no doubt aids ride quality; on the road the tyres provide plenty of grip and surefootedness when cornering, without generating too much noise. They also work well on gravel roads, and slipping the Ram into 4WD Auto ensures there's plenty of traction on slippery road surfaces.

If you're used to driving a dual-cab ute, the Ram 1500 won't feel all that big when driving around town … until you try to park it, that is. Yep, it's certainly long, so you'll need to choose your parking spaces wisely. However, a decent steering lock results in an acceptable 12.1m turning circle, and deep windows and big mirrors aid outward visibility.

Claimed fuel consumption is an impressive 11.9L/100km and (unusually) we bettered that on test, recording an impressive average of 9.6L/100km over 800km of commuting, highway, freeway and backroad touring, as well as a modicum of sand driving – when you consider the Ram 1500's size and its brick-outhouse aerodynamics, that's some seriously impressive fuel economy. By comparison, when we recently tested a Ram 1500 Hemi V8 with the same 3.92:1 final drive ratio, it recorded 17.6L/100km.

With a generous 98-litre fuel tank, the diesel Ram should do a shade over 1,000km between refills compared to just over 550km for the petrol model.

The third Ram 1500 Laramie option – the Hemi V8 with a taller 3.21:1 final drive ratio – has a claimed combined fuel consumption figure of just 9.9L/100km. However, a real-world figure would likely be closer to 14L/100km unless most of your driving was on the freeway, so there's no doubt the V6 EcoDiesel is the pick of the range for those who need to travel long distances between fuel stops.

OFF-ROAD

With limited approach and ramp-over angles, off-road performance is not the Ram 1500's forte, but having said that, it has reasonable ground clearance and vital underbody components are tucked up and out of harm's way, as well as protected by a series of crossmembers and bash plates.

Not wanting to damage the unprotected sills (side-steps are optional on this model) we took it pretty easy off-road, with a run along some soft river sand and a few rough bush tracks. Even with tyre pressures dropped to 16psi, the Ram wasn't all that happy in the sand with the transmission left in Drive, as it wanted to upshift too early, resulting in a loss of momentum. Manually shifting using the buttons on the steering wheel improves sand performance markedly, but there's no getting away from the fact that this is a big, heavy truck with a hefty 2,715kg kerb weight.

Despite the limited off-road angles, the Ram offers decent wheel travel up front and impressive axle articulation at the rear, and if you exceed that, the electronic traction control works well at arresting wheel spin despite the road-oriented highway-terrain tyres. Low-range gearing is excellent, with an overall reduction in first gear of 48.7:1.

CABIN AND ACCOMMODATION

There's plenty of space inside the Ram 1500, but taller drivers might find head room a bit tight and the driver's footwell is cramped due to an intrusive transmission hump. The driver's seat offers a good range of power adjustment and nice lumbar support; there's pedal adjustment and the steering wheel offers tilt (but no reach) adjustment. The front seats are heated and ventilated, while the rear seats offer heating only. The generous cabin means there's plenty of storage throughout including a wide centre console with large bins, double glovebox, and a number of 12V power outlets and USB ports.

You'll easily fit three adults across the rear seat, and they'll all be pleasantly surprised by the leg room on offer, as well as the rear air-conditioning vents. The split rear seat bases fold up with pullout platforms that provide a flat load area, so if you haven't filled the rear with occupants you'll be able to stow large items behind the front seats.

The conversion from left-hand drive to right-hand drive by the Walkinshaw Group has been very well executed, with important controls such as the gear selector and 4WD selector shifted across to the driver's side for ease of access. There's plenty of black leather and trim throughout, but this is contrasted by silver and faux woodgrain trim pieces and a light grey roof lining, which adds to an overall feeling of spaciousness. Fit and finish isn't perfect, with a couple of loose trim pieces on our test vehicle, but it's pretty damn good.

In addition to the massive centre console, other cabin highlights include the bright 8.4-inch colour touchscreen with Apple CarPlay/Android Auto, the seven-inch multi-view instrument cluster and the awesome Alpine sound system. A power tilt/slide sunroof and opening rear window are also standard Laramie-spec items.

PRACTICALITIES

While it only has a 735kg payload capacity, the Ram's tub will appeal to those carrying large items. The tub comes with a spray-in bedliner and has four cargo tie-down points in the corners of the tub's floor. The big tailgate features assistance so it's not nearly as heavy to operate as you'd expect, and it locks with the remote key fob. Standard load-tray illumination is another handy feature, and a soft tonneau cover and heavy-duty tow bar are offered as optional accessories.

When it comes to vehicle recovery, there are two big recovery points up front and, with a 50mm hitch at the rear of our test vehicle, the usual variety of rated recovery receivers can be used.

The Ram 1500 Laramie features most of the other stuff you'd expect to find on a high-end vehicle such as remote keyless entry, dual-zone climate control air-conditioning, Bluetooth connect, fog lights, cruise control, heated door mirrors, parking sensors, reversing camera, tyre pressure monitoring system, rain-sensing wipers, auto headlights (and auto high beam) and more.

On the safety front the Ram 1500 Laramie scores driver and front passenger airbags, and front seat side and curtain airbags; traction, stability and trailer sway control; electronic brake force distribution; hill start assist; and three child seat anchors.

SUMMARY

The 3.0L V6 EcoDiesel will be the Ram 1500 Laramie many buyers have been waiting for, and it certainly doesn't disappoint in either the economy or performance stakes; but at $10K more than the petrol Hemi V8 equivalent, you probably wouldn't buy it for the fuel economy advantage alone.

The V6 EcoDiesel's trump cards are its far superior touring range, it's abundance of low-rpm torque and its surprising refinement.

On the downside, the V6 EcoDiesel can't match the Hemi V8's optional 4,500kg towing capacity, and at 735kg its payload is 65kg less than its petrol-powered sibling; but if you've been hanging out for the oiler, you certainly won't be disappointed.

If you're after a full-size turbo-diesel American pick-up that's backed by a three-year/100,000km warranty, the Ram 1500 Laramie 3.0L V6 EcoDiesel is a worthy contender.

cutting edge CAT

Displaying grace and precision, this D6T XL Caterpillar dozer was making short work of a macadamia plantation when Ron Horner checked it out

Tucked away in a little town just out of Ballina on the NSW north coast is where I caught up with Steve Hammond from Hammond Earthmoving, the very proud owner of a 2012 model D6T Caterpillar dozer.

I had worked alongside this bloke on a very difficult project at Urunga where the team completed the rehabilitation of an abandoned antimony mine for the NSW government.

The job was so successful it won the NSW Earth Award for its category and made the finals of the Australian Earth Awards in 2017.

So, when Hammond rang and said he had bought a new dozer and was knee deep in building a macadamia plantation in his home town region, I just had to go and investigate both the machine and the site.

WALKAROUND

I tracked down Hammond and his dozer in the back blocks some kilometres off the beaten track west of the Pacific Highway, working on some magnificent, rich alluvial soil flats.

Greeting me with his trademark huge smile and handshake, Hammond pointed to a fully decked out 4,000hr, 2012 model D6T dozer (which could have passed for being brand new) idling away in the middle of a set of windrows.

Fitted to it was a set of V-shaped blades attached to the rippers and a rarely seen power-angle tilt (PAT) blade attached to the front, with the machine fitted with a Trimble GPS system. This little tractor was certainly built for a specific purpose and I was keen to get my bum in the seat just to see what could be done with it.

UNDER THE HOOD

Crawling up onto the Hi-Track walking gear to access the engine bay is only an issue if you are limited to one leg as there has been a re-design on the steps and handles to make climbing on and off the tractor easier.

Access to the engine via the keyless and hinged side covers is perfect and they stop or minimise the dust and other material that tends to congregate in the old-style open engine bay machines.

As always, it surprises me the small amount of room taken up by the engine in the Cat dozers but this model is fitted with all of the anti-pollution gear made to man (e.g., Cat clean emissions module), which would be a nightmare for a basic owner/operator to complete any minor in-chassis engine works.

Running the Cat C9.3 ACERT turbo charged engine pushing out about 170kW (230hp) at approximately 1,800rpm gets this little tractor up and running whilst delivering plenty of power for all the jobs one could intend to throw at it.

IN THE CABIN

Once in the seat, one could not be anything other than impressed with the comfort and visibility from the cab.

This cabin is isolation-mounted, which reduces vibration and noise whilst operating the little tractor in rough conditions, however in this application of topsoil shaping there is definitely a sense of eerie quiet.

The air-ride seat is spot on and the built in side arrestor arm rests are designed to help keep the operator in place and supported whenever exposed to traversing the steep side slopes this dozer is capable of handling.

The tapered shape of the cabin and hood ensures perfect vision to the blade and current work area. Combine this with the notched fuel tanks at the rear and the operator is in total control of their surroundings, with excellent views to the rippers and radical twin-blades attached to this particular machine.

The PAT blade extends some distance outside the track frame and makes it easy for the operator to take full control on the cutting and trimming capabilities of this machine. Any thoughts of the balance being compromised with the blades being fitted to the rear are definitely dismissed once work commences.

Typical Cat controls and slightly modified dash layout add to this already impressive list on this D6T dozer.

ON THE JOB

I must say, I am a touch biased when it comes to Caterpillar dozers and have a distinct liking for the D6 models from all eras.

No disappointment here – this dozer excels at balance, vision, comfort and performance. However, it was the V-shaped twin grading blades that had me intrigued and in need of assistance from Hammond to run me through the finer points of operation.

These were designed to cut the centres between the windrows of the macadamia plantation during construction.

After the GPS has been set, the PAT blade is angled and used to push up a perfectly straight windrow the full length of the cut whilst working one way, then pushed the opposite way whilst on the return trip.

The Cat grader is then used to rip the windrow centres prior to the D6T XL commencing its next move.

The V blades are then utilised to further cut and trim to grade the centres of those windrows and the spoil is then shaped to perfection with the use of the grader in its final trimming operation.

What we have at the end are rows upon rows of perfectly cut, placed and positioned GPS-controlled windrows ready for planting those beautiful macadamia nut trees Australia is renowned for.

This little tractor is factory fitted with the Cat GCR (grade control ready) function, which allows for easy installation of the Trimble GPS system prior to delivery, or for a relatively easy on-site fitment.

The variable PAT blade (which is optional) allows the operator to hydraulically adjust the blade lift, angle and tilt simultaneously using the ergonomically designed hand/blade control lever.

Not for every dozer owner or application, but to me this is like a tilting attachment on a digger – perfect for this job.

What we have at the end are rows upon rows of perfectly cut, placed and positioned GPS-controlled windrows.

IT'S A WRAP

Although owning another brand of dozer for a short period, the Cat brand sticks pretty close to the Hammond family.

In his shed is housed a 1966 Caterpillar D6C dozer that Hammond proudly boasts of as being only its second owner.

Seeing the technological advancements in the D6 models over a 50-year period is difficult to comprehend, especially if you are my age when I cut my teeth on running the old girls (even back to cable blade operation).

Asked what his likes and dislikes were of this particular dozer, the compliments came fast and furious from Hammond, although there were a few small issues that only a fastidious owner/operator would complain about.

The amount of anti-pollution gear mounted to the engine is definitely a 'new-age' requirement but to old school blokes whom are a bit handy, it amounts to a 'look but don't touch' approach. With this in mind you need to have a good back up plan and that's where you call on the Westrac Service crew to help out. Hammond reckons it's a game changer when you buy any earthmoving gear and would be lost without the Coffs Harbour and Alstonville Westrac depots.

The other issue is a simple as a 'design out' or 're-design in' problem.

Hammond reckons the grated step prior to entering the cabin is poorly designed as the dust collects on it and when you open the cabin door the accumulated dust blows in and dirties the interior. A simple solution would be to make the grated mesh with larger diameter holes to allow the material to fall back onto the elevated track frame.

If I know Westrac, Hastings Deering and William Adams they will be right onto this, but that is how I run here. Reviews without fear or favour and spoken from the heart of the operators and owners.

then till now

Since entering the Australian market in the 1960s, Kato has been a staple of the industry. With fond memories of the 'good old days' of earthmoving, Ron Horner goes back in time to his first Kato machine

The time is fast approaching where all things relevant to the earthmoving industry is back on display.

The National Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo (DD&T) will once again be held at Penrith Panthers Exhibition and Trade Centre on Mulgoa Road Penrith from May 15 to 17 inclusive; an event one cannot afford to miss.

Not only will you get to meet up with old mates, co-workers, sales representatives and personalities, but you will also get to discuss the most important technological advancements made in machinery this last year, sit your bum in them, discuss financing, watch some very talented demonstrators take the machines through their paces, make comparisons to other models, broaden your views on certain brands of equipment, learn of the history of some manufacturers and maybe, just maybe, find a real old school gem brought out of a museum just to appease us old blokes.

At last year's DD&T I found a 40-year-old excavator, bought out of the museum and placed on display beside the newest and most technical advanced current model of the day. Being totally taken in by the display, it slowly brought back some very good memories of a time long past.

> All excavators, irrespective of the brand, were commonly known not as excavators, but as a Kato.

KATO EXCAVATORS

Thiess Bros changed the direction of Australia's earthmoving industry when it brought the first of the Kato excavators into the country in the early 1960s – in my extremely biased opinion, the most significant point in Australia's excavator history. Within a couple of years, Kato was flooding the market and even when Thiess Kato sold out to HC Sleigh (Banbury Engineering), the market share soared to an unbelievable 80 per cent of sales of all excavators in the Australian market.

So popular were Kato excavators at that time that all excavators, irrespective of the brand, were commonly known not as excavators, but as a Kato.

I was extremely fortunate to be on a major pipeline project in the early/mid '70s, engaged as an excavator operator, and had formed a deep, lifelong passion for them, but my favourite just happened to be the Kato models.

Having ran a US-built Warner Swasey 700A Hopto, a German-built 1702 Atlas, a Kato 1100G and the only Kato 1500G in Australia at that time, my love affair never waned and my passion has only developed (some may say) into an obsession, but I offer no apologies.

I was perhaps very lucky to be around at that particular time when opportunities arose for someone to push excavators into the construction industry and to have faith in their real worth as a construction tool.

Dirt moving equipment used included scrapers, dozers, loaders and trucks, but excavators? No way. It took us a good 10 years to convince the industry of the benefits of excavators.

Excavators were deemed only suitable for digging a trench with the only one-sized bucket available at purchase. There was no quick hitch, no attachments, no air conditioning, no radio and no creature comforts, but it did have a cab.

PIONEERING DAYS

There were a growing number of contractors that could see the true potential of excavators, I was just fortunate to be one, and I purchased my first of about 25 Kato excavators way back in 1977 and promptly fitted the first ever hydraulic rock breaker in Australia (Krupp 200) to an old, clapped out, ex-Thiess Kato 350G, Perkins diesel, chain drive excavator for works in a railway tunnel project for British Rail.

Now the idea was right, the price was right, the job was right but the machine was not. Just a week into the job I knew that this was not going to work in my favour so I traded the old girl in for a brand new 550G Kato, fully hydraulic with a new Krupp 600 hammer attached to the end of the stick and, just like Thiess Bros, the rest is history.

Generating unbelievable interest within the very close knit earthmoving industry at the time, I was able to demonstrate this and many more Kato excavators to the public on behalf of Banbury Engineering (Kato dealers) and after almost 45 years, I am still demonstrating.

WORLD OF MOTOR SPORT

The industry has a huge input into and reaches many sectors of the community.

An extremely close relationship was formed with Banbury at that time, so much so that a mate of mine and fellow petrol head and Kato fleet owner Paul Jones and I bought Alan Moffat's Chevy Monza (ex-Daytona) off him in 1980. We approached Banbury for sponsorship and Kato became the first ever full time earthmoving sponsors of an iconic national Australian motor racing car.

Unbeknown to me at the time, this was to lead me into the world of touring cars and the 1982 James Hardie 1000 at Bathurst.

The Kato sponsorship opened the door for not only Horner Kato but for Caterpillar, Komatsu, Kubota, John Deere, JCB and Kobelco to become actively involved as sponsors of the upcoming next generation of Australian Racing car drivers, namely John Bowe (Caterpillar), Alan Jones (Komatsu) and current TA2 racers Steve and Michael Coulter (Kobelco), Hugh McAllister and Matthew MacKelden (Kubota), just to name a few.

HISTORY ON SHOW

My days of reflection were all bought about by my visit to the Kato stand at the 2019 DD&T. Australian Hammer Supplies out of Ingleburn (Sydney) not only are suppliers of Kubota equipment but also import the Kato brand of excavators into Australia.

Sitting pride of place beside the current model Kato MR HD514 was its predecessor, a 1979 model KATO 550G just out of Australian Hammer Supplies' Museum, fitted with a Krupp 600 Hammer.

The brand that changed the Australian excavator industry – still going strong decades later.

My old heart attack symptoms of palpitations, irregular heartbeat and sweating all returned to me in a flash. "Could this be the old Kato 550G I reviewed and demonstrated in Lithgow some years before?" If so, there is a story to be told here.

Bruce Pennells, owner of Australian Hammer Supplies, confirmed that this machine was indeed the same Kato 550G from George Pearce of Lithgow, who still had the original sales receipt from 1980.

If that's not enough to get one's mind going, this receipt is signed by Bruce Pennells as the sales representative for Banbury Engineering when he worked selling Kato Excavators way back then. Now, the very same machine, in extremely good trade-in condition, has found its way back into the possession of not only the sales rep but the Kato distributor.

Freshly out of the paint shop and with a tidy up, this old girl took the shine off the newest Kato to hit the market.

It was such a trip back in history to see just what technological changes have been incorporated into 40 years of Kato manufacturing, as both machines weigh in at about the 14 ton mark and can hold a bucket at the end of the dipper arm, though that's about all.

The good old days of sitting in a machine fitted with a cabin (bonus in those days), hopping out of the cabin to drive pins out to change the hammer/bucket (no quick hitches), no heating, air conditioning or demisters, no radio or tape/CD deck, apple box seating lacking adjustments (steel seating in cable operated machines at that time) and having impeded vision at most angles (no reverse cameras) all started to come back to mind.

As I gave myself a quick uppercut and attitude adjustment, I wandered over to the new Kato MR HD514 and placed my bum in the comfortable air ride fully adjustable operator's seat, turned on the super quiet Isuzu engine, the air conditioning and radio, checked out the huge monitor screen, played with the blade control perfectly located to the right of the operator – and suddenly the young man's reflections of the good old days suddenly deserted me.

My aging body sitting in this comfortable excavator cabin with all of the mod cons of today is where I belong. Those good old days were exactly that … but at last my body has encouraged my mind to be a bit more realistic because today is so much better.

As I sat in the new 2019 Kato MR HD514 and looked out the window towards the old 1979 Kato 550G I realised that excavators have been such an important part of my life, filled with creativity, hard slog, long shifts, heartache, a millionaire or broke, brilliant projects and some we'd like to forget, but what I remember most of all is a lifetime of friendships formed.

Could this be the old Kato 550G I reviewed and demonstrated in Lithgow some years before?

THE PLACE TO DREAM

Visiting field days and getting into excavators when I was younger put me on the path to where I am today. From big ideas and a humble beginning almost anything is achievable in Australia and Kato certainly played a big part in the path I took in life.

Maybe there are a couple of young blokes out there with such dreams and aspirations … it can all start with something as simple as a visit to a field day.

Book yourself and your kids to visit the 2020 Diesel Dirt & Turf Expo – you just never know what long lost friends you could catch up with and you may even help plant the seed in the mind of an aspiring earthmover and make some new friends along the way.

Why …. you may just happen to learn a thing or two in the process.

on the block

Adam Scharer and Michael Hayes, the duo behind the launch of Hilco Global's Australasian arm, talk about their journey so far and plans for the future. Anjali Behl writes

Commercial asset valuation and disposal company Hilco Global has been in Australia since 2011. Back then it was focused around distressed retail, where it helped in the disposal of goods for companies that were involved with retail gear selling out of shops.

Later, it set up a valuation practice, helping to evaluate plant machinery or businesses that were buying other businesses.

In July 2019, Adam Scharer and Michael Hayes teamed up with Hilco Global and Macquarie Bank to launch Hilco Global Australasia, an industrial and commercial asset valuation and disposal company that specialises in online auctions and negotiated sales within Australia and South East Asia.

Working with businesses in transport, manufacturing, earthmoving, agriculture, mining and construction industries, Scharer and Hayes, who are the chief executive officer and chief operating officer respectively, are building a marketplace for new and used equipment that is driven through auction and negotiated sale.

> We've launched an auction platform – www.hilcoapac.com – to sell a wide range of gear.

"We've launched an auction platform – www.hilcoapac.com – to sell a wide range of gear, ranging from trucks and transport equipment, and equipment for construction, civil, mining and agriculture," Scharer says. "We've also got a big salvage part of the business that deals with the after effects of fire and flood. We also deal with some consumer equipment."

Scharer and Hayes saw a gap in the market where, although there are quite a few businesses that help move gear locally, there wasn't a global platform based in Australia for industrial gear to be moved across different countries. With that aim they set out to build a global marketplace where gear could be moved from where it was not needed to where it could be.

Hilco Global Australasia works with a wide range of clients.

"We work with big corporates, small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), owners and operators, and clients who are downsizing, upscaling or refreshing fleet," Hayes says.

"We also work with banks and insolvency companies, helping move the assets for them in cases where there has been a shutdown of a business that they are dealing with. So basically we deal with everyone and everything – from an ongoing, regular, repeat vendor through to one-off corporate closures."

THE JOURNEY

Hayes and Scharer's friendship goes back three decades. Coming from different educational backgrounds – Scharer from an engineering side while Hayes specialised in accounting and law, they both started working with GraysOnline in the early 1990s.

Scharer worked with GraysOnline for nearly 25 years, starting in catalogue sales and gradually moving up to managing its auction business, during which time the company was floated on the Australian Stock Exchange. Meanwhile, Hayes ran GraysOnline's consumer and building materials division in New Zealand. Five years ago he set up his own auction solutions company.

Scharer's expertise in advisory asset monetisation and Hayes' expertise in auction salvage, combined with their vision to launch a global industrial marketplace and auction platform led them to launch Hilco APAC. "An idea became a company that it is today," Hayes says with a smile.

PARTNERSHIP

To establish the business they partnered with Hilco Global and Macquarie Bank who, they say, were both excited by the opportunity of being part of the global platform.

"Hilco is the best in class internationally but they don't have a presence in Australia and they only have a couple of people in South-East Asia. So we liked that geographical fit," Scharer says.

"We liked Macquarie Bank because they finance and own a lot of assets across the globe and they needed a platform to offer their clients access to new markets.

"So we liked this combination where we had our geography and team, Macquarie wanting something to sell their gear through, and then Hilco that are best internationally but weren't represented down here in that industrial area."

Currently, Hilco Global Australasia has offices in Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide and Brisbane, with a new office opening in Perth in early 2020. It also has offices in Singapore and a new office opening in Philippines and Indonesia each in January 2020.

FLEXIBLE FINANCIAL AND SALES OPTIONS

Being a part of the Hilco Global brand means Hilco Global Australasia can offer flexible financial and sales options to its clients in the heavy equipment and mining industries, including outright purchase of assets, guarantees or commission structures.

"Our aim is to help those companies find equipment that they're looking for, help them sell equipment they no longer need and we'd offer a variety of tailored solutions for them. So some clients can say 'I'd like to sell this equipment and get what I get for it', others could offer us to buy their equipment because they want money

Opposite: Hilco Global Australasia was launched by Adam Scharer and Michael Hayes in 2019. They are building a marketplace for new and used equipment sold via auction and negotiated sale in a hurry, and there could be other clients who could say 'With all this equipment can you give me a guaranteed result?' and if it goes better, everyone benefits," Scharer says.

FUTURE PLANS

"With the government bringing forward more infrastructure spending, a lot of people will be looking to upgrade and invest into buying new gear for their contracts and that's where we can help them. We can help those clients sell their older gear without hassle," Scharer says.

In December 2019, Hilco APAC had its first major auction for an Adelaide-based transport company, selling a range of used equipment and fleet including prime movers, trailers, tipper trucks and other equipment.

One of the challenges for the company as it continues to find new deals would be to continuously find buyers to keep its supply and demand in check.

"One of the ways to manage this is to have a strong website so people can easily find what they're looking for," Scharer says. As a result, their current focus is on developing a strong website that offers good user experience. At this early stage of business their second focus is on supporting their team to prepare for the growth that they both anticipate in the near future.

"In the next year we plan to build our Australian presence, have an office in Indonesia and Philippines, and connect our Australian website (Hilco APAC) to markets in Singapore, Indonesia and Philippines. And in the year after that we plan build a global platform by connecting this website to Hilco Europe, South America and North America, thereby allowing people to source products from offshore or selling specialised gear to new international markets," Scharer says.

The idea is to have a website that is multi-lingual, multi-cultural and a multi-currency platform.

"The idea is to have a website that is multi-lingual, multi-cultural and a multi-currency platform where we see opportunities where there's product in other regions to move to Australia or vice-versa. The long-term plan is to have a multi-national platform for marketplace and auction," Hayes says.

"When we came up with the concept of building this business we thought it was very important to not just be a local participant but to open up new markets for clients that weren't previously available," Scharer says.

"There is also that sustainability aspect where if there is a piece of equipment that's no longer needed here, rather than sending it to landfill we can help find a new home for it in a different country where it can be put to use."

Their five-year plan is to set up offices in all Australian capital cities and develop strong relationships with companies within those industries.

Before the launch of Hilco APAC, Hilco's global arm had a small footprint in Australia that was run by a team of three. Since July 2019, the team has expanded to 30. Every person in the team has been hand-picked by Scharer and Hayes.

"We have brilliant partners, we have the best in the breed of people working with us, and we know we can do it. We just want to take things slowly and calmly as we set out to achieve our goals," Hayes says.

"There are limitless opportunities out there. We are working on what our priorities are, and managing efficient job-sharing.

"Adam and I have been friends for 30 years so there's a really good open line for communication, certainly a lot of learning but we're up for the challenge. It's a very exciting experience for both of us."

WATERJET CUTTING

QUALITY & PERFORMANCE

MADE IN EUROPE

The JEKRAN XM series Waterjet is rich with technology but at the same time extremely user friendly, The X-MW series machines are equipped with many standard features such as built-in material databases, variable soft piercing function for brittle materials, auto garnet delivery system and laser light sheet positioning assistance to name a few. The powerhouse of the X-MW machine is the German built direct drive pump which outputs 3,800bar / 55,000psi at 100% duty cycle whilst maintaining unrivalled energy savings. These machines are manufactured in Europe and are unbelievably good value.

CNC Control

The CNC controller is a 15" Industrial Touch panel which has been ergonomically designed for users in both standing and sitting positions. Using large icon based intuitive CNC software, most operators can be well conversant in using the machine with a single day of training.
The CNC and accompanying offline software accept DXF, SVG, HPGL, Vector files as well as G-Code files. Auto nesting of parts can be achieved for material sheet utilisation.

Energy Efficiency

The variable speed directly driven pumps on the X-MW series distinguish themselves in comparison to intensifier pumps with a much higher degree of power efficiency of up to 30% more efficient than intensifier pumps.

Material Database

The material database makes the machine suitable for any user. Cutting parameters are all stored in the CNC and loaded accordingly. This means that correct parameters and cutting configuration is always set and an optimum cut is guaranteed.

Bulk Garnet Delivery System

Equipped with a PLC controlled automatic bulk garnet feeding system the machine utilises unique technology which allows you to fill the bulk hopper without stopping the cutting process, combined with a garnet low-level sensor maximum production efficiency is achieved. The hopper capacity is 80L / 180kg.

High Pressure Pump

The heart of the system is the highly advanced German built variable speed direct drive pump, creating up to 3800bar / 55000psi pressure at 100% duty cycle using the standard 0.35mm orifice. The pump boasts a unique filtering system making it suitable for tap water quality saving you money on additional reverse osmosis equipment and maintenance costs.

Frame / Chassis

The chassis is fully welded to improve strength and rigidity, making the whole composition robust. This is especially important after prolonged cutting times when heat can distort the construction.
