With 2020's peak season approaching, we've been keeping our eye on the latest looks and trends to rock the wedding world. Bradley Deeming, stylist at London's Salon64, has shared his predictions for the hairstyles we won't be able to get enough of this year.

"I predict 2020 will further push the year of the grunge," says Bradley. "Undone and tastefully messy dos with a strong shape; 2019 heralded the return of all things 1990s and, I think, this trend will follow through to 2020 in a more Rock'n'Roll fashion. The 'Shag' haircut was a popular look in the 1990s and early 2000s. Maximum layers and choppy sliced ends worn in different lengths will take centre stage and replace or even evolve our current beachy looks. Currently at Salon64, I'm receiving several requests for more layers as well as a huge rise in curly fringes. This, for me, is the start of the 'Shag' revolution."

For more information on the salon, visit salon64.co.uk

RELATIONSHIP HISTORY

Hilton London Hyde Park has produced a new video to showcase its history and character. The film, which showcases the hotel past and present, stars Belgian couple Nadine and Daniel Ghys, regular guests who have been visitors to the Bayswater Road hotel for more than 25 years. The Grade II listed venue is built for grand romance with its stained-glass windows and prime location. "We wanted to highlight what an amazing building this is and its fantastic history but also how we strive to make this a home away from home for our guests," said Rohan Poyrekar, director of operations at Hilton London Hyde Park.

Take a break from wedding stress with a freshly brewed Turkish coffee, an expertly crafted old fashioned or perhaps a Japanese whisky on the rocks from the atelier's in-house bar (all complimentary). Services start from £25.

RING THE CHANGES

London jewellery brand E.C.One has launched a range of engagement rings for men. Handcrafted in a choice of nine carat, 14ct or 18ct recycled gold or platinum, the ring features an organic faceted texture on top which adds a touch of modernity to a traditional band. Underneath, a hidden engraving reads 'Marry me?' – a touching personalised message for you and your partner.

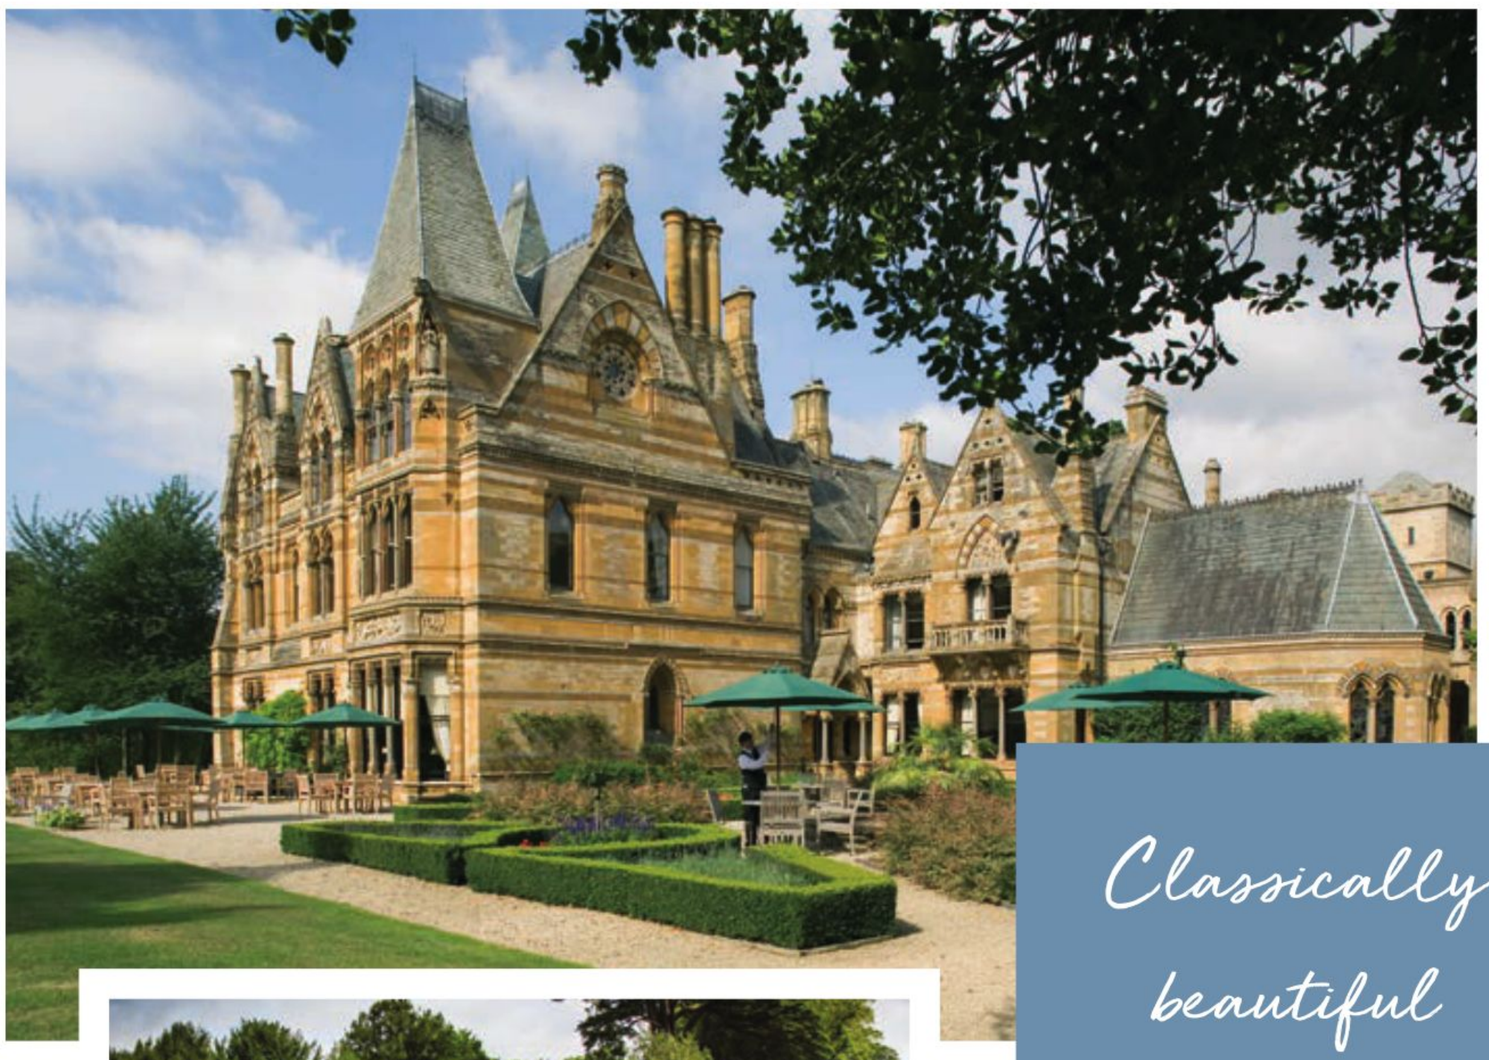

"After 23 years in business, we've come to know what men want from their jewellery and it's often something simple with a twist," commented E.C.One founder Joe Skeates. "Off the back of this experience, we've created the Marry Me men's engagement ring which we believe suits the style and needs of today's modern men, and would be perfect for anyone proposing to the man in their life this year."

AN Indian SUMMER

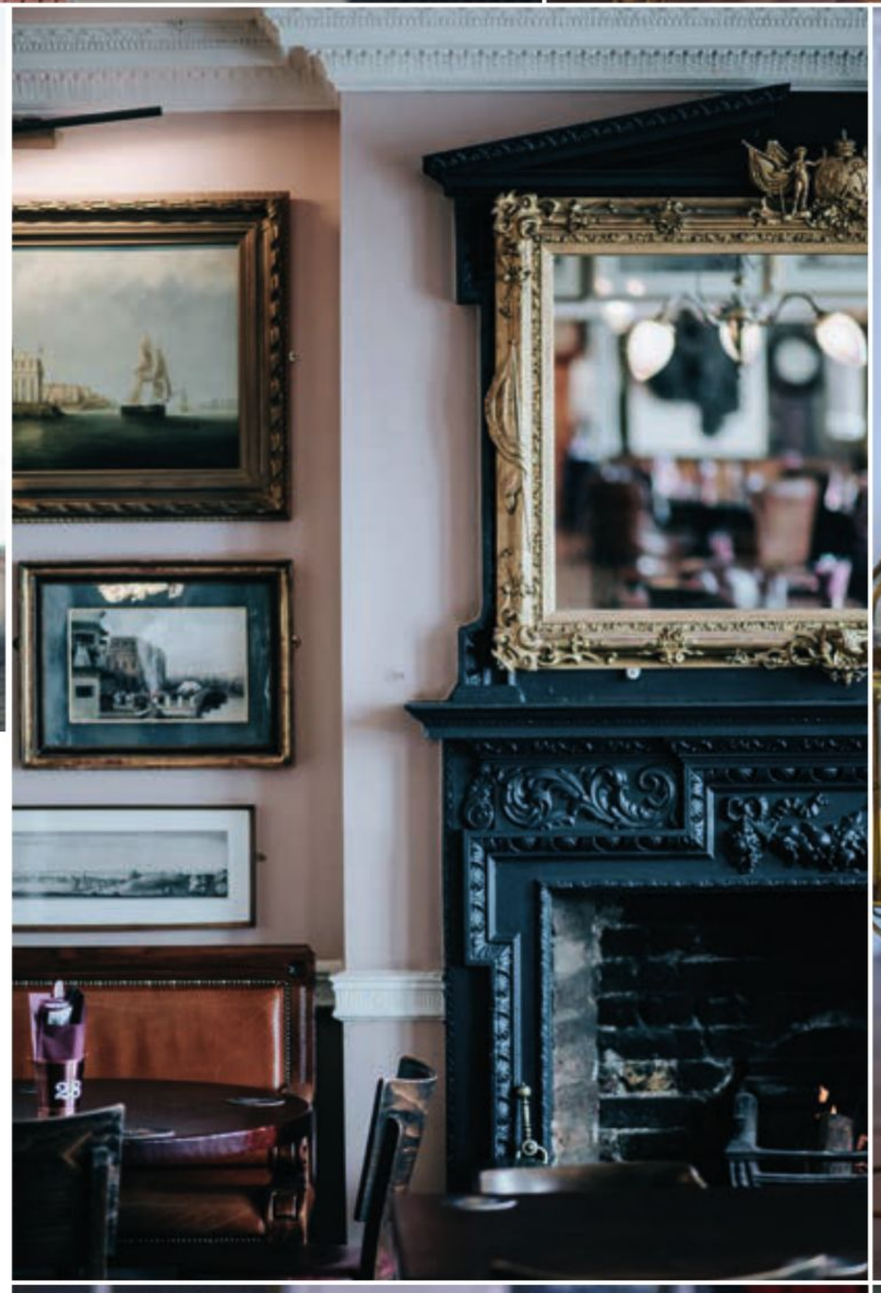

Bask in the tropical colour palette and rich detail of this Indian summer-inspired shoot

An Indian summer is a term often used to describe a warm, calm spell of weather in autumn. Although the phrase is commonly used in England, it's said to have been first coined by the Native Americans in the late 18th century.

After a disappointing summer, the belated good weather is always welcome, so it is warmly received. For the purposes of this styled shoot an Indian summer might be considered more of a state of mind, than a forecast. Taking the theme both figuratively and literally, this crack team of suppliers created a stunning scene using a warm colour palette of fuschia pink and ochre and series of Indian motifs. Greenwich's Trafalgar Tavern was dressed for the occasion with a series of eye-catching mala (traditional Indian garlands), floral displays, ornate lamps and lanterns and tassels-galore. The theme carried right through into the bride and groom's outfits with the bride's dress nodding to the theme with voluminous sleeves, a tassel back and mandala detail. And the attention to detail didn't stop there, even the place holders were dressed with cinnamon sticks (a spice native to India and known for its warmth) while the elegant cake picked up the colour scheme with its tumbling floral design.

While we all wait for our first summer to arrive, let us indulge in this preview of the second summer to come…

This newcomer to the Forest Gate-Leytonstone border sits on the very edge of the Wanstead Flats, meaning there's acres of wild, green space to explore with your photographer, not to mention the charming backdrop that the Victorian façade of this newly renovated pub provides.

Inside, this spacious and elegant pub has plenty of room for parties large and small from the Conservatory, which seats 50 loved ones with a further 20 diners catered for in the Outer Conservatory; or the piano room where 50 guests can toast your nuptials and intimate Snug, which seats 15 nearest and dearest. Outside, meanwhile, the capacious Rear Garden can accommodate 150 revellers and a further 60 can gather in the Front Gardens. With the aforementioned train, chess boards and vintage jukebox, there's plenty to keep them entertained to boot.

All things bright AND BEAUTIFUL

Kyriaki and Arran chose an Art Nouveau psychedelia theme for their non-traditional Greek big day

Kyriaki Karadelis, 35, married Arran Goodchild, 41, at Greek Orthodox Cathedral Church of All Saints followed by a reception at Glasshouse on the Lock, Holiday Inn Camden Lock on 17th August, 2019.

Having met through OKCupid, Kyriaki and Arran chose a gig in Camden Town for their first date. "After the gig, we worked our way down the other pubs and music venues on the high street," remembers Kyriaki. "The conversation flowed really easily; we had Vietnamese food. Suddenly it was gone midnight and we were the last ones left in the Lock Tavern. It was a Tuesday – so a school night and we had to run to catch the last tube. Arran was determined not to be 'friend-zoned' and kissed me in the underground."

And that event-packed night set the tone for Arran's proposal too; the groom-to-be planned a geocaching adventure for his future bride around their home in Archway. "I had to follow visual clues that took me to the old Archway Tavern, Stoneleigh Terrace, Highgate Library and, finally, Parliament Hill where Arran had buried an old film capsule containing his proposal," explains Kyriaki. "It was a desperately romantic, cheeky and fun plan that was very nearly scuppered by the lawn mowers that had been out on Hampstead Heath that very morning. After a fair amount of digging in mounds of sticky grass clippings – the treasure hunt turning a bit more Time Team by this stage – we found the capsule and Arran got down on one knee. He'd stashed a bottle of champagne and a couple of glasses in his bag in advance."

CAMDEN CALLING

As the couple started planning in earnest, they ruled out a destination wedding in Greece where Kyriaki was born, and, instead, decided to tie the knot in Camden where they'd first met and enjoyed many nights out. "We loved that the Glasshouse was on the canal and near Camden Lock. We visited on a sunny, crisp winter's day and all the colours of the bustling market were mirrored in the canal against an azure blue sky," Kyriaki remembers. "When we walked out of the venue, without saying a word, we made a beeline for the canal boat tour company across the bridge, having each thought that we wanted our guests to arrive by barge. At the time, we didn't actually know that there was a Greek Orthodox Church just upstream – it still amazes me how it all came together."

Drawn to the bright colours and music this area is famed for, the couple chose to emulate the 1970s music poster style known as Art Nouveau psychedelia for their theme. "We wanted our wedding to be fun and colourful," explains Kyriaki.

IT'S ALL IN THE DETAIL

This translated into table centrepieces made from 45" records, each a single the couple loved, teamed with brightly coloured floral arrangements and streamers and garlands galore.

The Glasshouse on the Lock, Kyriaki reveals, went above and beyond to help them realise their dream day. "They printed our tableplan and place names in the same Art Nouveau font I'd downloaded for our invitations and even ordered cobalt blue chair ribbons specially for the day. I'd told them it wasn't important and they could use the baby blue ones they had already but they were determined. You don't often see that level of care."

The couple also adhered to a series of Greek traditions as a nod to Kyriaki's heritage, ordering tulle pouches from Athens for their Greek 'boubouniere' favours, serving olives on board the canal boat as the guests travelled between ceremony and reception and a magnificent Greek buffet at the reception with souvlaki, salads and seafood, as well as a traditional Hellenic cake.

#OOTD

Kyriaki searched high and low for a dress that fitted both her budget and her dreams, "I went as far as getting up at 6am to drive to a warehouse on an industrial estate in Port Talbot, Wales," she admits. "In the end, I found the one at Bridal Reloved, which is about five minutes' drive from my parents' house."

Kyriaki accessorised with a hairpiece made by her florist, as well as a bespoke cape, handmade by Adorn by Ashley and Irregular Choice shoes.

Arran, meanwhile, chose a teal three-piece suit from the Moss Bros Tailor Me range, with a paisley-print lining (a nod to the couple's theme).

The groomsmen were briefed to wear a blue suit, while the bridesmaids were asked to choose their own dress or outfit. "No need to be telling women I love what they can and can't wear," Kyriaki laughs.

On the day, Kyriaki walked down the aisle to an acoustic guitar and viola arrangement performed by Arran's friends and fellow band members. "Arran is shouting 'half an hour late' at me as I tell you this," Kyriaki admits. "He's also reminding himself that he married a Greek and we don't do timekeeping. In fact, when he arrived at the church half an hour before the noon ceremony was supposed the start, the priest said 'you're early for 2pm!' When Arran informed him it was at noon, he simply said 'good to know, good to know'."

For the evening do another friend debuted his wedding and party band, Flamingo Jukebox, learning to play the theme tune from Zorba the Greek from scratch for the couple's first dance, followed by a duo of DJs – accompanied by a spectacular live oil-light show by Astral Projections which filled the room with psychedelic colours and patterns.

Party PEOPLE

Chloe Pardell, 32, married Adam Ding, 33, at Marylebone Town Hall followed by a reception at The Rose on 31st August,019.

It was love at first sight for Adam when he first clapped eyes on Chloe. "Around 16 years ago she worked as a waitress at a Pizza Hut in our home town," he remembers. "I used to go in with a few of my friends after football training and there she was one day serving us. She knocked me for six; I thought she was unbelievably beautiful. It only took me 12 years to get up the courage to ask her out and now here we are."

Luckily, once he'd surmounted that first hurdle, Adam was quicker off the mark with his proposal, popping the question on Halloween not long after they'd made it official. "I got her with a trick-or-treat: a Haribo Starmix jelly ring in one hand, the proper engagement in the other," he reveals.

The couple set to planning their big day, choosing to tie the knot in London. "We both love living in London and wanted that to be a huge part of our day; we tried to use independent suppliers as much as we could," notes Adam. Indeed, with incredible views over the River Thames, a pub they'd visited several times was the natural choice to host the reception. "We love the view and central location," says Chloe. "We also love the wallpaper – so much so, it was the inspiration for our wedding cake." Here, Chloe tells us more about their big day…

We wanted an informal vibe, the venue had to be fun and good for a party – The Rose fitted the bill perfectly.

Our cake was designed to echo the pub's décor – we added splashes of gold and gold dinosaur toppers.

We had lots of balloons – mainly foil animals to tie in with our gold animal place holders – as well as a gold foil curtain. Many became people's dance partners as the evening progressed!

Adam designed all our stationery – we chose a spectacular pink and orange colour palette to fit with the brights theme.

We travelled between venues in a flower-decked car from Karma Kabs – the seats were lined with beautiful Indian fabric and there was even a chandelier inside. The journey was so special – a chance to be together and take it all in.

My bridesmaids wore maxi wrap dresses from Flounce London in gold.

I chose a sequin top and skirt from Belle & Bunty. It fitted the fun vibe we wanted to create for the day.

We chose bright colours for our flowers, tied with velvet ribbon.

"We both love living in London and wanted that to be a huge part of our day; we tried to use independent suppliers as much as we could."
– Adam

Adam wore a bespoke suit from Moss, teamed with a Asos tie and personalised tie clips.

Music was a huge part of our day and our DJ was brilliant – the dancefloor was packed from start to finish.

Sarah and Lee prioritised fun, food and drink for their informal big day

Sarah Beattie, 44, married Lee Thomas Pegram, 48, at The Old Marylebone Town Hall, followed by a reception at The Marylebone Bar on 19th October, 2019.

They say the key to a lasting marriage is shared interests – and, if that's true, we can see a long and happy partnership ahead for Sarah and Lee. "We met at work," Sarah reveals. "We were colleagues for a long time, got on really well and shared the same sense of humour and a love for fizzy Haribos and Maoams Stripes!"

Indeed, the couple's love for guilty pleasures inspired Lee's first proposal plan, although he had a last minute change of heart, as Sarah explains, "Lee was planning to propose at home over a breakfast of Dr Pepper, beef Monster Munch and a Dime Bar (classy) but we went for a spontaneous after-work drink at the Landmark Hotel just before Christmas, ended up staying for dinner and he took advantage of the beautifully romantic location."

With just under 10 months to plan their big day, the pair were determined to keep it simple. "The emphasis was on fun, food and drink and less on the formalities of a traditional wedding," explains Sarah. "No drawn-out day – just an afternoon of exchanging vows and getting down to the nitty gritty of eating, drinking, dancing and laughing with those we loved around us."

With the 'guest experience' firmly in mind, the couple started to search for easy-to-reach venues. "We opted for a register office service; keen to have somewhere romantic but with history and a bit of Rock'n'Roll quirkiness – The Old Marylebone Town Hall fit the bill," Sarah recalls. Ceremony venue secured, the couple turned to a suitable location for their reception. "We researched bars in the vicinity that fit with our fun, cocktail-style party theme. The Marylebone Bar was ideal – it was relaxed and slightly unusual," says Sarah. The couple booked a red Routemaster to transport guests between the ceremony and reception, where drinks and a buffet-style wedding breakfast awaited.

All the more time to enjoy the entertainment, which was plentiful in keeping with the couple's theme. A magician wowed the crowd while a popcorn machine kept the little ones busy and a coterie of props and hats went down well with all.

#OOTD

With an emerging baby bump to accommodate, Sarah chose a vintage lace tea dress for the day. "It wasn't my original choice but it suited the venues and theme and the moment I put it on, I felt like a million dollars," she reveals. Meanwhile, Lee chose a three-piece, navy suit teamed with a bespoke pocket square featuring St Pancras station. Sarah's eight-year-old son walked her down the aisle in a royal blue suit with lollipop pocket square while a string trio played Peter Gabriel's Book of Love. "I was terrified that I wouldn't be able to control the tears when I heard the bridal march and I'd be a blubbering wreck throughout the ceremony," laughs Sarah.

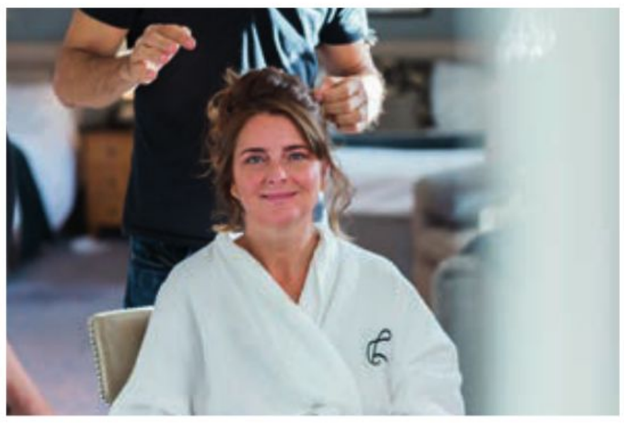

IT'S ALL IN THE DETAIL

As a sustainability professional, Sarah was keen to minimise waste and avoid over-consumption, so she carried a simple bouquet of white roses, freesias and foliage, which was later laid on her grandmother's resting place. The same blooms were used for buttonholes and arranged in jam jars placed throughout the reception venue.

And as a nod to their love of junk food, the couple eschewed the traditional cake in favour of a tower of Krispy Kreme donuts, crowned with a personalised wooden topper, which doubled up as pudding.

Indeed, those donuts came in handy for what we think must be one of the most Rock'n'Roll exits we've ever heard of, "We moonwalked out of the reception to God is a DJ by Faithless, grabbing a couple of donuts on the way and jumping straight into a Black Electric Cab to be whisked away to Heathrow," Sarah laughs.

10 tips for planning your dream sustainable wedding

Celia Gaze is the founder of The Wellbeing Farm, and says, "As we're getting more conscious about our environment and how we can protect it, the idea is also flooding the wedding market, as brides are looking for a lush wedding day that doesn't cost the planet. As a venue that has always had a green centre, here are our 10 top tips if you're planning a sustainable wedding..."

DITCH THE PALM BEACH WEDDING IN FAVOUR OF SOMETHING LOCAL

This may be an obvious one, but it's a good starting point. As nice as those pictures of destination weddings look, think of all the air miles to fly everyone over, and then transport from the airport... that's a lot of CO_2 emissions. With that in mind, if your venue is accessible by public transport, even better.

PLAN A VEGETARIAN OR VEGAN MENU

One of the biggest trends is cutting out a lot of meat and other animal products from your diet. Whilst your wedding has been considered the one day you can indulge, this now doesn't mean that you can't splurge on taste without cutting out the meat. Even as an omnivore, some of the nicest food I have had is vegetarian and vegan. If your menu is seasonal, organic, or uses fair trade ingredients, or a mixture of all three, even better!

SPEAKING OF SEASONAL, KEEP YOUR FLOWERS SEASONAL TOO

Seasonal flowers save the air miles, there's no need to import tulips from Holland in the middle of September. Also start thinking about what you are going to do with the flowers afterwards, and if your florist avoids using foam in their arrangements, that's a big fat green thumbs up. If they are also supplying confetti, look at a kind that is bio-degradable.

Think about transport

If your venue isn't easy to get to via public transport, instead of a million cars arriving at your venue, think about hiring a coach from a suitable meeting point e.g. the hotel your guests are staying at; this will hopefully cut down a lot of emissions even before your big day starts.

5 USE RECYCLABLE MATERIALS OR SECOND-HAND PROPS FOR YOUR DÉCOR

One of our biggest features for our brides is our Prop Shed, which holds every kind of decorative prop you can imagine: saving time, money and the planet as everything is reused from couple to couple. Some brides like to use bits they've picked up themselves – afterwards, think about donating to other brides for their day.

6 ASK YOUR VENUE ABOUT ITS GREEN POLICY

A big note when looking around venues is looking at its bar – if they are still using plastic straws, that's a big no-no! Do they recycle everything on-site, use local suppliers, grow their own produce and have they cracked down on single-use plastic, among many other measures.

7 Find local suppliers

From your cake to your DJ, using suppliers who are local to you/ your venue is key to making your wedding sustainable and keeping your wedding's carbon footprint down. Venues should have a list of recommended suppliers on their websites, who are all local to the property.

8 CONSIDER SUSTAINABLE FAVOURS

Think about not just what you want them to be, but also how they are packaged. Stay away from the plastic toys and trinkets, and cellophane wrapping that cannot be recycled. If there is an animal, environmental or sustainability charity that means something to you and your partner, a donation favour to that charity would be a good choice.

9 DRESS UPCYCLE

Why not donate your dress to a charity shop to make an impact long after the big day – this also applies to the bridesmaids' dresses too if you're looking for a green wedding! Also, keep away from silk and other materials that come from animals.

10 IS YOUR STATIONERY SUSTAINABLE?

As pretty as the save-the-date invitations and other stationery looks, think about using invites made from an ethically sourced or recycled material.

Tell us about your background – how did you become a wedding photographer?

I started my career as a graphic designer and photographic art director working for fashion and lifestyle brands. My photography business began 10 years ago and from the start, my style has been influenced by my background in design. I find inspiration in the small things; light, nature, design and people. I love beautiful paper and gorgeous packaging.

What's your favourite London venue and why?

This is one of the hardest questions to answer! London is filled with amazing venues that offer everything from quirky and creative to uber elegant. The one venue I always love going back to is Queen's House in Greenwich. It's the most amazing building with really interesting nooks for photos. It's right next to Greenwich Park and the River Thames. Queen's House is one of those places that, regardless of the weather, is always photogenic.

And your favourite area of the city to shoot in?

I'm torn between choosing the wonderful green areas of London, such as Regent's Park, and its iconic architecture and landmarks. I've been lucky to work in many amazing venues and locations across London.

What's your favourite part of the job?

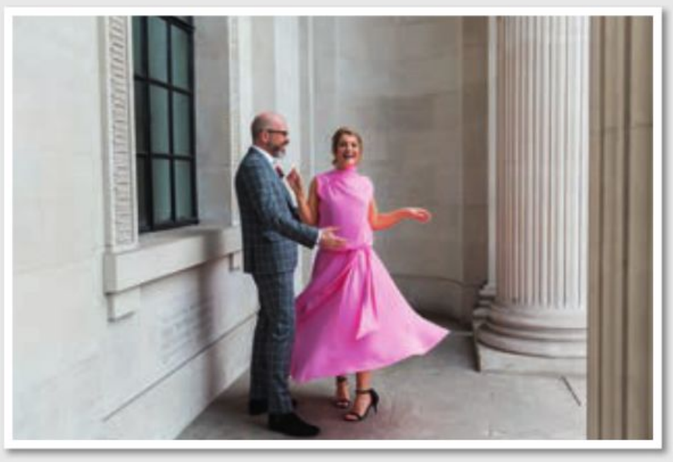

Without a doud, it's working with the couples who choose me to photograph their day. I love to find out how they met and what's important to them.

Siobhan Hennessy, Siobhan H Photography

siobhanhphotography.com | 07809 575 460

Tell us about your background – how did you become a wedding photographer?

I was a picture editor for a top photo agency for almost a decade, art directing editorial shoots for UK and international magazines, and shooting events around London. During this time, I developed a strong eye for composition, honed my technical skills and learned to work at a fast pace, which has translated really well to my wedding photography.

How would you describe your photography style?

My style is modern and fresh with an editorial edge. Wedding photographs become more precious as time goes on, which is why it's important for me to create meaningful images capturing the story of the day, the emotional moments and the feelings that can instantly transport you back to it.

What's your favourite London venue and why?

I love stylish, minimal venues with lots of natural light and The West Reservoir Centre in Hackney ticks all of those boxes. It's a very modern, industrial venue with a real sense of space – plus, the views across the water are fabulous.

And your favourite area of the city to shoot in?

The great thing about London is that you're never far away from a perfect backdrop. You can find the coolest urban settings or a beautiful natural spot within minutes. One of my favourite places to shoot is around Notting Hill; I love the pastel colours and elegant houses.

Douglas Fry, Douglas Fry Wedding Photographer

Tell us about your background – how did you become a wedding photographer?

I started out as a physicist at Imperial College London, then spent five years in the army, two years cycling round the world before setting up as a freelance press photographer, shooting for The Times, Independent and Observer. A couple saw my byline in a newspaper and asked me to shoot their London wedding; nervously, I agreed. Ten rolls of film later, I was hooked and have now shot more than 500 weddings in 25 years – I enjoy every one.

How would you describe your photography style?

I shoot weddings on very fast lenses by Leica, the incredible 50mm standard lens opens up to F0.95 which means I can shoot any dark winter wedding lit by candle light with no flash. It preserves the ambience of the wedding, and doesn't interfere or distract the couple or guests in the slightest. In summary, a documentary style on the world's best cameras and lenses.

What's your favourite London venue and why?

That's a tough one; I've shot at Syon Park for many years and its celebration room is one of the most elegant in London. Post ceremony, the guests collect in the quad for drinks while the couple walk down the famous long gallery for photographs, and then make their way down to the large conservatory. For more intimate dos, I really like Two Temple Place with its majestic dining room.

And your favourite area of the city to shoot in?

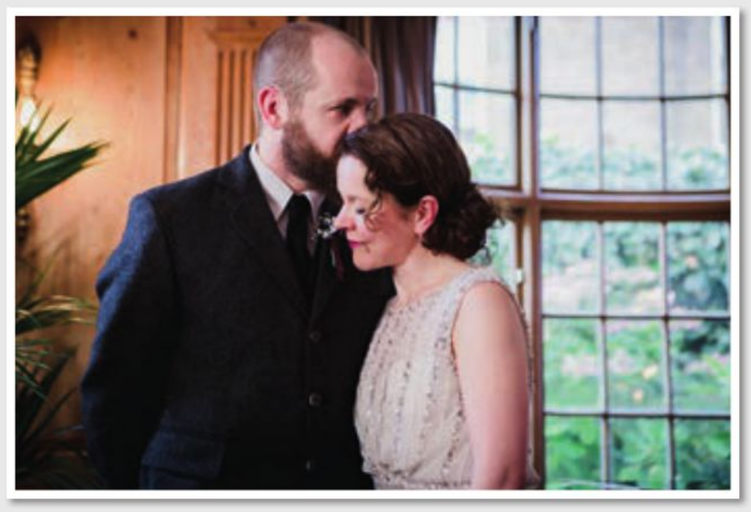

Chelsea presents endless possibilities with its mix of coloured houses and interesting shops and restaurants all along the King's Road.

Davina Paterson, Image Bliss Photography

imagebliss.co.uk.com | 07770 055 576

Tell us about your background – how did you become a wedding photographer?

I picked up my dad's Olympus OM10 when I was seven-years-old and I've wanted to be a photographer ever since. I remember talking about it in my school careers day and getting blank looks as they couldn't help me. I went on to study art and design with photography. As for weddings themselves… I shot a friend's big day and absolutely loved it – the rest is history.

How would you describe your photography style?

Story telling. I love to document the day so that, when couples look back, they can re-live it.

What's your favourite London venue and why?

Really I love any London pub with a relaxed vibe. However, Shoreditch and Hackney are throwing up some amazing spaces now; Core Clapton is a beautiful, bright space. And you can't beat an iconic London landmark either.

And your favourite area of the city to shoot in?

You can turn down any street in London and find something wildly different – so it's hard to choose just one; but I love to shoot on Hampstead Heath.

AT QUEEN MARY

University of London

bellephotojourney.com | 07891 390 297

How would you describe your photography style?

My style is a combination of natural reportage photography and fine art portraiture. I love to capture the natural and unstaged expressions of joy, anticipation, excitement of the couple and people around them. I tend to be relatively 'invisible' and capture the events and moments as the day unfolds. However, when it comes to wedding portraitures, I would gently guide the couples to make sure we have some natural but flattering photos.

What's your favourite London venue and why?

It's a difficult choice but I would probably say Cutty Sark. It's visually stunning, filled with treasures, spacious with multiple levels for different impact, and right by the waterfront.

What's your favourite part of the job?

The people element is one thing that keeps me smiling in my job. Not everyone is lucky enough to be in a job surrounded by happy people. I love meeting people and am more than pleased to be an important part of the big day.

What are your top tips for nearlyweds?

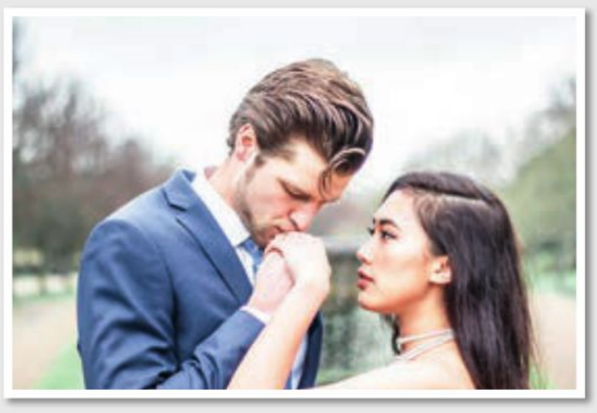

Write down three things you love most about your other half and put it somewhere easily accessible. Then, if you're ever really mad at each other, look at your list and remind yourself why they're the one for you.

Tell us about your background – how did you become a wedding photographer?

I've always had a passion for photography, and got through a steady stream of cameras in my youth – several of which I broke as I took them everywhere. I wish it had clicked (pun intended) sooner that I could turn my passion into a business as that would have been more exciting than the law degree and subsequent journalism qualification that I put myself through.

In May, 2018 I married my wife, Emma, after a five-year engagement. After the wedding, having spent years researching photographers, their styles etc, I began to wonder if it was something I could do. And once we got back from our honeymoon, I began to set up Queen Bea Photography.

How would you describe your photography style?

I would say I fall under the 'documentary' style of wedding photography. I like to keep things as natural and unposed as possible – and fun

What's your favourite London venue and why?

I love Chelsea Old Town Hall for a number of reasons. First, it's around the corner from where I live and I like getting to know other London wedding suppliers. I think the obligatory confetti shot on the steps is such a quintessentially 'London' wedding photo too, and I love that

And your favourite area of the city to shoot in?

That's a hard one. I've lived all over London and have so many favourite places. However, I recently did an engagement shoot in South Kensington and had such a lot of fun. It was great seeing somewhere I spend a lot of time through a completely different lens (apologies for another pun). There are so many great, iconic places to shoot in around there, and we took some around Cromwell Road, Exhibition Road, and inside the Natural History Museum.

What's your favourite part of the job?

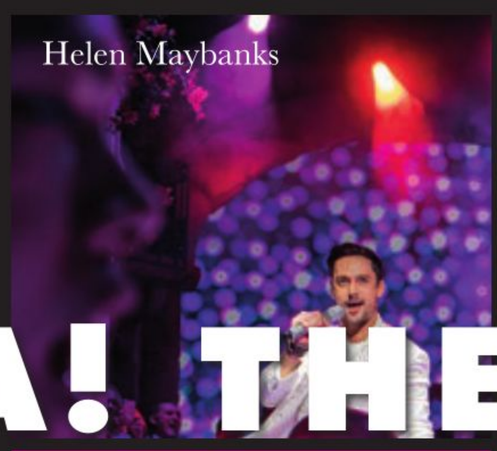

I love, love, and that's why I enjoy photographing weddings so much. I'm a huge romantic, and weddings are so full of fun, they just make me smile.

MAMMA MIA! THE PARTY

I'm a firm believer that there are two types of people in this world: people who love ABBA and people who won't admit they love ABBA. I am well and truly in the first camp – in fact, obsessed is probably the correct term for my adoration of the Swedish fab four – so my expectations were very high for this event.

Billed as an immersive entertainment experience that puts guests at the heart of the action, I couldn't quite picture how this was going to pan out and all I knew was that we would be getting dinner while watching a Mamma Mia-inspired show. Arriving at the O2 with my sister (another ABBA nut), we walked through the big blue doors and suddenly we were on a Greek island in a pretty courtyard complete with fountain, olive trees and walls draped in bougainvillea, instead of London on a dreary Monday night. From the moment we took our seats in Nikos' Taverna, that was it; I was swept up in the brilliant and slightly ridiculous magic of it all. The free-flowing wine probably helped.

Everyone was so into the show that they probably could've got away with mediocre food, but in truth it was delicious. The four-course gourmet meal of tasty Mediterranean fare was incredible – the bread and olives alone were to die for. And as for the show, it was just one huge incredible party – we all laughed, cried and sang along with our new found friends – and we weren't just observing, everyone was part of the action. I challenge anyone to not start dancing; we were up mid-mouthful at many points if Gimme! Gimme! Gimme! or Dancing Queen were somehow shoehorned into the plot. The joyous atmosphere was totally infectious.

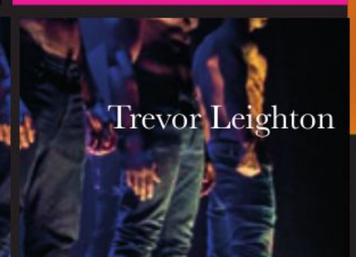

At the end of the show, they roll out a huge stage and a disco starts up. My sister and I were devastated to leave but we had to get the last train home, which we soon found out had been cancelled, and with that we were back down to earth with a thud. If you don't like ABBA, the price tag may terrify you. If you do, it's worth every penny.

MAGIC MIKE LIVE

Trevor Leighton

When I told people I was going to see Magic Mike Live I got a lot of giggles and some funny looks. If you're a millennial woman, there's a good chance you've seen the film (or at least, fast-forwarded to the good bits), so you probably have an idea of what the live show will entail. What Channing Tatum's extravaganza actually provides though is a somewhat more friendly experience. I won't give the premise away (although let's face it, we're not here for the story), but let's just say that the female MC is very much in charge of the situation, and we as audience members are reaping the benefits of a more feminist approach to a traditional strip show.

We arrived at the Hippodrome Casino, which is perfectly located in Leicester Square for those who want a night on the town afterwards, and are directed to the venue and order a drink right to our seats. The show is around an hour and a half, but it goes by in a flash of tanned skin and oiled muscles. The dance moves range from a bit saucy to one routine with a female dancer that verges on indecent, but the general feel-good vibe of the evening and the comedic styling of the host stop it from careering into tacky.

I have to say, I haven't laughed so much in a long time. My friend and I were screaming and whooping along to the show – and this was a school night! I can just imagine a Saturday night with a group of your best girls and you could bring the house down. I have to mention the audience participation, as it is a big part of the show. I was slightly terrified at the prospect of this beforehand, but when you're in the moment the nerves go out the window. My friend even sat on a piano and had a hunky man serenade her! It feels like a totally safe and inclusive environment, but if you're really not up for a lap dance, just say the safe word "unicorn" and you'll be passed by. Not that we saw many people using the safe word, except for a very embarrassed looking Alex Jones from The One Show. All in all, this is riotous, naughty fun best consumed with copious cocktails and your best friends by your side.

DAY AND NIGHT

Switch up your big-day look with jewellery and accessories to take you from the ceremony to the last dance

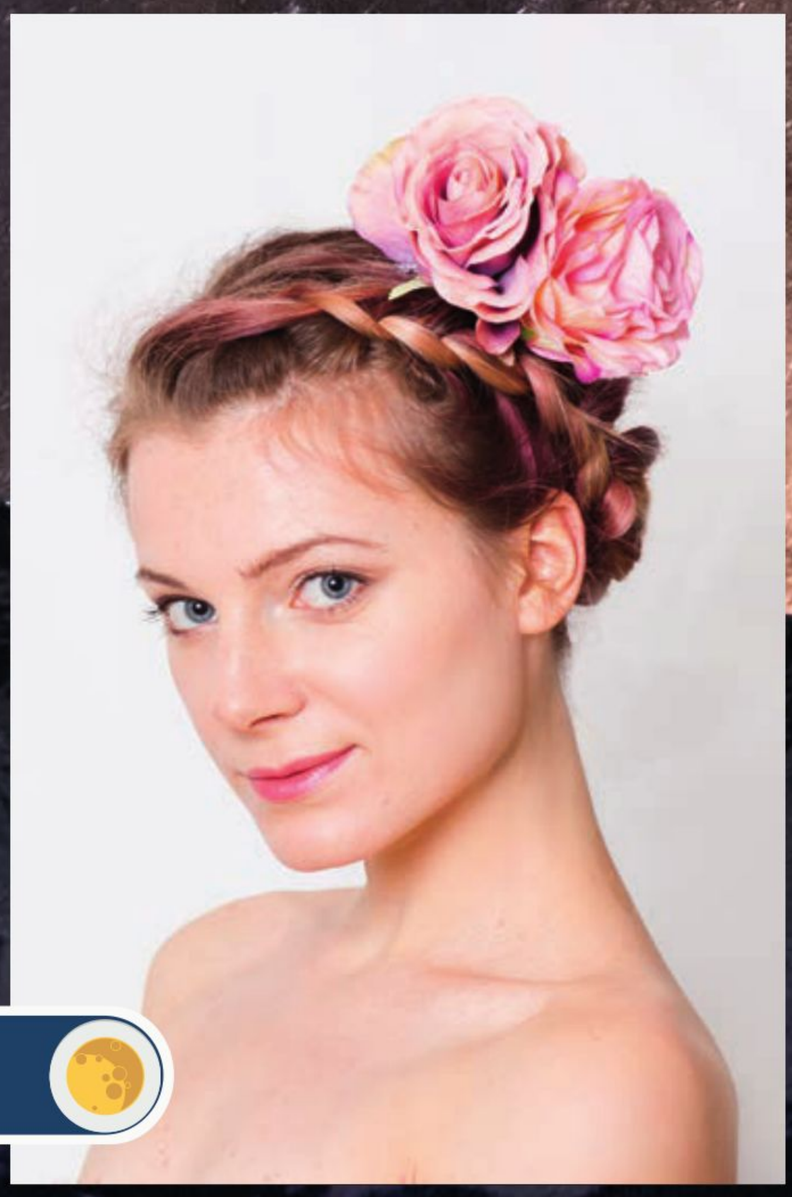

"The tiara is making a comeback and, while these work spectacularly well during the ceremony, statement hair clips are more suited to the evening do so you can literally let your hair down yet continue to sparkle into the night." – Olivier, Olivier Laudus

"Surprise all your friends and family by switching your look up between the ceremony and the reception. These two moments are equally as important but very different. The first, serious and formal, the second celebratory and glamourous." Katherine, Katherine Elizabeth Millinery

"If you're planning on changing dress from ceremony to reception, then skip the necklace and focus on an elegant pair of transformable diamond earrings instead. They're luxurious, versatile and convert effortlessly from studs to drops to highlight and accessorise your different looks and necklines." – Gary Ingram, The Diamond Store

"Three-dimensional botanical accessories are very much in Vogue this year. Whether a statement headband or flowers dotted throughout, fun, floral accessories are going to be everywhere this season. Be sure to choose a hairstyle that can be easily adapted – you don't want to waste too much of your special day having a restyle."
Cathy Worth, Twisted Glamour

A landmark occasion

Pink or blue? Why not have two? This crack team of London suppliers created a series of looks at The Landmark London

Can't decide on a theme or single colour scheme? Well, as this shoot proves you can have it all – just, maybe, not all at once. If your reception venue offers multiple spaces, simply dress each to suit the different time of day. Indeed, luxury event planner Jacqueline Kennedy and her crack team of London suppliers styled various function rooms at The Landmark Hotel, London to demonstrate how a big-day spectacular can progress from a fun and frivolous high tea to an elegant, formal dinner – and, of course, how your bridal look can be switched up to complement each occasion.

"Pink weddings are trending and no wonder; there's a rebellious, sexy appeal to this gorgeous, feminine tone," explains Jacqueline. "Here, we dressed the room for a champagne afternoon tea with balloon sculptures designed to wow, and tables laid with statement glasses and crockery from Jones hire. For the evening do, however, we chose a more intimate, romantic look and feel for The Empire Room, keeping the styling simple and elegant with shades of blue."

LET'S celebrate!

Jane Barbeary, Member of the Associations of Independent Celebrants, shares what's new in this increasingly popular service

You've named the date, booked the venue, and decided what to call your twitter hashtag for the big day... but the important bit, the actual promises you make to the love of your life, are pretty much the same words used by every other couple getting hitched.

There's not a lot of wriggle room for clergy or registrars to really personalise a ceremony to reflect you, as a couple. The laws that govern marriage date back to 1836, and the language used in ceremonies remain in line with those traditions.

There's something comforting about familiar wording and ceremony and, if that's what you prefer, then that's a great choice. But if the words don't feel personal and relevant to you, there is an alternative. Modern celebrants write and deliver bespoke ceremonies that tell your story as a couple. We can't legally marry you – yet – the Law Commission is currently looking into that – but what we can do is give you a truly unique and personal ceremony that you, and your family and friends, will remember and cherish for many years to come. We can also write and deliver civil partnership ceremonies, wedding vow renewals and baby naming ceremonies, to your specifications.

It's worth knowing that the Law Commission has decided that the marriage laws are not keeping pace with modern Britain, and need to change. They're looking at making the system simpler, fairer and cheaper. As it stands you can only marry in a church, register office or approved venue. The commission says this can be restrictive and expensive, and it's looking to remove some of the red tape to give couples more choice, whilst still maintaining the dignity of marriage. If the changes go ahead, you could get married on water, in a field or in your own back garden!

They're also considering changing the rules to allow humanists and independent celebrants to conduct legally binding ceremonies in England and Wales. That's hopefully to come but right now, once you've done the legal bit which can be inexpensive at a register office midweek, you can go ahead with your ceremony your way! It's also not a requirement to exchange rings when you complete the legal formalities, so that can also be done with your celebrant.

Your ceremony can be as simple or as extravagant as you'd like it to be. If you're stuck for inspiration, celebrants have lots of it. You can have guests giving readings, live music or favourite songs played. You might want to include children, pets or join the latest trend of hiring in alpacas as ring bearers!

We will write your entire ceremony, including your vows or promises to each other, once you've told us all about your story. Some couples prefer to write their own vows, but would like the celebrant to read them aloud. It's entirely up to you, there are no hard and fast rules. We can deliver a ceremony anywhere that's special to you both. It could be a forest glade, a stately home or the pub garden.

There are many 'symbolic actions' you can include in your ceremony, if that's what you'd like. These are becoming increasingly popular and are a great way of getting your guests involved too. Here are just a few examples you might want to ponder over…

JUMPING THE BROOM

This is an ancient tradition used in many cultures in past centuries, when couples literally jumped over a broomstick together to marry. The 'leap of faith' symbolises how much you love each other, as you jump into your future together. Two guests can hold the broom a few inches off the ground. The couple close their eyes, everyone counts to three, and the guests lower the broom to the ground as the couple jump over it.

SAND CEREMONY

This symbolises the coming together of two individuals to make one loving couple. Two glass vases of coloured sand are poured into a third vessel to symbolise the blending of your lives together. Just as the coloured grains can no longer now be separated, so your lives are now as one.

HANDFASTING

This is a traditional Celtic ritual and it's the origin of the expression to 'tie the knot'. You hold hands, usually at the pulse points, and the celebrant ties them together, loosely, with ribbons or braids. This signifies the binding of your lives together. The type of braid used can be very personal, so for example if you met at school, you might want to use an old school tie, or particular colours that have significance to you. This can be a good point in the ceremony to make promises or vows to one another.

LOVE LETTERS

You put your feelings for each other on paper. You then read it aloud or give it to your partner or celebrant to read. Alternatively, you could put them in a memory box, seal it, and open it on your first anniversary. A lovely way to remember your special day.

RING WARMING

Before rings are exchanged they can be passed around your guests on a small cushion or in a box. Each guest holds them for a few seconds and makes a silent wish for the couple. When the rings are returned, they hold all the love and hopes for the future from family and friends.

STONE CEREMONY

In past centuries couples couldn't always afford wedding rings, so they cast a stone into a nearby river or ocean to symbolise staying together as the water ebbed and flowed throughout their lives.

In the absence of any handy water nearby, you can toss stones with your names etched on them into a bowl of water. They can be retrieved later and taken on honeymoon where hopefully you'll find some water!.

UNITY CANDLES

Candles represent light and hope, and lighting one together symbolises your union, and hopes for the future.

So it really is all up to you. Working together with a trained celebrant can make your day unique, personal, fun and best of all a memory to live with you, your family and friends forever. The Association of Independent Celebrants list celebrants across the UK. Most will be happy to talk through your ideas free of charge before you make your decision. Let's do it……. let's celebrate!

A CALMING influence

We put these soothing saviours to the test, perfect for beating wedmin stress

Sanda Aromatherapy Eye Pillow, £22, sandafeelgood.com

"I'm in love! The eye pillow is simple, yet so versatile, and great to have on hand for times when you feel like you need to stop and take a few moments. I put it through its paces and tried it warm first of all. Just 30 seconds in the microwave is plenty. The heat releases the amazing aroma (mine is rose and cardamom), which enhances the whole experience. I popped on a five-minute mindfulness meditation and shut out the world.

"The next night I tested the cold experience – 20 minutes or so in the freezer does the trick. After a tense day it calmed my head and soothed my tired, contact lense-wearing eyes. I can't wait to try it in the summer when itchy hayfever eyes kick in." – Kelly Andrews

"I love a bath. Any excuse to get me in the tub, I'm there, and I have to say, I've tried a lot of bath oils. So, I was eager to dive right in with this Relaxing Bath Oil from Amphora Aromatics.

"I truly believe this is the best bath oil I've ever tried. It has exactly the right combination of a heavenly aroma that's not too overpowering, and nourishment, without being greasy. My skin felt instantly balmy and fragrant, which lasted throughout the following day to boot." – Danielle Harvey

Sanatio Naturalis Frankincense Essential Oil 10ml, £26, sanationaturalis.com

"I had to dig deep at the back of the cupboard to find my essential oil diffuser to test out Sanatio Naturalis' Frankincense Essential Oil, but I'm glad I did! Distilled from wild-growing tree resin in Somalia, it has an exotic, spicy scent. Without being overbearing, it filled my room with a deliciously heady fragrance that was the perfect backdrop to some me-time. The strong smell is brilliant for focusing the mind and it's been shown that inhaling frankincense reduces your heart rate and blood pressure – so if you're feeling the stress of wedmin, it's definitely worth a whirl." – Hannah Faulder

Tisserand Aromatherapy Total De-Stress MoodFix Mist 100ml, £9.45, tisserand.com

"I can't promise this handy spray will work miracles when it comes to tackling a hectic lifestyle, but what it does do is allow you to stop, if only for a minute, and just breathe. A quick squirt provides a comforting mist of calm when the going gets tough and the blend of geranium, orange and nutmeg natural pure essential oils smells great too!" – Sarah Reeve

Kyushi Jasmine, Lavender & Cedarwood Face Oil 30ml, £39, kyushi.co.uk

"The first thing I noticed about this face oil was the earthy smell that filled the room. Kyushi recommend placing three drops into the palms of your hands, gently rubbing them together and cupping over your nose and mouth before taking some deep breaths, as the mindful application is as important as the product itself. I did find it had a calming effect, and it smelled divine. It also made my skin feel incredibly soft and hydrated. I recommend using it before you go to bed for a long, restful sleep." – Melissa Barker

WE ARE YOUNG LDN

Nestled in the heart of Notting Hill, Young LDN is changing how things are done and redefining what skincare is to the Gen Z and Millennial population. A far cry from stuffy Harley Street clinics, Young LDN offers the best-in-class treatments from leading aesthetic experts that champion youth and inspire confidence. Young LDN provides the young (and young at heart) with a relaxed, informal yet highly-effective destination for all skin and beauty concerns.

Founded by Sue Carroll who was searching for a destination to help her own Gen Z children with their skin concerns, Young LDN was started as a studio where everyone from teenagers through to skincare fanatics can feel comfortable. Young LDN are proud to have helped many brides with their wedding skin journey.

My experience with Young LDN has been incredible from beginning to end. I came to them for a complimentary consultation, as my wedding was coming up and I was really unhappy with my skin. I found that I had developed cystic acne all along my jawline and chin. At the consultation we talked through my problems and skincare routine. Then came up with some suggested treatments which would help, and the results have been phenomenal. Not only has my skin completely cleared, but it is the best it has ever looked. The Young LDN team are phenomenal. From the moment you walk in you are made to feel so welcome, and they clearly care about getting serious results. I got married a couple of weeks ago and have never felt so confident – so a massive thank you to the team!

IT'S ALL IN THE DETAIL

From fabulous flowers to tartan touches, our experts are on hand to solve your wedding woes

FLOWER POWER

We're planning our big day and want our flowers to reflect the contemporary, boho vibe we're going for but have no idea how to pull together a brief for our florist. Which blooms should we be requesting and what arrangements would you advise?

Louise says: As a florist, we're often asked to create flowers for many different themes. My absolute favourite would have to be boho. This style calls on bohemian and hippie influences: think long, flowing dresses, floral crowns and lots of free spirit.

Indeed, the essence of boho is creativity, so ask your florist to play around with lots of different textures and colours combined with fabulous flowing foliage. Pampas grass, dried flowers, herbs, succulents and even feathers work well together to create the perfect boho look alongside other natural elements such as wood and stone. In terms of fresh flowers, blooms such as hypericum, craspedia, amaranthus, sedum, anthurium and astrantia are often recommended.

For the bridal party, think mismatched buttonholes and cascading bouquets while jam jars filled with an abundance of wildflowers will lend that 'just picked' look to your table décor. For the ceremony and drinks reception, floral dreamcatchers and grounded arches capture this style perfectly.

LET'S DANCE!

I love the idea of a lit-up dancefloor but I have no idea about the logistics of having one installed on the day. Can you talk me through installation – does it have to be a flat floor and do you need a plug socket? How long does it take to build?

Doville says: On average, we estimate that a white LED starlit dancefloor takes 30 minutes to install but each event is a little different so our aim is to have it laid within an hour.

The surface has to be flat and dry. Uneven floor surfaces may result in the LEDs not working properly, as the panels may lose connection. LED dancefloors cannot be laid directly onto grass or outside.

One power socket is required to provide a power supply for the dancefloor.

WHAT LIES BENEATH?

My hubby-to-be's family is Scottish and we'd love to honour their heritage on our big day. However, I'm afraid neither of us are overly familiar with the custom surrounding wearing a kilt – can we choose any colourway? Are there any other considerations to take into account?

Paul says: Most specialist kilt stores should have a comprehensive range of hire tartans and accessories that cover the most up-to-date wedding colours. Even if you do opt for a specific tartan, you can always play around with the jacket style and colourway. Choose from the traditional Prince Charlie or Argyle or a more contemporary shape, both will be available in a range of shades from plain black, grey and navy to the new tweeds for a less formal look. You can personalise the look further with special accessories, such as your own style and colour of socks, shirt, tie and kilt pin.

Most stores will be able to make a kilt in most clan tartans – even better, some offer a 'hire before you buy' option, so you, the client, will get to wear the clan tartan or the tartan choice and colour for the special day, with an option to buy after the event.

I'd always advise visiting a couple of stores to browse their range, pick the brains of the friendly and knowledgeable staff and try a few things on.

Meet the experts: Director of kilt hire service Eight Yards, what Paul Swadzba doesn't know about kilts isn't worth knowing.

THE ART OF GIFTING

We've lived together for years and have all the toasters and plates we could need. Ideally, we'd like our guests to contribute to a bespoke piece of art – but we're not sure how to phrase this on the invites. Any advice?

Georgina says: Couples are often hesitant to let their guests know what they'd really like as a wedding gift for fear of appearing too demanding or insensitive. This fear is more often than not totally unnecessary however – wedding invitees understand that the days of gifting household essentials are over and they would like nothing more than to give something to the happy couple that they truly want and will cherish for the rest of their lives.

A bespoke piece of art is a wonderful idea as a special gift and it's best to be quite direct on the invitation to let guests know that this is what you'd like and exactly how they can go about contributing towards this. Setting up an online gifting site is a practical solution.

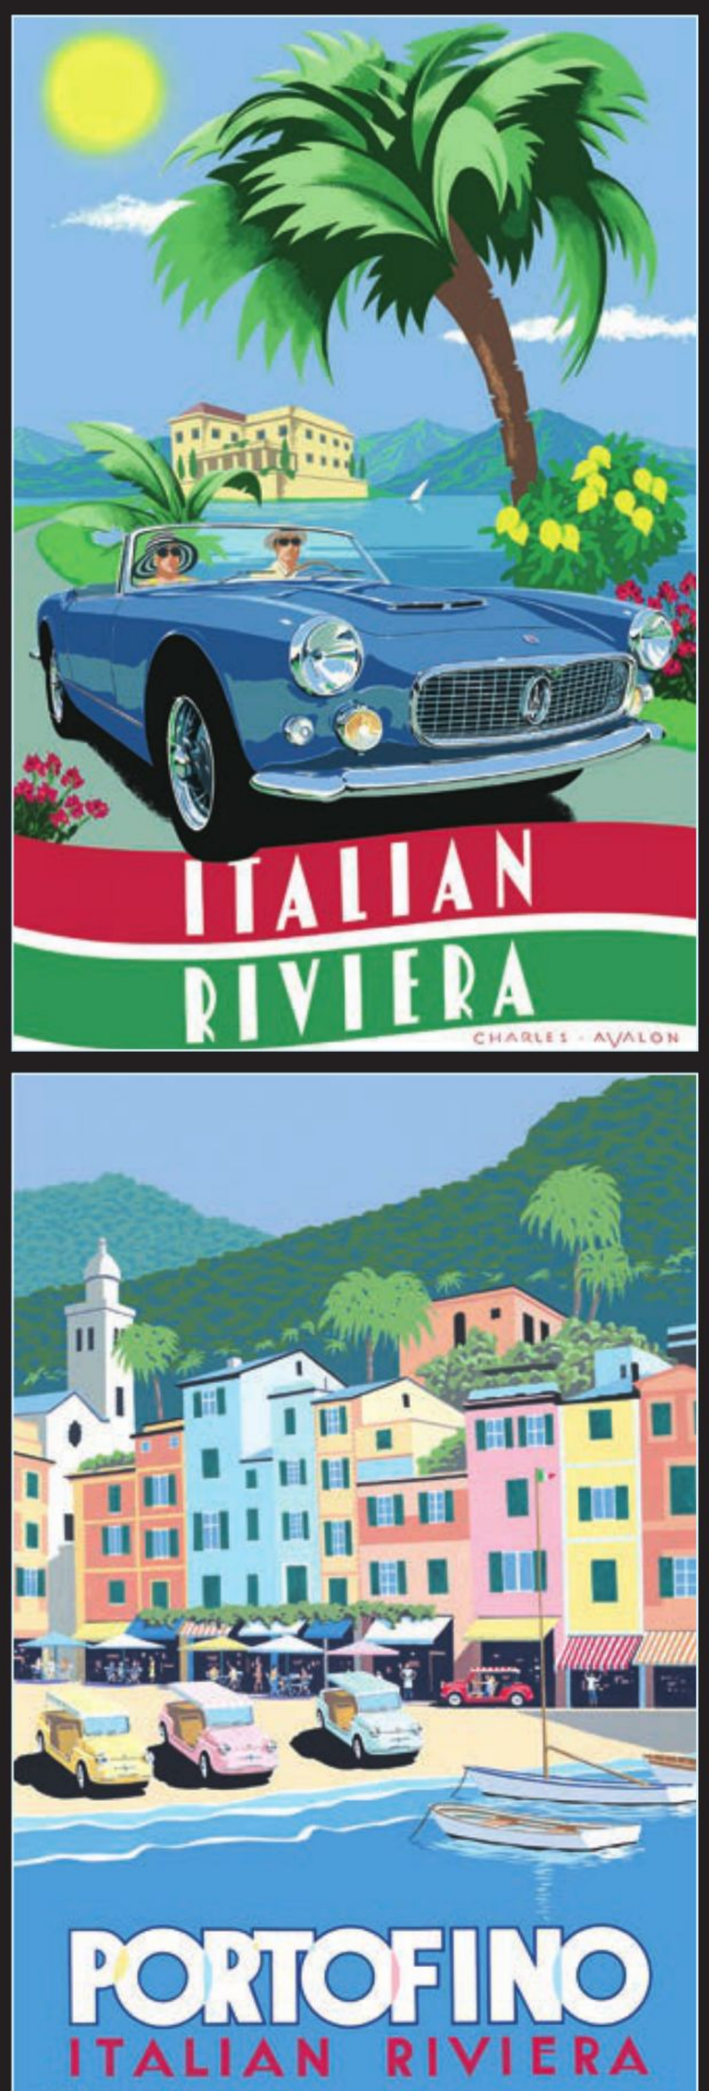

It's always a nice touch to follow up with a thank you card or e-card to let your guests know what you have bought with their contribution. In the case of commissioning a bespoke piece of art, using this as the cover illustration on a card is the perfect way to do this.

MOROCCAN magic

Hannah Faulder discovers that whatever you want from your honeymoon, you can find it at Mazagan Beach and Golf Resort in Morocco

If, like me and my husband, you want to spend your holiday ticking off activities but your partner wants to lounge by the pool, then Mazagan Beach and Golf Resort in Morocco might just be your ideal honeymoon destination. Year-round sun: tick. Action-packed activities: tick. Fun with the kids: tick. Luxury: tick – there's not much this place doesn't offer. And it's not by accident. Everything is meticulously planned and designed to cater to your every need within its 250 hectares of paradise.

A snappy three-hour flight, plus a one-hour transfer from Casablanca Airport, and you'll find yourself winding down Mazagan's grand driveway and seeing the resort emerging from its lush grounds in all of its decadent Moorish glory. As the only destination of its kind in Morocco, you might just find yourself rubbing shoulders with royalty and celebrities – I'm basically BFFs with Dougie from McFly now.

You can expect to find traditional Moroccan influences alongside contemporary luxe – think ornately carved doors, colourful lanterns, textured rugs and mosaic tiles. There are 13 restaurants and bars, a huge spa, the most glamorous gym imaginable, an 18-hole golf course and North Africa's biggest casino.

STAY

It's always a little disorienting arriving somewhere after dark, and the stylish but seemingly endless corridors of Mazagan heightened the confusion. I didn't need to worry; within a couple of minutes, a friendly chap with a walkie-talkie (who had clearly been sent to find the lost Englishwoman with too much luggage) was guiding me to my room. This was the level of service I came to expect here. Once inside, I was met with the most enormous marshmallowy bed, a spacious bathroom and floor-to-ceiling windows – in the morning, these revealed incredible views across gardens and the secluded 9km beach beyond. I was told that if you're awake early enough (I wasn't), you can watch the resort's herd of rescue horses take their morning gallop across the deserted sands. Beautiful (I imagine).

Within the walls of Mazagan, you feel untouched by the outside world. The feeling of serenity is in every corner of the resort, which is especially incredible considering there are 500 rooms here. Sometimes I could walk around for 10 minutes and not bump into another soul.

EXPERIENCE

This place goes all out when it comes to experiences and activities. I'll confess that I'm a total wuss, so looking at my itinerary and seeing quad-biking, zip-lining and horse-riding did send me into a mild panic. However, I'm pleased to report I stepped out of my comfort zone – and I'm so glad I did! First up, I was introduced to the sassy Caramel, my noble steed for the hour. We rode along the practically deserted beach in the sunshine with the sound of the waves lapping on to the shore – what an incredible moment and an absolute must-do for honeymooners.

Next up, we jumped on some quad bikes and whizzed along the beach in hot pursuit of our guide, who took us to see an incredible shipwreck protruding from the water. He was also our personal photographer, getting snaps that made my group look like the most badass girl band of all time! After this, I had caught the action bug, and flinging myself down a zip line at high speed through the trees was the next logical step.

Bringing things back to my normal pace, we wandered through the idyllic grounds to the spa, where, in a moment of madness, I decided against the planned full-body massage and instead opted for the hammam. The authentic Moroccan bathing ritual was certainly an experience! First off, you sit in an incredibly hot steam room where a lady washes you down with eucalyptus oil. Next, she showers you and lays you on a huge marble plinth and scrubs your skin with a mitt, which is akin to sandpaper. Then you're showered again, smothered in a mud mask, wrapped in a towel and left to bake on the plinth. The end result: seriously smooth skin! I felt like a newborn baby, and I've been recommending a – frankly bizarre – hammam to anyone who'll listen.

EAT

Foodies will love the choice of 13 restaurants and bars here. There are two huge buffets offering everything you could possibly want alongside high-end eateries that specialise in different cuisines. For breakfast, it's worth heading to Olives and sitting by the pool, where fresh food, soft music and elaborately served mint tea all add to the chilled-out vibe.

One evening, we opted for the elegant Sel de Mer, which serves the finest seafood. Fellow veggies, don't despair! They whipped me up a yummy quinoa stack and vegetable pasta. I'd also recommend the rustic charm of La Cave for warming French fare.

LOVE

The final evening was spent looking out at the setting sun, cocktail in hand, watching the golden rays twinkle across the waves. It was a perfectly romantic time to reflect on a trip that offered everything honeymooners could want: adventure, luxury and unadulterated romance in equal measure.

A TASTE OF PARADISE

Editor Claire Ridley travelled to the island of Anguilla in the Caribbean to discover what this popular honeymoon destination has to offer

Enjoying #qualitytime at Curtain Bluff #curtainpics

When the opportunity arose to experience what's new for 2020 on this luxurious island in the Eastern Caribbean, I packed my passport and bikini and was ready to fly! The lure of its 33 pristine beaches with powder-white sand and clear turquoise sea – regularly voted some of the best in the region – along with the promise of some winter sun had me jumping on board the Virgin Atlantic flight from London Gatwick bound for the British West Indies.

It's a good idea to break the journey with a one-night stopover in Antigua. Curtain Bluff is a spectacular all-inclusive resort set against the backdrop of not one but two palm-fringed beaches – Bay Beach and Surf Beach. I stayed in a stunning one-bedroom, split-level Bluff Suite boasting panoramic sea views from the terrace.

Honeymooners can while away the day in a hammock or snorkel around the reef to discover a rich variety of sea life. For active types, there's scuba diving, waterskiing and basketball, all included in the room rate, while those wanting something more relaxing will love the spa treatments available in the private couple's treatment room.

The Seagrape restaurant offers beachfront dining, while the plantation-style Tamarind Restaurant is located in a more secluded setting, both served by the most extensive wine cellar in the area – be sure to ask for a private tasting.

Wish you were here

Boarding the inter-island Trans Anguilla Airways flight (prepare for a very small plane!), I was excited to touch down on this small yet perfectly formed jewel of the Caribbean where I was greeted by Colwayne from the Anguilla Tourist Board and whisked off to visit the Valley Street Festival, a vibrant introduction to the local arts and crafts scene. A 20-minute massage here from Big Joe really helped me to recover from the flight and relax into island life where, as the locals say, you should 'make time to lime' (hang out!)

Next up was a scenic tour of this honeymoon hotspot pointing out areas of interest including The Valley (the capital city) and Crocus Hill (the highest point). Lunch at the Bayside Grill beach bar at da'Vida Restaurant & Spa was my first introduction to Johnny cakes – a doughnut-like savoury snack – and the local mahi-mahi fish giving me some much-needed energy for a two-hour afternoon kayaking tour from Crocus Bay to Little Bay with Liquid Glow. Through the clear-bottom kayaks I spotted tropical fish and even a turtle as we paddled along the sapphire shores, stopping for a snorkel around the cliff edge at the secluded Little Bay. Honeymooners will love the romantic night kayaking tour they offer, where you get the chance to see turtles sleeping at the bottom of the ocean.

It was soon time to check into the redesigned, award-winning CuisinArt Golf Resort & Spa located on Rendezvous Bay that was to be my home for the next three nights. It's a glamorous white building with azure blue touches and a Mediterranean feel mixed with Caribbean flair (think of the architecture in Santorini and you get the idea). KazBar, the lounge area in the lobby, is a Moroccan-inspired space furnished with pops of bright colour, ideal for relaxing with rum and tapas while enjoying the live music. All 91 suites (including the Beachfront Junior Suite where I stayed), seven villas and two penthouses have been recently renovated and boast a bright coastal feel.

This super-stylish resort promises a gourmet-dining scene where guests can enjoy tastes from around the globe, including authentic Anguillan food created by new executive chef Juan Bochenski. He uses local ingredients and sustainable practices, and dishes include sushi and sashimi at the award-winning Japanese restaurant Tokyo Bay.

After a dip in the pool and some much-needed sunbathing time in a private cabana, it was time to get ready for dinner at Maundays Club located at dreamy resort Belmond Cap Juluca. Here, I sampled the tasty Peruvian menu including the mouth-watering Caribbean fish ceviche.

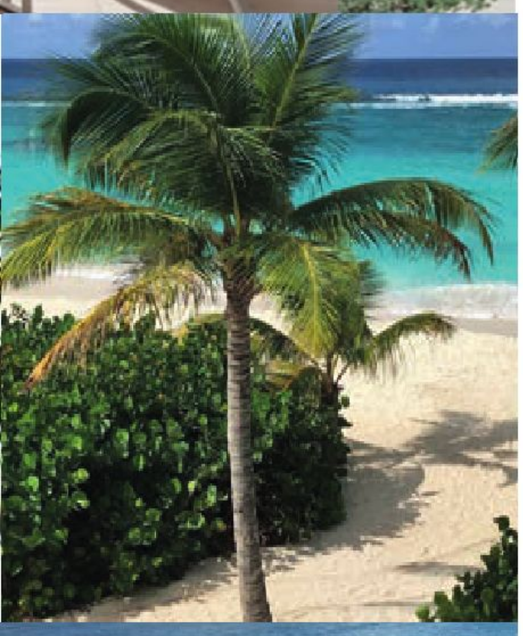

This romantic hideaway nestled on Maundays Bay offers Insta-worthy snaps at every turn and by day, the resort's turquoise VW Campervans and vintage-style bicycles allow for easy viewing of the grounds. A horse ride along the beach at Meads Bay on Tosh, proudly led by owner Zambezi, was a highlight and is suitable for riders of all levels. Check out the sunset excursions; great for honeymooners.

Beyond the beach

Breakfast at Mosaic at CuisinArt certainly didn't disappoint, with the banana bread, coconut muffins and reviving smoothies so delicious I just had to order seconds. The restaurant features an open kitchen and wrap-around bar and is also open for dinner. After a swim in the ocean and enjoying the soft sand between my toes, it was time to be transported to the jaw-droppingly beautiful Shoal Bay East. (The easiest way to travel around the island is with Premier Taxi and Tours). This stunning stretch of sand is home to the Zemi Beach House Hotel & Spa boasting infinity pools and picturesque vistas. To say I ate well here was an understatement, with mahi-mahi tacos and hand-crafted coconut mocktails on the menu at the Zemi Beach Club. This was followed by a therapeutic massage at the zen-like Zemi Thai House Spa before enjoying the spectacular sunset that this island is well known for.

That evening, I headed for dinner at Café Celeste inside the colonial-style Malliouhana resort simply oozing with glamour and Caribbean charm, perched on the stunning Meads Bay. Highlights on the menu include red snapper, conch curry served with coconut dumplings and yummy plantain fritters.

Another day in paradise

Fully immersed in island life, I enjoyed an early morning yoga and meditation session followed by a refreshing dip in the healing waters pool in the Spa by CuisinArt. This tranquil spot is home to 16 treatment rooms, including a couple's suite featuring an outdoor Jacuzzi, where a heated bamboo massage and aqua massage are on the menu. The Scrub Blend Bar experience isn't to be missed, giving guests the option to make their own spa product to take home with them, and other more adventurous activities include aquatic kickboxing, stand-up paddleboard yoga and tennis (with lessons available). There's also a fun cookery class to learn how to make Portuguese petiscos and a rum and cocktail-making lesson.

Golf enthusiasts will love the 18-hole Greg Norman Signature Design Championship course, the only one on the island, situated close by on the resort's sister property, The Reef by CuisinArt. This oceanfront boutique hotel boasts 80 rooms and suites built across four beachfront buildings and an open-air lobby. Foodies will love The Yacht Club Restaurant, opening on to the feature pool, serving breakfast and dinner while Breezes Beachfront Restaurant & Bar offers a lounge-style atmosphere for lunch and dinner. Sundowners are a must-try at Santorini at the Clubhouse, also open for lunch.

There's a cool party vibe at this hotel with regular live DJ sets around the pool and poolside treatments available to book through Spa to You.

Next up was a visit to the colourful Arts & Crafts Center in the West End, a treasure trove of island trinkets including conch shells to take home. From here, I headed to the Sunshine Shack beach bar and grill perched on Rendezvous Bay, a short stroll along the beach from CuisinArt, where I tucked into the delicious grilled lobster accompanied by the local Carib lager. It's well worth the walk and you're encouraged to scribble a message with your name on the shack before you leave.

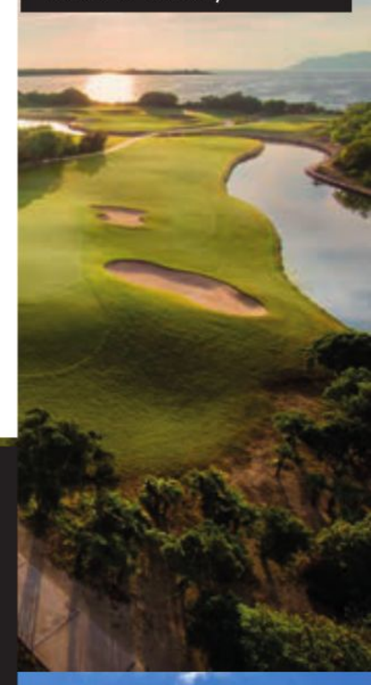

Coming to the end of my magical trip, as the sun went down, the wonderful team at CuisinArt arranged for me to experience some private dining at the water's edge at the Beach Bar & Grill where I enjoyed an amazing array of food and live music. I departed Clayton J. Lloyd International Airport with a smile on my face that lasted the entire way home – this tropical paradise, one of the best-kept secrets in the Caribbean, will always hold a special place in my heart ♥

Romantic GETAWAY

Olivia Gibson reviews the Castle Hotel Windsor

I didn't quite realise how incredible my stay would be at the Castle Hotel Windsor, throughout the trip my partner and I created amazing memories full of happiness, laughter and relaxation. Maybe it was the charming décor, impeccable service or the fact that Windsor Castle is nestled right opposite the hotel – creating the perfect backdrop.

When the chance to visit the establishment first arose, I immediately jumped at the opportunity. For a while, it's been on my bucket list to visit the UK town but something would always come up. But not this time, the stars aligned and next thing I know, my bags are packed and I'm on my way.

The hotel was first built in 1528 and was previously known as The Mermaid Inn serving as a bar for the town's 1,000 residents and is now one of the oldest buildings in the area.
After being lovingly restored, the hotel still boasts elegance of its rich and fascinating history left behind.

Throughout the hotel, many features highlight the venue's story such as the Pennington Penny which was an in-house token issued by George Pennington back in 1656. I loved how the authentic essence of the venue has been kept and highlighted with some original features, when you look closely stories start to come alive.

PURE INDULGENCE

When stepping through the doors for the first time – and thinking how amazing everything looked – friendly staff quickly greeted us and took their time to explain the local area with the best places to see – they couldn't have been more helpful!

With 108 rooms available ranging from suites, superior and the classic rooms, there's something for everyone. Inside our room we found a 40-inch flat-screen TV, White Company toiletries, minibar and iron. After a long week, I was very excited to try out the queen size bed which was covered with Egyptian cotton. It was so comfortable that I ended up having a nap! Once I had awoken from my slumber, we headed off for a romantic walk around the area and discovered plenty of independent boutiques, clothes shops and cafes – we walked around in comfortable silence just enjoying each others' company. As we visited in winter, the night drew in early leaving the dark streets beautifully lit.

TO DINE FOR

We couldn't fault our dining experience at The Marco Pierre White restaurant located in the hotel and I must say, it's one of the best meals I've ever had – and I'm not exaggerating! The service was faultless and I have told everyone about it. For starter I had Mr White's Scotch Egg which tasted divine, the egg inside was cooked to perfection. For main I opted for The Governor's Fried Haddock and Triple Cooked Chips, a simple dish which is my personal favourite and I wasn't disappointed.

After dinner we headed off to the bar where we enjoyed plenty of cocktails, my favourite was the classic daiquiri and spent our time relaxing on the comfortable chairs, it was so lovely to be able to spend time together without any distractions.

After having a lovely rest, we started our day with a great breakfast. It was a buffet-style set-up with choices of hot foods or continental. My partner says the blueberry muffin was his favourite, I would have loved to try some but I was so full-up!

While eating, guests could watch the changing of the guards right outside the window, it was impressive and there was an excited buzz all around – it was like a movie scene!

It was sadly time to leave; we both loved this hotel so much and will be booking our next trip back later this year!
