BACKBENCH BUDGET WARNING

PM FACES REVOLT
OVER 2p FUEL HIKE

Pressure . . . Boris yesterday

BORIS Johnson faces a backbench defeat if he allows the first fuel duty rise in ten years in the Budget.

A letter signed by 53 Tory MPs urges Chancellor Rishi Sunak to ditch plans to end the freeze, which would see petrol and diesel rise 2p a litre from next month.

It came as the Federation of Small Business, representing 4.5million firms, backed The Sun's Keep It Down campaign over pump prices. FSB boss Mike Cherry said: "Nine in ten small business owners say cars or vans are crucial to their firm's success. They already pay more than 50p in tax for every litre of fuel."

EXCLUSIVE by MATT DATHAN, Deputy Political Editor

"Raising that further would hurt millions. Not every small business has the luxury of being based in a big city with lots of transport options. Many simply have to use local roads to get around."

In the MPs' letter, signed by the likes of ex-party leader Iain Duncan Smith and ex-Cabinet ministers David Davis and Chris Grayling, the group say they are "very concerned" at the prospect of overturning an election pledge not to hike fuel duty. The letter also warns Mr Sunak not to "balance environmentalism on the backs of working people."

It adds: "They depend on their cars, vans and lorries to get about and run a small business."

"Every penny of a rise hits their financial security."

Senior Tory Robert Halfon added: "Let's not be the Government that hammers hard-working families and hurts public services by increasing fuel costs. Let's be the Government that the people who elected, and trusted us, expect us to be."

Greener E10 petrol made with ten per cent ethanol – double that found in the current E5 – will be available in the UK from 2021.

It has the potential to cut CO2 emissions from transport by 750,000 tonnes a year – equivalent to taking 350,000 cars off the road.

Allegations . . . Priti

Boris: I'm sticking by Patel

By TOM NEWTON DUNN
Political Editor

THE PM yesterday declared he was "sticking by" his embattled Home Secretary despite spiralling bullying allegations.

More claims emerged yesterday of Priti Patel humiliating and belittling her staff for years across three ministries.

Boris Johnson sat her beside him in the Commons to show his support.

He insisted: "The Home Secretary is doing an outstanding job – delivering change, putting police on the streets, cutting crime and delivering a new immigration system. And I'm sticking by her."

Unions say if the claims are true, Downing Street may have to pay millions to alleged victims for promoting Ms Patel while knowing her abusive management style.

Greta EU
Co2 blast

GRETA Thunberg hit out at the EU's new climate change efforts as a "surrender" yesterday.

The Swedish activist, 17, said the move to be carbon neutral by 2050 was "completely insufficient".

Greta told MEPs in Brussels: "You're giving up on your promises."

"This must come to an end. This is surrender."

If agreed by members, the new law sets a net zero emissions target.

But countries such as Poland would be able to carry on polluting, while others pick up the slack.

Figures show Britain's emissions are at their lowest since 1888, down 29 per cent in ten years.

IT'S SUPER JOE'S DAY!

By JAMES BEAL, US Editor

PRESIDENTIAL hopeful Joe Biden points the way ahead – as his Democratic rival Mike Bloomberg quit the race for the White House yesterday.

Tycoon Bloomberg, 78, pumped £390million into his bid but has now endorsed Biden.

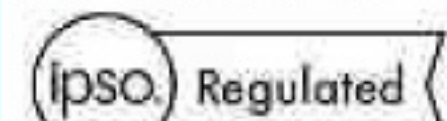

He admitted defeat after failing to secure enough delegates on Super Tuesday, when 14 states voted for candidates. After winning only in American Samoa, he said: "A viable path to the nomination no longer exists."

Biden, 77, will now battle Bernie Sanders for the right to take on Donald Trump in November's election.

The Corbynista candidate wants to rewrite Clause 4 of the party's constitution to commit to "expanding democratic public ownership".

VICTIM UPDATES

VICTIMS of crime are to automatically get updates on when the perpetrator will leave jail – in a major victory for The Sun.

Their rights will be spelt out in a new Victims' Code being published today.

It contains 12 overarching principles, including the right to attend Parole Board hearings, to be paid expenses and have returned all property that was stolen or damaged through crime.

Justice Minister Alex Chalk said: "Simplifying the code is a vital step in efforts to rebuild confidence in the criminal justice system."

GREEK forces were yesterday said to have shot dead a migrant and injured five others on the Turkish border.

Officials said a man died of a chest wound during clashes at Pazarkule. Greece called it "fake news".

WILLIAM PLEDGE

PRINCE William promised the Royal Family would work to strengthen ties with Ireland on a post-Brexit tour of the country.

The duke told dignitaries in Dublin that the changing relationship between the UK and the EU would require both sides to work together.

William, 37, then hailed the bond of "friendship, understanding and shared vision" between Britain and Ireland.

He added: "My family is determined to continue playing our part in protecting, preserving and strengthening that bond."

BOND FILM DELAYED BY VIRUS FOR 7 MONTHS

By HOWELL DAVIES
Senior Showbiz Reporter

JAMES Bond has been left shaken and stirred by the coronavirus crisis — with the new film delayed by months.

Movie chiefs said yesterday that No Time to Die was being pushed back until November.

The film — Bond's 25th screen outing and the last to feature Daniel Craig as the suave spy 007 — was due to be in cinemas from April 3.

But amid fears of a coronavirus global pandemic, the China premiere in Beijing and a promotional tour of Asia had already been cancelled.

A new release date of November 12 was announced by MGM, Universal and producers Michael G Wilson and Barbara Broccoli.

In a statement, the official 007 Twitter page said: "After careful consideration and thorough evaluation of the global theatrical marketplace, the release of No Time to Die will be postponed until November."

The Sun told yesterday that film bosses were thinking of bringing the release date forward by a month in case people stayed away from cinemas for fear of infection. And earlier this week, Bond fans called for the long-awaited movie — directed by Cary Fukunaga, 42 — to be delayed.

In an open letter, the unofficial fansite MI6-HQ insisted: "There is a significant chance that cinemas will be closed, or their attendance severely reduced. It's just a movie — the health and well-being of fans around the world, and their families, is more important."

Big win... Gillian and then hubby Adrian in 2012

Driving force... Audi fan Gillian snapped up a fleet of cars with her winnings, including five of the German motors

- EX WAS A KEPT MAN
- SHE OFTEN LOST RAG

Strife 'n times of jackpot mother

By ROB PATTINSON

MUM-of-two Gillian's life has been a rollercoaster since scooping a £148million lottery jackpot in 2012 with her then husband Adrian.

A year later, the pair from Suffolk split blaming the stress of their win.

Audi-mad Gillian moved back to her native Scotland with her son and daughter — then dated car dealer Alan Warnock, who sold her five of the German motors.

In 2015, Alan popped the question and Gillian diversified from her property business by opening a café.

But in 2016, she laid off 21 staff from her failing business and was blasted for flying off to the Maldives after breaking the bad news to them.

That year, Gillian fell out with her dad Ian McCulloch, then 71 — accusing him of trying to seize control of her jackpot.

In 2017, she split from fiancé Alan before dating Gavin Innes — but they split after rows.

In 2018, Gillian married local man Brian Deans — a convicted fraudster — in a lavish ceremony.

But months later she was formally charged with assaulting Mr Innes.

In December, The Sun revealed Gillian had been supporting ex Adrian in a move to Scotland to be nearer her and their kids.

She hit rock bottom this week when she admitted a reduced charge of breach of the peace. After hailing her huge charity contributions, a court let her leave without punishment — but still convicted of a crime.

She described her jackpot win in court as “a mixed blessing”.

£74m lotto Gillian treated me like a chihuahua in Paris Hilton's handbag

MEGA-wealthy Gillian Bayford's ex-boyfriend last night claimed: “She treated me like a chihuahua in Paris Hilton's handbag.”

In an exclusive interview, Gavin Innes told of his life as a kept man with the £74million lottery winner.

The 45-year-old dad claimed she used her vast fortune to control him.

And he told how their fiery relationship was characterised by her demanding behaviour — and her regularly losing her temper with him.

After one wild night, she WhatsApp messaged an apology, confessing: “I know I've been real horny ain't I...sorry...feel bad though...like demanding.”

Gavin claimed Gillian — who was convicted this week of attacking him — begged him to have a baby with her and constantly talked about marriage.

She would make promises of giving him £5million in cash and a house under a pre-nuptial agreement, he said.

Gavin explained: “I got to drive around in her amazing cars, use an iPhone she bought me and stay in her mansion. I didn't value any of it, but she thought I did.

“The deal always felt to me like I had to please her.

“I felt trapped in a golden cage, like she is.

“If I ever tried to disagree with her on anything then I would lose access to the Range Rover Evoque and Audi A3 she insured me on.”

Gillian, 47, scooped a share of a £148million EuroMillions jackpot with her then husband Adrian in 2012.

The pair split in 2013 and she returned from Suffolk to Dundee in her native Scotland.

In court this week, her lawyer tried to claim that Gavin — an old school pal of Gillian — targeted her for their six-month affair as a “pension fund”. But Gavin has now revealed he had no idea that property developer Gillian was a lottery winner when they met up.

He said he even paid on their unglamorous early dates.

He insisted: “I was never a gold-digger, I really fell for Gillian. I was in a difficult place at the time and we just clicked.

“Not many take the time to get to know her like me, they are only interested in what they can get from her.

“I think that's why she wanted to control me with money like everyone else.

“But the truth is, I felt like Paris Hilton's dog being carted around in a handbag.”

He added: “I hated it, but I stayed with her because I knew there was a good person in there somewhere and she asked me to be patient."

Dad Gavin, from Dundee, said the pair met when he approached her to be a trustee for his male domestic abuse charity.

He said: "She turned up outside my council house in an £80,000 Porsche Macan.

"We went to a cafe and just talked, but we made each other laugh and there was definitely a spark. On our first date we went to a cheap carvery and I bought the cups of tea.

"In fact, the first four or five times we met up it was me who paid for everything.

"There was no masterplan, we just got on.

"She asked me to meet again to talk about the charity and this time she turned up in her Audi

SQ7 4x4. That's when I thought, hang on, 'Where is all this money coming from?'

"I asked her about it and she told me she was a lottery winner."

Within weeks their relationship became physical.

Gavin said: "I bought her a Robbie Williams blanket for her birthday . . . and it obviously worked.

"The next time we saw each other after that was at my house.

"She started kissing me and we had sex on my living room sofa. After that we were a couple.

"She showered me with presents. She bought me an iPhone and an Audi A3.

"She bought me a £115,000 house and talked of setting me up as a property developer.

"It was mad but I wasn't interested in the money." Within weeks of them becoming an item, Gavin said Gillian started uncontrollably losing her temper, shouting and pushing him.

He said: "It screwed with my head. She would be flipping her lid over something really petty.

"Then she would be back to being all lovey.

"I didn't want to hurt her feelings so I said we should live together.

"After that, she constantly brought up marriage. She seemed desperate to have a secure unit.

"But she made everything so intense. She wanted to have everything now – she had no patience.

"I remember once she took her car into the Audi garage for a repair. She saw a picture of a limited edition £70k RS5 in Jamiroquai green and bought it on the spot.

"Money had completely lost its meaning to her." Gavin told how Gillian would take away things from him just like they were a child's toys.

He added: "Once she took back the A3 she had given me – like I had been a bad boy. I told her to shove her Audi up her arse and refused to talk to her."

Gavin claimed he was attacked twice during their relationship – which ended in November 2017.

He said: "The whole relationship was so ironic. Here was this woman I had contacted for help starting a domestic abuse charity."

Gavin added: "The more time I spent with Gillian, the more I worried about her. I worried the money had made her feel insecure – that she could never trust that anyone loved her for her."

Bayford went on to marry convicted fraudster Brian Deans in 2018. On Tuesday, she was convicted of a breach of the peace after admitting both 2017 attacks.

She was admonished – meaning she was able to go free with a stern warning from a judge.

Last night she said she never bought any vehicles for Gavin.

She added: "They were my cars which he borrowed and used from time to time. I didn't take things away from him during arguments."

Gillian denied there was any discussion of marriage between the pair. Asked whether he paid for early dates, she said: "I think he paid for a cup of tea the first time."

GETTING THE COLD SHOULDER

Curtis met Maura on Love Island

● MAURA & CURTIS SPLIT OVER ICE MAN
 ● CLOSENESS SPARKS 'BUST-UP' WITH WIFE

EXCLUSIVE by HOWELL DAVIES, Senior Showbiz Reporter

DANCING On Ice's Maura Higgins split with Love Island co-star Curtis Pritchard over rows about her closeness with professional skater Alexander Demetriou.

Maura, 29, and Alex became increasingly tight while performing together.

It sparked bust-ups between Alex, 28, and his skater wife Carlotta Edwards.

And the fallout was the final straw for Irish beauty Maura's fragile relationship, according to sources on the ITV show.

Maura, who was eliminated from the competition last month, ended her romance with Curtis, 24, earlier this week after seven months.

It came after reports that Carlotta did not trust Maura and believed her husband had "had his head turned".

A source said: "Maura spent hours and hours with Alex in rehearsals for weeks and they have got really close."

"They have grown very friendly and it's not gone unnoticed with the rest of the cast and crew – or Carlotta."

"She is furious about their increasingly cosy relationship which has continued despite

Chat . . Maura & Alex yesterday

Maura being knocked out of the competition. There are clearly some feelings there which Maura can't help."

All three are expected to be at Sunday evening's final. Yesterday, Maura was snapped having a coffee with Alex at the Riverside ice rink in Chelmsford, Essex – near to her home.

Onlookers said she appeared upset and in deep conversation.

Carlotta, 30, had been competing in the show with magician Ben Hanlin, 33, but they were knocked out on Sunday.

Blackpool-born Alex and Canadian Carlotta met while appearing in Disney on Ice, have been together for 11 years and got married in 2016.

They joined the ITV series last year when they were paired with Pussycat Dolls star Melody Thornton, 35, and ex-EastEnders actor Richard Blackwood, 47.

Maura announced her split from Curtis on Instagram on Monday night after weeks of denying they were on the rocks.

She wrote: "There is no easy way to get through a breakup and no bad feeling on either side. We tried to make it work but it wasn't to be."

● FINALIST Joe Swash dashed to hospital on Tuesday for an op after partner Alex Murphy's skate hit his ear. He posted a video of a huge bandage and said: "I have to keep it on until Sunday. My ear got infected. They washed out all the goo."

BARRYMORE 'HELL'

MICHAEL Barrymore yesterday told of his "20-year hell" over the death of a man in his swimming pool.

But the star, 67, insisted he does not know what happened to Stuart Lubbock, 31, at his Essex mansion in 2001.

Asked on ITV's Good Morning Britain if he had anything fresh to tell police, Barrymore said: "I honestly wish I did. I've put myself through 20 years of hell. I don't know anything."

He went on: "I'm not looking for sympathy, I'm a big boy. How many times am I supposed to be kicked?"

He said a Channel 4 documentary about the death was "vile and vicious".

DIER IN FAN BRAWL

TOTTENHAM'S Eric Dier could face a ban after charging into stands to confront fans after an FA Cup tie last night.

The England midfielder, 26, was said to be defending his brother, who was being insulted by supporters after Spurs' home exit to Norwich on penalties.

Manager Jose Mourinho said: "This person insulted Eric, the younger brother was not happy with the situation and Eric was not happy. But we as professionals cannot do what he did."

The FA and Spurs will study footage. Mourinho added: "If the club (takes action) I won't agree, but he did wrong."

DANGERS

By NICK McDERMOTT
and SHAUN WOOLLER

THE UK recorded its biggest daily rise in coronavirus cases yesterday with 36 more testing positive — bringing the total number of infected here to 87.

One is an NHS worker in her 30s in Cumbria who caught the virus while on a family holiday in Italy.

Three other workers in the health service are known to be among those infected.

The previous highest daily rise was 12 cases.

Five of the new Covid-19 patients — three in England, one in Scotland and one in Northern Ireland — caught the bug in the UK.

As fears grew that the virus could spread within the NHS, King's College Hospital in South London was put into lockdown after two recent patients tested positive for the killer flu.

Last night the Government was accused of secrecy by stopping daily updates on locations of new infections.

Professor Paul Ashford, a former Public Health England director, said: "They should be sharing the data as much as possible, to make the public equal partners."

Paul Hunter, professor in medicine at the University of East Anglia, said: "Wednesday's increase represents a three times greater increase in new cases per day than we've seen in the last few days."

"However, most are associated with known cases or have history of foreign travel."

"Three of the cases appear to have no such contacts — this is further evidence that the infection is spreading in the community."

Fears the virus is rapidly spreading have led to paranoid commuters trying to defend themselves against it in bizarre ways.

They include one passenger seen on a bus in London wearing a plastic container over her head.

Others have been seen wearing full gas masks, plastic bags and even babies' nappies over their heads. A dog was also spotted with a mask on the Tube in London.

But England's chief medical officer Professor Chris Whitty has said wearing face masks will do little to stop its spread.

He warned the coronavirus will kill Britons — and he added that an epidemic was "highly likely".

Prof Whitty said: "We think it is likely that we will move into onward transmission and an epidemic here in the UK."

Government officials moved their handling of the crisis from "containment" to "delay". New measures could now include allowing confirmed cases to remain at home if they feel well

● GOLDSMITHS University in South East London said a visitor to one of the university's halls of residence had tested positive;

● WIZZ Air unveiled plans to slash routes, cut costs and freeze recruitment after it saw bookings plunge amid virus fears.

Prof Whitty warned a major outbreak would lead to "profound" disruption across the NHS.

A Government source said 50,000 non-urgent operations could be axed over two months to free up beds for coronavirus victims.

PM Boris Johnson is now having daily morning meetings with Prof Whitty as the country gears up for a major outbreak.

Mr Johnson chaired a meeting last night of the emergency Cobra committee with Health Secretary Matt Hancock. Earlier he announced new sick pay changes so anyone self-isolating is paid from day one.

Fresh coronavirus cases have now been confirmed in Oldham, Trafford, Liverpool and South Ribble in Lancs. Elsewhere, Buckingham University and the University of London have postponed graduation ceremonies over infection fears.

And Sony Pictures Entertainment has closed its London office after one of its employees was potentially exposed to the illness.

In Devon, a 20,000-patient GP practice has closed for a fortnight as a result of coronavirus.

Meanwhile, Britons who have returned from the Costa Adeje Hotel in Tenerife have been advised to self-isolate for two weeks. And Google has cancelled its annual developer conference in California because of virus fears.

Nine countries — Andorra, Hungary, Jordan, Latvia, Morocco, Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Senegal and Tunisia — have reported their first Covid-19 cases.

The virus has killed more than 3,200 worldwide and 80 per cent of new infections are outside China.

In Italy, Europe's worst-hit country, the death toll has reached 107.

Advice . . . Mr Whitty

Experts consider bans on crowds

ADVICE

By TOM NEWTON DUNN

THE country's top science experts are meeting today to consider bans on large public gatherings.

The Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies will review data on how the virus is spreading.

It could prompt draconian measures leading to major sports and music events being cancelled.

Parliament could also be shut down.

No10 confirmed that "discussions are already taking place" about the closure of Parliament.

Commons Speaker Sir Lindsay Hoyle has also been briefed on the risks by Chief Medical Officer Chris Whitty.

About 8,000 people work at Westminster.

Switzerland has already limited public gatherings to 1,000 people.

PM Boris Johnson said experts would say more in days on "what we are going to do to delay the advance of coronavirus in large gatherings".

But a Government source said: "The experts' views is we're not there yet for banning public gatherings. The evidence is not at all clear whether it even works."

Two Brussels EU staff yesterday tested positive.

A European Defence Agency worker contracted the virus after returning from a trip to Italy. And an EU Council official caught it in Belgium.

More than 55,000 work across EU institutions.

Business bail-outs

BUSINESSES hit by the coronavirus emergency will need to be bailed out, the incoming Bank of England governor warned yesterday.

Andrew Bailey said the virus could damage the British economy and particularly hit small firms.

He added he had been in talks with Chancellor Rishi Sunak to "move quickly" to help struggling businesses.

But he refused to say if Britain would copy the US and slash interest rates to protect the economy from the threat.

Speaking to the Commons Select Committee, Mr Bailey said the authorities must be nimble in responding to the growing crisis.

2 STRAINS OF VIRUS FOUND

SCIENTISTS say coronavirus has "mutated" into two strains — with the most aggressive infecting 70 per cent of patients.

Research teams in China have been analysing the outbreak since it first emerged in December.

They warned that their analysis examined a limited range of data — 103 samples — and said more research was needed.

COUPLE JOIN TOLL

VICTIMS

A HOSPITAL worker and her partner tested positive for coronavirus.

The couple, who recently returned from a trip to northern Italy, have been self-isolating.

The woman, in her 30s, has not been back to Cumberland Infirmary in Carlisle, Cumbria, or had contact with any patients since her return.

She had a swab test on Monday and got the result on Tuesday.

Separately, a patient in Newcastle has been diagnosed with coronavirus. In South East London, a friend who visited a student at a university joined the confirmed cases.

Goldsmiths, which is, part of the University of London, said the case was discovered at one of its seven halls of residents.

It added that the student was in self-isolation as a precaution.

break. Professor Yvonne Doyle, medical director at Public Health England, said of the UK surge: "The majority of the new cases are linked to travel to affected countries, but we are carrying out contact tracing to understand how people acquired their infection."

"We are calling on everyone to help prevent the spread of coronavirus to help protect yourself and those around you."

"Our message is clear — simple hand washing with soap for 20 seconds is the key step we can all take to make a real difference in stopping this virus spread."

ITALY

ITALY has closed all schools and ordered sporting events to take place in empty stadiums.

The Government also told people to stop kissing — even the traditional peck on the cheek — hugging and shaking hands.

It came as the country's death toll rose by 28 to 107.

Schools and universities are to close until March 15. Sports will be spectator-free until April 3.

England's rugby team is due to play in Rome on March 14.

The Champions League match between Juventus and Lyon on March 17 will be played without fans, along with all domestic league fixtures. Cinemas and theatres also face closure.

A draft decree ordered "the suspension of events of any nature that entail the concentration of people and do not allow for a safety distance of at least one metre to be respected". Italy's PM Giuseppe Conte said the Government was trying to slow infections, which have been rising by about 500 per day.

He said: "Our hospitals risk being overwhelmed. We have a problem with intensive care units."

The number of cases since the outbreak surfaced 13 days ago rose to 3,089, from 2,502 on Tuesday. Around 3.5 per cent of those have died, said the Civil Protection Agency's Angelo Borrelli.

Lombardy and Veneto remain the main risk areas. Rome's Spallanzani infectious diseases hospital has 20 patients.

Players ordered toBAN

By BEN LEO

BINGO players at a Royal British Legion club were ordered into quarantine after one caught coronavirus from a close relative.

Twenty-five have been told to self-isolate after the card-marker tested positive.

Public Health England notified bingo club bosses in Hindhead — only three miles from Haslemere, the centre of Surrey's outbreak.

So far, four people have been struck down in the county.

MYTHBUSTER

THE OUTBREAK of Covid-19 has sparked a number of "dangerous" myths about tackling the disease. The World Health Organization has called it an "infodemic". FALSE CLAIMS INCLUDE:

- 1 VITAMIN C PROTECTS YOU
There is currently no solid proof that the supplement will help.
- 2 DRINKING EVERY 15MINS FLUSHES OUT COVID-19
People have suggested taking sips of water every 15 minutes helps flush the virus through the body where it'll get killed by stomach acid. Not true, says WHO.
- 3 SHAVING OFF FACIAL HAIR PROTECTS YOU
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends men shave their beards because they "make it impossible to get a good seal of the mask to the face". But removing facial hair won't prevent the spread of the bug.
- 4 HAND DRYERS KILL CORONAVIRUS
Rumours had circulated that using hot air from a hand-dryer for 30 seconds could kill the virus if it was on your hands. WHO says this isn't true.
- 5 GARGLING MOUTHWASH PROTECTS YOU
Mouthwash cannot protect you from infection with the new coronavirus.
- 6 EATING GARLIC PREVENTS INFECTION
While eating garlic can help to treat the common cold, it won't stop you from Covid-19.
- 7 YOUNG PEOPLE DON'T GET CORONAVIRUS
Young people are also at risk of Covid-19, despite patterns showing the elderly are struck more often.
- 8 UV LAMPS BEAT THE BUG
WHO have urged people not to use UV lamps to sterilise hands or other areas of skin in a bid to beat coronavirus as UV radiation can cause skin irritation.
- 9 THERMAL SCANNERS DETECT CORONAVIRUS
Thermal scanners at airports, train stations and other public places can detect those with a high temperature. They won't pick up those yet to display symptoms.
- 10 SPRAYING ALCOHOL OVER YOUR BODY WORKS
Not true and potentially dangerous.

said: "Everyone who was at Tuesday's night's bingo draw has been told to go home and stay there for 14 days because one person who was here then has tested positive. "Public Health England have refused to give out the name but we know that they are a member." The Legion called for calm and said a deep clean was under way. Officials were trying to trace people contacted by two of the others infected in Surrey – a husband and wife – as they have not been abroad. The woman is living in one room at the family's home, with meals delivered to her door. She told BBC Surrey: "Every time you hand back a plate, even though they are wearing gloves and everything is going straight into the dishwasher, you feel guilty you're handing them death." Their son, who goes to a local prep school, is also in self-isolation. He has not yet tested positive. Meanwhile, a dentist who visited Italy recently was yesterday confirmed as one of the new cases. Dr Richard Prais, whose practice is at Hampstead Garden Suburb in North London, has self-isolated. He was diagnosed after passing through Milan airport last week. Renee Zellweger, 50, has cancelled an appearance at the premiere of her movie, Judy, in Japan which has seen 1,000 cases and 12 deaths. The Bridget Jones star, who won an Oscar for the film, will instead do interviews by Skype. And socialite Jemima Goldsmith, 46, insisted she was "still not packing" after her neighbours in London left in an ambulance with medics in hazmat suits. She joked: "My (hypochondriac) son is now convinced he has a strain so insidious it has no symptoms." Earlier, she was blasted for making light of the virus by saying it was certain to kill her because she was "deeply unworried" about it. ben.leo@the-sun.co.uk

LOVE BUG WARNING

MILLIONS of Tinder singletons are being warned to take coronavirus precautions when meeting dates via the app.

Even a goodnight kiss looks out of the question as potential love-birds are being urged to keep a "social distance".

They are also being reminded to wash their hands thoroughly, carry hand sanitiser and avoid touching their faces. The warning says: "While we want you to continue to have fun, protecting yourself from the coronavirus is more important."

One user joked: "Don't worry Tinder. I don't get any matches to spread coronavirus to."

THE Sun SAYS

Grim increase

THE dramatic leap in UK coronavirus cases is a reality check for those who believe even the Government's warnings have been hysterical.

Chief medical officer Chris Whitty, an expert on infectious diseases, says this is almost sure now to become a deadly epidemic here. Let's take him seriously.

True, only 87 Brits are confirmed to have it so far and few caught it in Britain. But that looks certain to soar until the global race for a vaccine bears fruit.

It is true too that the vast majority will suffer mild symptoms. But the WHO says the percentage killed may be substantially higher than first thought. How long will the sage advice to wash our hands and stop touching our faces suffice?

Other nations are scrapping events and closing schools. So far our Queen has put on gloves and the Bond movie has been delayed. We may need more draconian steps sooner rather than later. And one thing is more certain:

Covid-19 is already a monumental global economic shock and likely to worsen.

Rish pickings

CHANCELLOR Rishi Sunak must listen on fuel duty . . . to Tory backbenchers, small firms and the Sun readers on this page.

Hiking petrol and diesel taxes, frozen for a decade thanks to our campaign, may seem trivial to Londoners with the Tube and decent buses to rely on.

It may even seem logical to increase electric car take-up.

The reality outside the capital, and in the former "Red Wall" regions, is it will make working people worse off, will come as a painful blow to van drivers and a bombshell for truckers.

And they won't respond by spending £25,000 on a battery-powered runabout they'll need to charge every few miles.

They will suffer it grimly, pass on the cost to customers if they can and resent that their new Tory Chancellor, as his first act, made their lives tougher.

Greener Britain

IT'S time for some perspective on Britain's role in mitigating climate change.

From all the Extinction Rebellion protests you might imagine we were among the world's worst polluters. In fact our carbon footprint is its smallest since 1888.

Far from "doing nothing", as Greta Thunberg claims, our emissions are down 29 per cent in a decade.

Two per cent of our power comes from coal. In Germany it's 40 – and China and India are building scores of new coal-burning plants. Heathrow's expansion has been halted while they build HUNDREDS of new airports.

And while we introduce bans and taxes that make Britain cleaner but threaten our prosperity, the world's mega-polluters carry on regardless.

Green campaigners should target those with the worst record, not one of the best.

PEOPLE FROM THE REAL WORLD APPEAL TO CHANCELLOR ON FUEL

THE Budget next week could end the ten-year freeze in fuel duty, hitting the pockets of families, small businesses and the self-employed.

If whispers in Westminster are true, Chancellor Rishi Sunak will bring in a fuel hike of 2p per litre in April.

One Tory MP has admitted: "I can't imagine the freeze will survive this Parliament."

It would mark the end of a

By KATE JACKSON

policy that George Osborne began in 2010.

The Sun's Keep It Down campaign has demanded that fuel duty stays at 58p per litre.

Tory MP Robert Halfon said: "Fuel duty rises affect businesses, the cost of food and public services."

And while it is thought Mr Sunak wants to increase the duty as part of a number of green measures, switching to public transport is not a realistic option for many.

DECISIONS . . . Rishi Sunak

Campaign group FairFuel UK estimates a family driving 12,000 miles a year would pay an extra £43 to fill up their car, while a large van driving 50,000 miles annually would see a £272 rise.

A fuel duty hike would risk alienating the former Labour voters who helped propel Boris Johnson to victory in December.

Here, voters from the Red Wall and beyond plead with Mr Sunak to think of them . . .

Time to do your duty, Rishi

NO OPTION . . .
Jayne would struggle if she had to rely on public transport

CLEANER and kitchen assistant Jayne is 54 and lives in Thornaby, North Yorks.

Her constituency, Stockton South, was a Tory gain from Labour in last year's General Election.

She says: "I use my car to go to work, take the kids to school and shop for the family. I spend about

Mum-of-five JAYNE MAHGAGHBOW

£20 a week on fuel. I never use public transport, it isn't practical where I live. You never know what time the buses are coming.

"We don't have an easy transport network like people have with the Tube in London."

"My dad lives in a village where the bus service has stopped completely. The only way I can see him is by driving.

"Any rise is going to hurt the pockets of the people who don't have a lot of money."

"I don't have large petrol bills but there are many people who have to work further afield and they really will be badly affected. People in the town would react negatively to the news. They have given Boris Johnson a chance and if the Conservatives put taxes up, there will be a backlash."

"This area was predominantly Labour and I don't think it will take much for new Conservative voters to say they will never vote for the Tories again."

Mum-of-two, CLAIRE JONES

CLAIRE, 41, runs a mobile dog salon in Willenhall, West Mids. Her constituency, Walsall North, turned Tory in 2017.

She said: "I do up to 1,200 miles a month in my van and spend around £60 to £70 a week on fuel."

"Any extra tax on petrol, even if it's only 2p per litre, is going to eat into my profits."

"The van is crucial to my business. I can visit seven to nine dogs a day and travel up to 30 to 40 miles between clients. Around 40 per cent of my clients are elderly so they rely on me because they can't get to a grooming parlour."

"Sadly, if this fuel tax does come into force after the Budget then I will probably have to put up my prices."

"The Government should find the extra money from another source."

"Any fuel hike is going to hit the self-employed, who rely on their vehicles the most."

"With all the costs and taxes I feel like I'm being penalised for trying to run a business."

Dad-of-three, STEPHEN NICHOLSON

STEPHEN, 38, runs painting and decorating business S. Nicholson and Sons, which employs 12.

His constituency, Bishop Auckland in County Durham, was a Tory gain from Labour in last year's General Election.

He said: "We've got five vans and spend about £1,400 a month on fuel. The vans are always out every day."

"After VAT and corporation tax, there's not a lot left. Any rise in fuel duty will take even more away. An increase will hit small businesses who rely on their vehicles, and it will affect those in rural areas as they haven't got public transport."

"And will there be a further increase down the line?"

"Our town centre has died a death and the hospital has lost its A&E and maternity ward. I felt I had no choice but to vote Conservative as we had to have a change."

"If that means we are going to be hit harder in the pocket, then it should be spent on improving the local area."

Guilty... Cordice

Sex and a baby with lad aged 13

By EMMA JAMES

A NURSERY worker had sex with a 13-year-old lad then had his baby, a court heard.

Leah Cordice was 17 when she seduced him by pulling his trousers down as he played on his Xbox in his bedroom.

She rewarded him with fish and chips as they had sex twice a month.

Cordice, now 20 and married, denied sexual activity with a child but a jury found her guilty of three counts.

She claimed that the boy had raped her.

Judge Peter Clarke QC warned Cordice to expect a prison sentence.

He said: "To be sexist about this, if she was a man, custody would be almost inevitable."

Cordice, of Windsor, Berks, was bailed to be sentenced at Reading crown court next month.

My job's a thriller

A BRITISH thrill-seeker has beaten 63,000 applicants from around the world to become an official theme park tester.

Alexandria Adamson, 25, will earn £3,000 in three weeks reviewing Florida's theme parks for a travel company.

She will go to the US with a friend in May.

Alexandria did an art and design course, specialising in theme park design. She has also taken part in cultural exchanges run by Disney.

Speaking about her new role, the Glaswegian said: "I just feel like I'm waiting for someone to wake me up from a dream."

Jord shirt send-off

MORE than 800 football shirts sent by clubs worldwide were displayed at the funeral of a player killed on a night out.

The family of Jordan Sinnott, 25, asked teams to donate shirts with "Sinnott 25" on the back to honour his memory.

Jordan, who played for Northern Premier League club Matlock Town, died following an early hours assault in Retford, Notts.

Brother Tom said ahead of yesterday's service at Valley Parade, home of Jordan's home town club Bradford City: "It's the perfect send-off for Jord."

Three men have been charged over the death.

KATE looks a real booty as she and Prince William inspect prize cows on their Irish tour. DUCHESS JETS IN RETURN OF THE MEG

Markle back in UK for gig

By MATT WILKINSON

MEGHAN is back in Britain today for the first time since her split from the Royal Family was revealed. The Duchess of Sussex will be with Harry in London for a bash celebrating the sporting achievements of wounded servicemen. Meghan, 38, is believed to have left baby Archie behind as she flew in from Canada to complete her final round of official royal engagements. Her husband was at Buckingham Palace yesterday afternoon and was reportedly holding talks with advisers. His grandmother, the Queen, was also at the palace greeting official visitors. Harry, 35, was said to have had a four-hour heart-to-heart with the Queen at the weekend but it was not clear if they met again yesterday. Meghan, above, and Harry were last in the UK together in January before the terms of their Megxit were agreed. As well as tonight's appearance at the Endeavour Fund Awards at Mansion House, the couple will be at Saturday's Mountbatten Festival of Music at the Royal Albert Hall. The Duchess will also face the Queen, Charles and Camilla and William and Kate for the first time since the split at Monday's Commonwealth Day service at Westminster Abbey. It will be the Sussexes' final event as senior royals. A spokesman for the couple refused to comment on their private schedule. matt.wilkinson@the-sun.co.uk

● MORE good news. A giant asteroid is on its way. The scientists have given it the name 52768 (1998 OR2). But that seems a bit impersonal to me, so I'm going to call it Bob. Anyway, Bob's half the size of Mount Everest and rushing towards us at nearly 20,000mph. The experts reckon it will just miss us. But they can't be exactly sure. Bob could swing by to say hello. In which case you can wear as many face masks as you like but it won't help you one bit. You can even follow the BBC's excellent advice on "how to wash your hands". (Apparently you rub them together with some soap for a bit. Sheesh! Who knew?). Bob won't care. You'll be locked away in your self-isolating chamber under the stairs. Hands smothered in Dettol. Poncey face mask bought off Amazon. Stacks of dried food to keep you through the entire spring. And then - bang! Not even enough time to recite this little ditty: We are doomed, brother doomed - are you ready for the kill? If the virus doesn't get you then Big Bob will.

● THERE'S outrage in Darlington over the plight of a bunch of hamsters found in a hedge. Locals are more disgusted than at any time since my band, Dangerbird, played there in 1977. These hamsters were in plastic boxes. And one can only assume they were bred to feed snakes. They have now been liberated. So what are they going to feed the snakes? Kale and mung bean risotto? I'm telling you, they won't like that. The likely answer is mice. So why is that any better than feeding them their cousins, hamsters? A spokesmouse for the British Association of Small Rodents (BASR) told me yesterday: "It's ludicrous. Totally inconsistent. Hamsters get away with murder. Because they've got chubby little cheeks and are refugees from Syria. "But nobody cares about us mice. And at least we don't spend half the bloody night running around on a wheel like a moron. Can't stand hamsters, me."

TYRANNY OF TRANS ACTIVISTS

THE "You Can't Say That!" brigade are at it again.

This time they have banned a woman called Selina Todd, above, from speaking at the Oxford University International Women's Festival.

Ironically, it was a festival that SHE helped to organise.

Todd is an academic and a feminist. She has been barred from speaking because transgender activists don't like her.

They accuse her of being "transphobic", which she denies. She probably just thinks - like a lot of the population and scientific community - that men who transition to being women are still basically men.

We have to fight back against this hysterical tyranny imposed on us all by a tiny, minuscule, rump of deranged activists.

It is time institutions such as Oxford University stood up for the principles of freedom of speech.

That they fail to do so is a national disgrace.

SEE SENSE ON RISK

ONE final word on Mr Corona.

We've been told that in a worst-case scenario, 500,000 British people will die. Almost all of these, according to the experts, are elderly people with serious underlying medical conditions.

Just to get this risk thing into perspective - how many of those people would have died anyway, as a consequence of those medical conditions, over the next six months?

Fat-shaming can be very useful. It worked for me...

● INCIDENTALLY, on the subject of these face masks. Me and the family are going away for a few days in April. This will require going to an AIRPORT.

Awful places, airports. Full of whacko foreigners who've just eaten a stewed bat and wonder why they are feeling a bit under the weather.

So I had the following discussion with the missus about whether we should invest in face masks... Her: "Trouble is, they don't work."

Me: "The really expensive ones do, the ones with filters. So they say."

Her: "Oh, right. But we'd look like twats, wouldn't we?"

Me: "Yes, we'd look like twats. No face masks."

That's the British way. Rather die of pneumonia than look a bit of a twat.

YOU MASK BE JOKING... model's face is covered at Paris Fashion Week

THERE'S a woman called Sue who is appearing in a Channel 4 documentary soon. She's a mum. And the story is really about her 15-year-old son, Harry.

Harry is what you might call morbidly obese, poor lad. Sue, right with Harry, says she didn't realise he was overweight until his hip collapsed. And he had to be taken to hospital for horrible, complex, surgery.

Didn't realise? Gordon Bennett, talk about the elephant in the room. I mean, literally. The kid was half the size of their house. She didn't notice the lack of exercise and the food Harry was putting away? And the fact that he took up the entire sofa and then some? Whose fault is it that Harry needed an op?

We have an obesity epidemic. It is almost certainly this that has caused a drop in life expectancy in our poorest areas. The first such drop for a century.

If your kid is porky, get him out for walk

But now the obesity lobby and the health professionals have decided that obesity shouldn't be "stigmatised". As if it were an illness just like any other.

Something that happens, without the victim knowing it is happening. This is b*s, and it's dangerous.

And stigma is a useful tool in the fight against obesity.

It was only when my own son, during an argument a few years back, told me I was a fat, lardy t*r that I decided to sort my weight out. I've put most of it back on now so I need another bout of name-calling to provoke me to more action.

My point is that fat-shaming can be very useful.

Because being fat isn't good for us and nor is it good for society. It costs the NHS millions each year. It makes people's lives a misery. It is right that it should carry a stigma. Remove the stigma and you make being fat the natural state of being, no blame attached.

Oh, you're fat. How did that happen? What terrible bad luck, but never mind. But that is very far from the truth. With the exception of that tiny minority of people who are fat as a consequence of their genes, obesity is eminently and quite easily avoidable.

Its main cause, these days, is a lack of exercise. If you're a mum or dad and your kid is looking a bit porky, get them out for a walk every day, or do some sport with them. And keep an eye on what they are eating.

Maybe ration the amount of time they spend online, tapping and swiping away on their fat a*s, pausing only to swallow a bowl of Doritos.

This is surely basic parenting. Looking after your kids. Because if you don't do that, they will die very young indeed.

And it isn't the Government that's to blame. Or blind chance, or bad luck. It is because of lifestyle choices. That's the important word - choices.

If you take exercise and keep an eye on what you eat, you won't get fat and your hip won't suddenly give up the ghost and collapse.

The more we insist, out of kindness, that being fat is no fault of the individual, the bigger the problem will grow.

And now, if you'll excuse me, I have to take the dog for a walk. Four miles.

That will lose me about 500 calories, tops. So still some way to go.

STACEY IS A LOOS WOMAN

GOT to admit I hadn't known a huge amount about Stacey Solomon. Until I was faced with the picture of her taking a selfie while having a crap.

So whether I like it or not she is now part of my world. Very grateful, thank you. My life is enriched.

It seems that Stacey is getting tired of "trolls" telling her she's not bringing up her kids right. Not dressing them in appropriate clothing and stuff.

Can't say I give a monkey's one way or the other. But I'm not absolutely certain that the best way to convince people you're an elegant and well-mannered young lady is to take a selfie while you're laying a cable, you know?

And then there's this. She's annoyed with the trolls right now. But what about when they've all gone and started to annoy someone else?

Who will be left to look at those selfies? Apart from Stacey?

● DANNY BAKER'S been talking about how the BBC, "threw him under a bus."

Baker, above, was sacked for having tweeted a joke about Harry and Meghan and their son, Archie. He was accused of racism. But I doubt there's a less racist bloke in the country.

The BBC should admit it made a big mistake.

Not only was it unjust, but I really miss listening to Danny on the radio - he's a brilliant broadcaster.

So here's a suggestion. Give him Rylan Clark-Neal's slot on Radio 2. I can't be the only person in the country who turns off as soon as I hear him speak.

Baker would bring a bit of wit to a network currently lacking it.

Trial... Lord Holmes

Tory lord massage 'sex pest'

By DANIEL HAMMOND

A TORY peer grabbed a masseuse's bum, pointed to his groin and asked if she did extras, a court heard yesterday.

Lord Holmes of Richmond, 48, who won nine Paralympic swimming gold medals after going blind at 14, claims he was only trying to "trace her outline".

But he is alleged to have firmly gripped her bottom towards the end of the treatment at a luxury London hotel.

He also asked if he could touch her breasts and made the reference to her giving him "sexual relief", the court heard.

Jurors were told the shocked masseuse said: "No. I am a professional."

The peer is also said to have broken the disposable underwear given to him before he went into the spa for the £150, 90-minute massage.

He denies sexual assault at Southwark crown court. The trial continues.

A WORLD War Two hero has died aged 98.

Bob Barron served with the Royal Engineers at D-Day, Arnhem and in the Ardennes.

He was also among the first Brit soldiers to cross the Rhine into Germany.

In 2016, Bob, of Preston, was awarded the Legion D'Honneur by France – the country's highest military honour.

At the time he said he played "a small role in a very large team effort".

Nephew Michael said this week: "Uncle Bob was a remarkable man."

PROD STEWART

Handbags... Rod and guard Jessie

EXCLUSIVE by JAMES BEAL

SIR Rod Stewart says he punched a guard in retaliation for touching him first at a New Year bash.

The singer, 75, and son Sean are charged with simple battery after hitting Jessie Dixon.

Sir Rod was given a trespass warning – in effect banning him from The Breakers resort in Palm Beach, Florida.

In a report seen by The Sun, police

Rucking rocker says he was touched first officer Stephen Mancino notes: "R Stewart stated after being denied access, he told Dixon he just wanted to show his children the inside of the event for ten minutes, but Dixon still refused. "He stated Dixon became argumentative with his family, which in turn caused them to become agitated.

"R Stewart stated Dixon had touched him first and he had struck Dixon in retaliation."

Employee Kaylyn Viteri said:

"I saw Rod punch the guard in the chest. Then the wife (Penny Lancaster) or sister got in the middle trying to stop them."

In his statement, Mr Dixon, 33, says of Sean, 39: "I put the back of my hand on the guy in my face and told him to back up to create some space. That's when he shoved me yelling 'What the f you gonna do'. Then the male in the gold jacket (Rod) punched me in the left rib."

But Sean says Mr Dixon was being aggressive. CCTV showed Rod appearing to make a Nazi salute minutes earlier.

He and Sean are set to face a Florida court next month.

J-LO'S GYM BLING WITH £2k HANDBAG

JENNIFER LOPEZ has a handy reminder if she forgets who she is.

The singer was spotted arriving at a gym in Miami on Tuesday in red and white and carrying a tiny bag with her nickname on it. I hope she had a sturdy padlock for her locker in the changing rooms as well, because her handbag costs a whopping £2,250.

The personalised, cherry-red leather accessory is a Valentino Garavani Candystud bag, which she paired with a gold bracelet featuring the initials "J+A" in a nod to her love for fiancé ALEX RODRIGUEZ.

She'd be better off popping down to JD Sports next time.

ROO LOVES LEW

WHEN it comes to famous duets, WAYNE ROONEY has form.

The ex-England footballer has performed with ED SHEERAN twice - and looking at this picture he seems to have turned his attention to superstar LEWIS CAPALDI.

Wayne took his wife COLEEN along to Lewis's gig in Manchester on Tuesday and she shared this snap on Instagram of them hanging out backstage. Coleen captioned the picture: "Mr Capaldi you were unbelievable."

I'm sure it won't be long until Wayne's up on stage with the Scot. Now at Derby, he has been filmed belting out ROBBIE WILLIAMS songs with Ed and is no stranger to having a go at karaoke.

And if I'm being honest, he's not that bad. Plus I love a trier.

JASON STATHAM has pulled out of his role in action comedy movie The Man From Toronto six weeks before it was due to start filming because of "creative issues", which included its rating. The studio is now hurriedly searching for someone to star opposite KEVIN HART.

AMY WINEHOUSE was honoured with a stone on the Music Walk Of Fame yesterday. The late singer's father, Mitch, was at the ceremony in Camden, North London. He said: "It's a wonderful tribute. But on the other hand it reminds us once again that she's not here."

CAMILA CABELLO spent her 23rd birthday at Blackpool Tower as she soaked up the great British seaside. The American Havana singer and boyfriend SHAWN MENDES joined in a conga and ate a pumpkin carriage cake, a nod to the Cinderella musical she is filming in Britain at the moment.

ELISABETH MOSS was baffled by rumours she was engaged to TOM CRUISE. The Invisible Man and Mad Men actress was mistaken for a woman he was with last year. She said: "I was confused and mainly got texts from people being like, 'I didn't know, why didn't you tell me?'"

DIXIES BACK WITH NEW LP

THEY featured on TAYLOR SWIFT's album Lover last year and it's clearly given DIXIE CHICKS a rediscovered passion for music.

The US trio have announced a comeback, with their first new album in 14 years, Gaslighter, out on May 1. Yesterday they revealed this striking album artwork, below, as they premiered the title track.

The trio were ostracised for their criticism of President GEORGE W BUSH during the invasion of Iraq in 2003 and faced a boycott in the US.

But they are returning triumphant, teaming up with Taylor's producer Jack Antonoff, who they worked with on Taylor's song Soon You'll Get Better.

Here's hoping she repays the favour.

Britney son in 'dk' rant

BRITNEY SPEARS' son has branded her father a "dk" and said he can "die" in a shock outburst.

Jayden, 13, let rip in an impromptu live Q&A through his Instagram account in the early hours of yesterday.

Britney's dad Jamie was granted legal control over much of her life after her breakdown in 2008 – and has used the courts to maintain that position.

In the 20-minute session,

Jayden said: "Yeah, he's a pretty big dk. He can go die."

He added that his mum, who has been on a hiatus from music since January 2019, may never release new songs.

He said: "One time I asked her, 'Mom, what happened to your music?' and she was like, 'I don't know, honey. I think I might just quit it'."

"I'm like, 'What? Do you know how much bank you make off of that?'."

He did, however, praise his dad KEVIN FEDERLINE, saying: "I have the best dad. My dad's literally Jesus."

His account has since been deleted. I can't imagine he's in the good books today.

Katy's write wedding

LOVED-UP SONG FOR ORLANDO

KATY PERRY has written a song for her fiancé ORLANDO BLOOM – and might even have their first baby on the way.

The singer has today released new song Never Worn White – and in a clip of the video posted on her Instagram last night, she is wearing a white dress and appears to be cradling a bump.

Katy touches on starting a family with Orlando when she sings: "See us in 60 years with a full family tree."

In the song's other lyrics, right, you can see how head over heels she is for the Brit actor.

Katy and Orlando, who has a son Flynn from his first marriage to model MIRANDA KERR, are expected to wed in the coming weeks.

Katy can get away with her Never Worn White song title as she wore a dove-grey dress when she married ex-husband RUSSELL BRAND in 2010.

Pirates Of The Caribbean star Orlando started dating Katy in early 2016. They got engaged on Valentine's Day last year.

If these lyrics are anything to go by, the honeymoon period will be going for a while.

Never Worn White

HERE is an edited version of the lyrics to Katy's new song...

You love the hell out of me
And heaven's what we could be
I've stood on the edge of love
But never took the leap
And you took my armour off
Did it delicately
And I let my guard down
To show you what's underneath...
Answer my mamma's prayers
You asked the question
I said yes, but I'm scared
'Cause I've never worn white
But I wanna get it right
(chorus) Yeah, I really wanna try with you
No, I've never worn white
But I'm standing here tonight
'Cause I really wanna say, I do... I do
See us in 60 years with a full family tree
Give my blood, sweat and tears to reach our destiny
'Cause love is a minefield, let's take this walk, baby
'Cause at the end of it all, I choose you and you choose me...
Answer your father's prayers
You asked the question
I could tell you were scared
(repeat chorus)
Now let's dance with each other
Mixing all of our colours
It's so easy to surrender
When you finally find forever
No, I've never worn white, no
But I really wanna try with you, yeah
(repeat chorus)

A PERSONAL MESSAGE TO SHERIDAN SMITH

ACTRESS Sheridan Smith angered the nation's Colins when she hinted the name was too lame for the baby boy she has on the way.

She said: "We thought about naming him after my dad but he was called Colin. Much as I miss him and love him... Storm, River, Colin - you never know."

Here, The Sun's very own resident Colin defends his much-maligned moniker.

By COLIN ROBERTSON
Who's quite happy with it

THERE was a time in the Eighties when I couldn't look at a packet of KP Skips without wanting to cover my head with the hood of my Diadora shellsuit top and set fire to myself.

The reason? Clumsy Fing Colin, the oh-so-clever creation of the cretins in KP's marketing department, presumably aimed at enhancing the appeal of the "fizzy" prawn-cocktail snack.

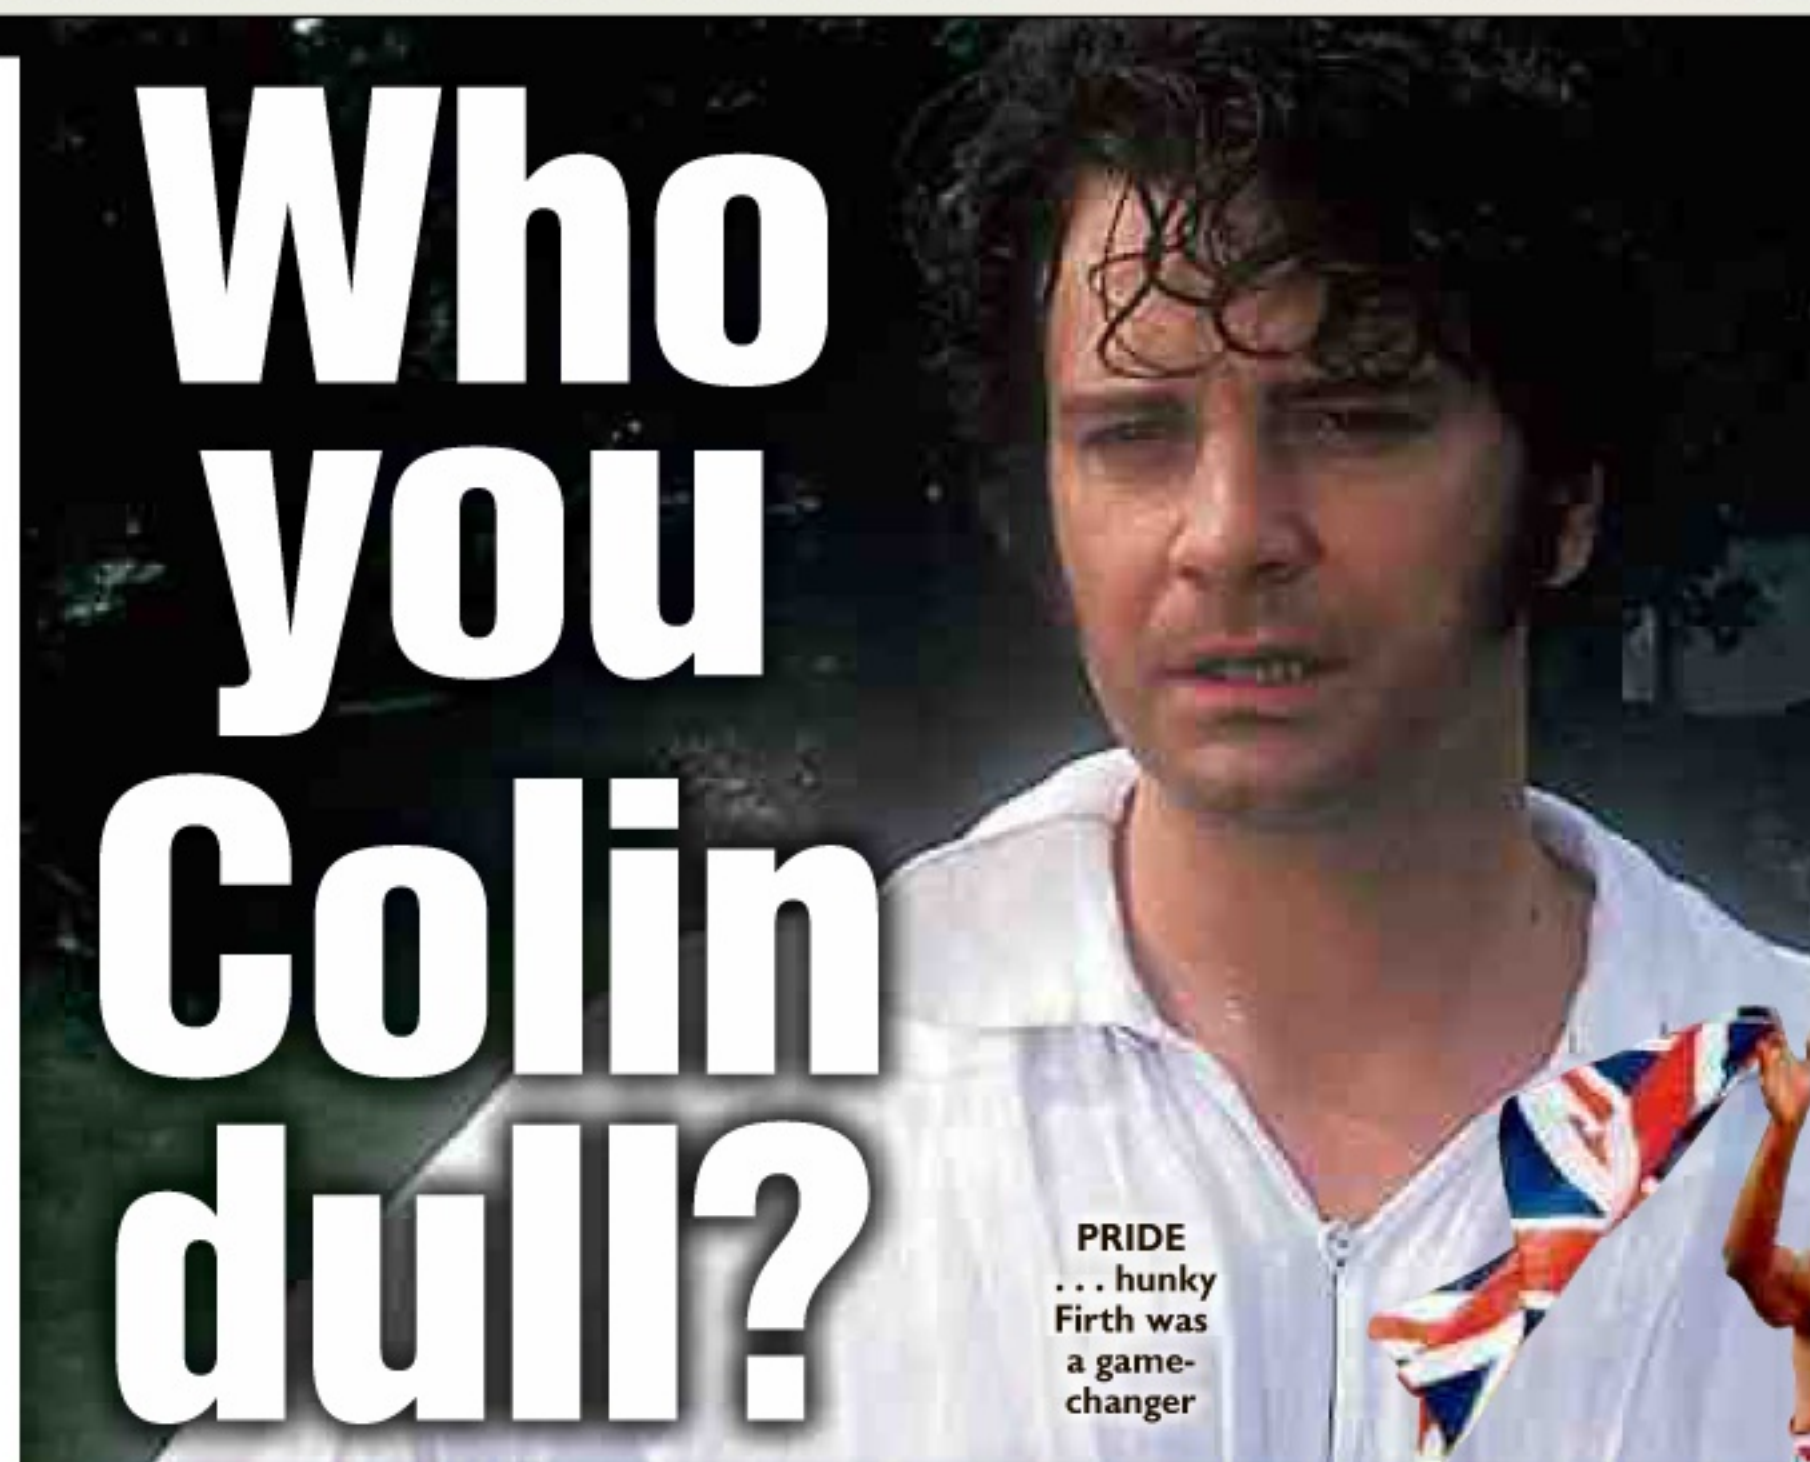

He was a gold-plated, certifiable buffoon, apparently dressed in skintight leopard-print leggings, who rode around on a moped smashing into things.

Because he was clumsy, you see. Haha!

How this two-wheeled terrorist helped to improve the brand value of Skips we will probably never know.

But as Skips soared in popularity, so the name Colin plunged to new depths of hilarity.

"Oh look it's Clumsy Cooooliiiiiiiiin," droned every older kid at school upon

Who you Colin dull?

PRIDE
... hunky Firth was a game-changer seeing me...just before I punched them to the ground (in my head).

I wished I didn't have 1984's 64th-most popular name, which allegedly derives from a shortened French version of Nicholas.

I wished I was called James. Or Andrew. I'd even have taken Ebenezer, as I briefly did playing Scrooge in Deer Park Primary's take on A Christmas Carol.

But one day, Skips got bored of Colin and ditched him. Then everyone else got bored too. Then Colin Jackson came hurdling into view, winning world titles and Olympic medals, and the name had a brief purple patch.

Until Colin Hunt came along - the "office joker" from The Fast Show who drove everyone he met to suicidal thoughts with his tediously energetic banter, like putting on a glow-in-the-dark condom and doing the "helicopter" (look it up).

So Colin was in the doldrums again.

It was years before we caught a break. And no, we don't count former US Secretary of State Colin Powell, who insisted on saying it "Coe-lin". Traitor!

It took a 1995 BBC drama to change the game.

I am talking, of course, about

CHAMP... Jackson

BAD NAME... snack mascot

"that scene" with Colin Firth as Mr Darcy emerging from a lake in Pride And Prejudice. Now Colin was hot. Colin was cool.

Then Colin Farrell came along - again on the BBC, this time in Ballykissangel.

And then Colin Salmon. And then Colin Morgan.

Cool Colin was suddenly everywhere. And then came Sheridan Smith.

Ms Smith doesn't like Colin - her dad's name - because it's too dull. She'd rather call her son something trendy...

... like Storm or River. What about Hurricane? Or Snowbomb? Or Drizzle? Or Sleet?

None of them will see the poor lad getting bogwashed at all.

Sorry... what's that sound? Is it a waterfall? A monsoon?

Oh no... FLUSH!

Pupil, 11, trip blow

A GIRL of 11 faces a 42-minute bus trip to her new school - despite living a few yards from her preferred choice.

Rylie O'Neill applied for Wardle Academy in Rochdale, but instead was offered a place the other side of the town.

Mum Lindsey Pawson, 31, said: "She's so upset. She and her friends were in tears. They all got places yet she lives closest."

"I certainly won't be letting her travel across Rochdale alone. There are weird people out there."

Rylie lost out as Wardle's new admissions policy favours schools within its own trust and she does not go to one.

Builders' lung fear

THOUSANDS of builders are at risk of a chronic lung disease, MPs fear.

About 600,000 construction workers are exposed to silica - cut stone dust particles which can damage the lungs.

Symptoms of silicosis include coughs, shortness of breath and tiredness and there is no cure.

Yesterday, a report by MPs called for action to prevent more UK deaths from the "next asbestos".

They want lower limits for exposure and an NHS screening programme.

MP Jim Shannon, chair of the respiratory health group, said the report should "shine light on an under-documented issue".

CLUB ENDS BAN ON WOMEN AFTER 96YRS

By PAUL SIMS

A BOWLS club is to let women become full members for the first time in its 96-year history.

Ilkley Bowling Club said the "the world had moved on" since it was founded in 1924.

At the moment, women can enter the main bar area only as guests of male members.

As associate members, they can drink only on weekdays after 5pm and at weekends. They can buy drinks from the bar during matches but must consume them outside.

But members of the West Yorks crown green bowls club have now voted 377 to 129 in favour of giving both sexes equal access.

Club chairman Alan Breese said: "The whole of the committee is delighted with the result and it helps us plan better for the future."

"We are still one club and even though people voted against it, I don't want to alienate anyone. We go forward as one club."

Priority for full membership will now go to the 500 women who have associate status — mainly team members and members' spouses.

They will be able to apply to the club from July 1 but will have to wait until April next year for approval.

Club secretary Richard Bell said: "We last held a vote seven years ago. Since then the world has changed and the club has changed, too."

Member Peter Mate said: "It's a good facility that needs to be brought into the present day." paul.sims@the-sun.co.uk

SEXIST PAINT AXED

A PAINT brand is scrapping pink pots with names such as Dollface, Sweet Angel, Girly Girl and Ladylike.

Valspar will change to gender-neutral labels such as Woke Up Like This, Unstoppable, Fearless and Like a Boss.

In a move that will delight the woke generation, the company made the rebranding announcement ahead of International Women's Day on Sunday.

Valspar, whose paint is sold in B&Q stores, consulted Jane Sunderland, an honorary professor and expert in gender matters at Lancaster University.

She said: "This is a hugely positive move by a mainstream brand."

£200-A-NIGHT BOX

A CONVERTED shipping container is being let on Airbnb for £200 a night.

The 10ft by 10ft steel box has a wood-burning stove and a wooden couch which also serves as a bed.

The price includes five litres of water, toilet paper, tea and coffee, and a pack of canned and dried foods as well as a spade for "bathroom requirements". Renters must bring a sleeping bag.

The "bespoke container bothy" offers lake views and is being rented by owners of the Carrick Castle Estate in Argyll and Bute.

ABORTIONS HIT RECORD LEVELS

ABORTION rates are at a record high with almost one in four pregnancies now being terminated, figures show.

There were 839,043 conceptions in England and Wales in 2018 but roughly 201,360 – 24 per cent – were legally aborted.

In the previous year, conceptions were 847,204 and the abortion rate 22.7 per cent.

The percentage of pregnancies leading to abortion increased for every age group for the first time since 2013.

The biggest rise was among 20 to 24-year-olds (up 1.8 per cent) and the lowest was among under-16s (up

By SHAUN WOOLLER

0.9 per cent). More than half of pregnancies in under-18s were terminated.

Clare Murphy, of the British Pregnancy Advisory Service, said: "We've seen an increasingly cautious approach to family size – likely to be driven by factors ranging from the two-child limit on benefits, to uncertainty about Brexit."

"Women of any age take the prospect of becoming a parent extremely seriously and want to achieve financial security, and ideally a home, before doing so."

"Today's figures may reflect that reaching those goals is more difficult than ever."

LOOKING BECK

The robe Archbishop Thomas Becket wore when killed in 1170 will be displayed at the scene in Canterbury Cathedral.

VEGAN SUBSTITUTES:

Gregg's Traditional Sausage Roll v Gregg's Vegan Sausage Roll

THE giveaway was not in the flavour but the pastry. The "sausage" in the vegan product was convincing. I could barely tell the difference. But the pastry was a dead giveaway. The vegan version didn't have the buttery flakiness of a traditional roll, with a texture feeling closer to cardboard. The vegan "meat" is made using mycoprotein, a fungus, the pastry looks anaemic.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? YES

No Dough Pizza Company Vegan Margherita v Pizza Express Classic Margherita

PICKING up the vegan pizza, I could tell something wasn't right. It felt like one of those pizzas made on a wrap without a firm base. It was very floppy and I was immediately suspicious. Taking a bite, the fake cheese was also easy to spot. It felt more like a sauce and tasted more like salad cream. I was relieved to take a bite of the traditional Margherita to get rid of the taste. The vegan version definitely wasn't for me.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? YES

BLINDSIDED...

Totally Vegan Quorn Fishless Fingers v Birds Eye Fish Fingers

THESE two were quite hard to tell apart. I guessed correctly but only just. I think it may have been more by chance. There was a bit more fish taste to the Birds Eye fish fingers, which felt like a slightly higher-end product compared to the vegan ones. When I took my blindfold off, you could see the flaky fish inside but with your eyes closed it would be hard to know the difference.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? YES

Naked Glory Vegan Sausages v Richmond Thick Pork Sausages

I WAS fooled here as the vegan sausage had lots of added flavour from herbs and spices.

It disguised the taste of the soya protein the sausages are made from and made them taste like one of those posh, higher-end sausages you see in the shops these days.

I'd say it's not a bad option if you're vegan. It also contained less fat, sugar and salt than the Richmond sausage.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? NO

Ginsters Cornish Pasty v West Cornwall Pasty Company Vegan Green Thai Vegetable Curry

THE vegan pasty was very tasty, with lots of spices added, and I'd definitely buy one again if I needed lunch on the go. With the Ginsters traditional one I could clearly taste the meat. It was easy to tell the difference but the vegan pasty was nicer.

It was full of red and green peppers, sweet potato and a light curry sauce – delicious. But I don't suppose it's a very healthy lunch!

THE BLINDFOLD TEST

Green & Black's Organic Dark Chocolate v Keep It Raw Ombar Dark Choc

BOTH bars contained around 70 per cent cocoa and tasted quite bitter.

The Green & Black's had a stronger, more bitter flavour. I mistakenly thought this might have been something added to disguise the lack of taste so wrongly picked it out as the vegan chocolate.

Both tasted good, but I'm more of a milk chocolate girl and would miss Dairy Milk if I gave up animal produce.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? NO

Waitrose and Partners Duck Spring Rolls v Asda Plant Based Duckless Spring Rolls

THE Asda spring rolls were quite tasty but they tasted similar to a veggie spring roll, rather than a duck one.

There was no mistaking the meaty duck taste in the Waitrose ones. It was easy to spot the difference. I'm not sure the Asda vegan rolls are a replacement for meat, and they're not necessarily healthier either, with 125 calories compared to 92 in the meaty ones.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? YES

Meaty OR veggie?

SALES of vegan products are soaring, with 600,000 Brits claiming to have given up animal produce in a bid to boost their health and save the environment.

Shoppers spent £474million on meat-free items in 2019, an increase of 18 per cent on the previous year.

Everything from chocolate to cheese, pizza and chicken nuggets can be vegan, but how do they taste?

Mum-of-two LYNSEY HOPE did a blind taste test on a selection of best-selling vegan items to see if she could tell the difference between meat products and their alternatives...

Sainsbury's Plant Pioneers Meat Free Burgers v Birds Eye Original Beef Burgers

THE vegan burger was unmistakable. The texture was clearly like mushrooms.

However, when I took off the blindfold it looked quite appealing, so much so that I'm sure I would pick one over the frozen Birds Eye burger.

A surprise to me was that the vegan burgers were higher in calories than the meaty alternative – 184 compared with 110 from Birds Eye.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? YES

Thomson & Scott Brut Organic Vegan Prosecco v Conte Priuli Prosecco DOC

THE organic vegan prosecco was delicious, and out of everything I tried today I'd definitely buy it again. The manufacturer says no gelatin, albumin or casein were used to make it so it is suitable for all. It tasted high-end and came at a price, £15 on Amazon, so more than you'd pay for supermarket fizz. It's produced from grapes at the foothills of Italy's Dolomites – a real treat.

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE? NO

Totally Vegan Quorn Crunchy Nuggets v Birds Eye Chicken Nuggets

THESE two tasted virtually identical and I found it hard to choose which nuggets were meat.

In the end I guessed incorrectly. The Quorn nuggets tasted the same so the manufacturers have done a good job of replicating the chicken taste. The fact it was hard to tell the difference made me wonder what was in the meat nuggets, though Birds Eye says they are 100 per cent chicken.

Its website stopped working last night.

Twitter user Derek Donald wrote: "Sitting on a Flybe plane at Manchester airport waiting to see if we're going home to Aberdeen tonight." The embattled, Exeter-based airline, bought a year ago by a consortium headed by Virgin Atlantic, was unable to get fresh financial support after it was saved in January.

FLACK COPS WILL NOT BE PROBED

NO investigation is needed into police contact with Caroline Flack before her death, a watchdog announced yesterday.

It found "no causal link" between Met officers' actions and the TV presenter's suicide.

Caroline, 40, was in custody on December 13 last year following an alleged assault by her on her boyfriend Lewis Burton.

It has been reported she told cops she would take her own life, two months before her death on February 15.

But the Independent Office for Police Conduct said officers arranged for her to see a health-care professional and "relevant policy and procedure was followed to give her further guidance".

The Met said its internal standards department had found no further action was necessary over the case.

The IOPC announcement came after the Crown Prosecution Service said it would review the decision to charge the Love Island host.

After Caroline's death, her management team criticised the CPS for its "show trial", with Lewis having said he did not support a prosecution and the star denying the charge.

JASON MANFORD

Pictures: DAN KENNEDY / CHILLI MEDIA

I've 6 kids. with choice

HAVING six kids at the age of 38 is no laughing matter for Jason Manford.

In fact, the comedian says his expanding brood has had disastrous consequences... on his transport.

Speaking exclusively to The Sun, Jason said: "Every new child you have after three gives you a slightly crappier selection of cars you can drive."

"All the nice ones are off the list, you can't get any of those, so you end up with a second-hand Seat Alhambra, which fits everybody in and their bikes."

"That's one of the worst things about having six kids."

I met up with Jason in Manchester this week following the announcement of his 120-date stand-up tour.

And despite having had root canal surgery just hours earlier, Jason was in good spirits, perhaps buoyed by a 7am jog with his kids.

Just about getting the words out his numbed mouth, he told how his oldest daughters, ten-year-old twins, did not get their chosen high school in a recent application, prompting a family discussion about sending them to a fee-paying grammar school.

He explains: "If they did go to grammar schools I just don't think I could ever forget what it was costing me, especially with the amount of kids I've got."

"Every time they came home from school I'd say, 'What have you done today?'. They'd be like, 'Been in the sandpit', and I'd respond, 'You'd better have built the Pyramids for that price.'"

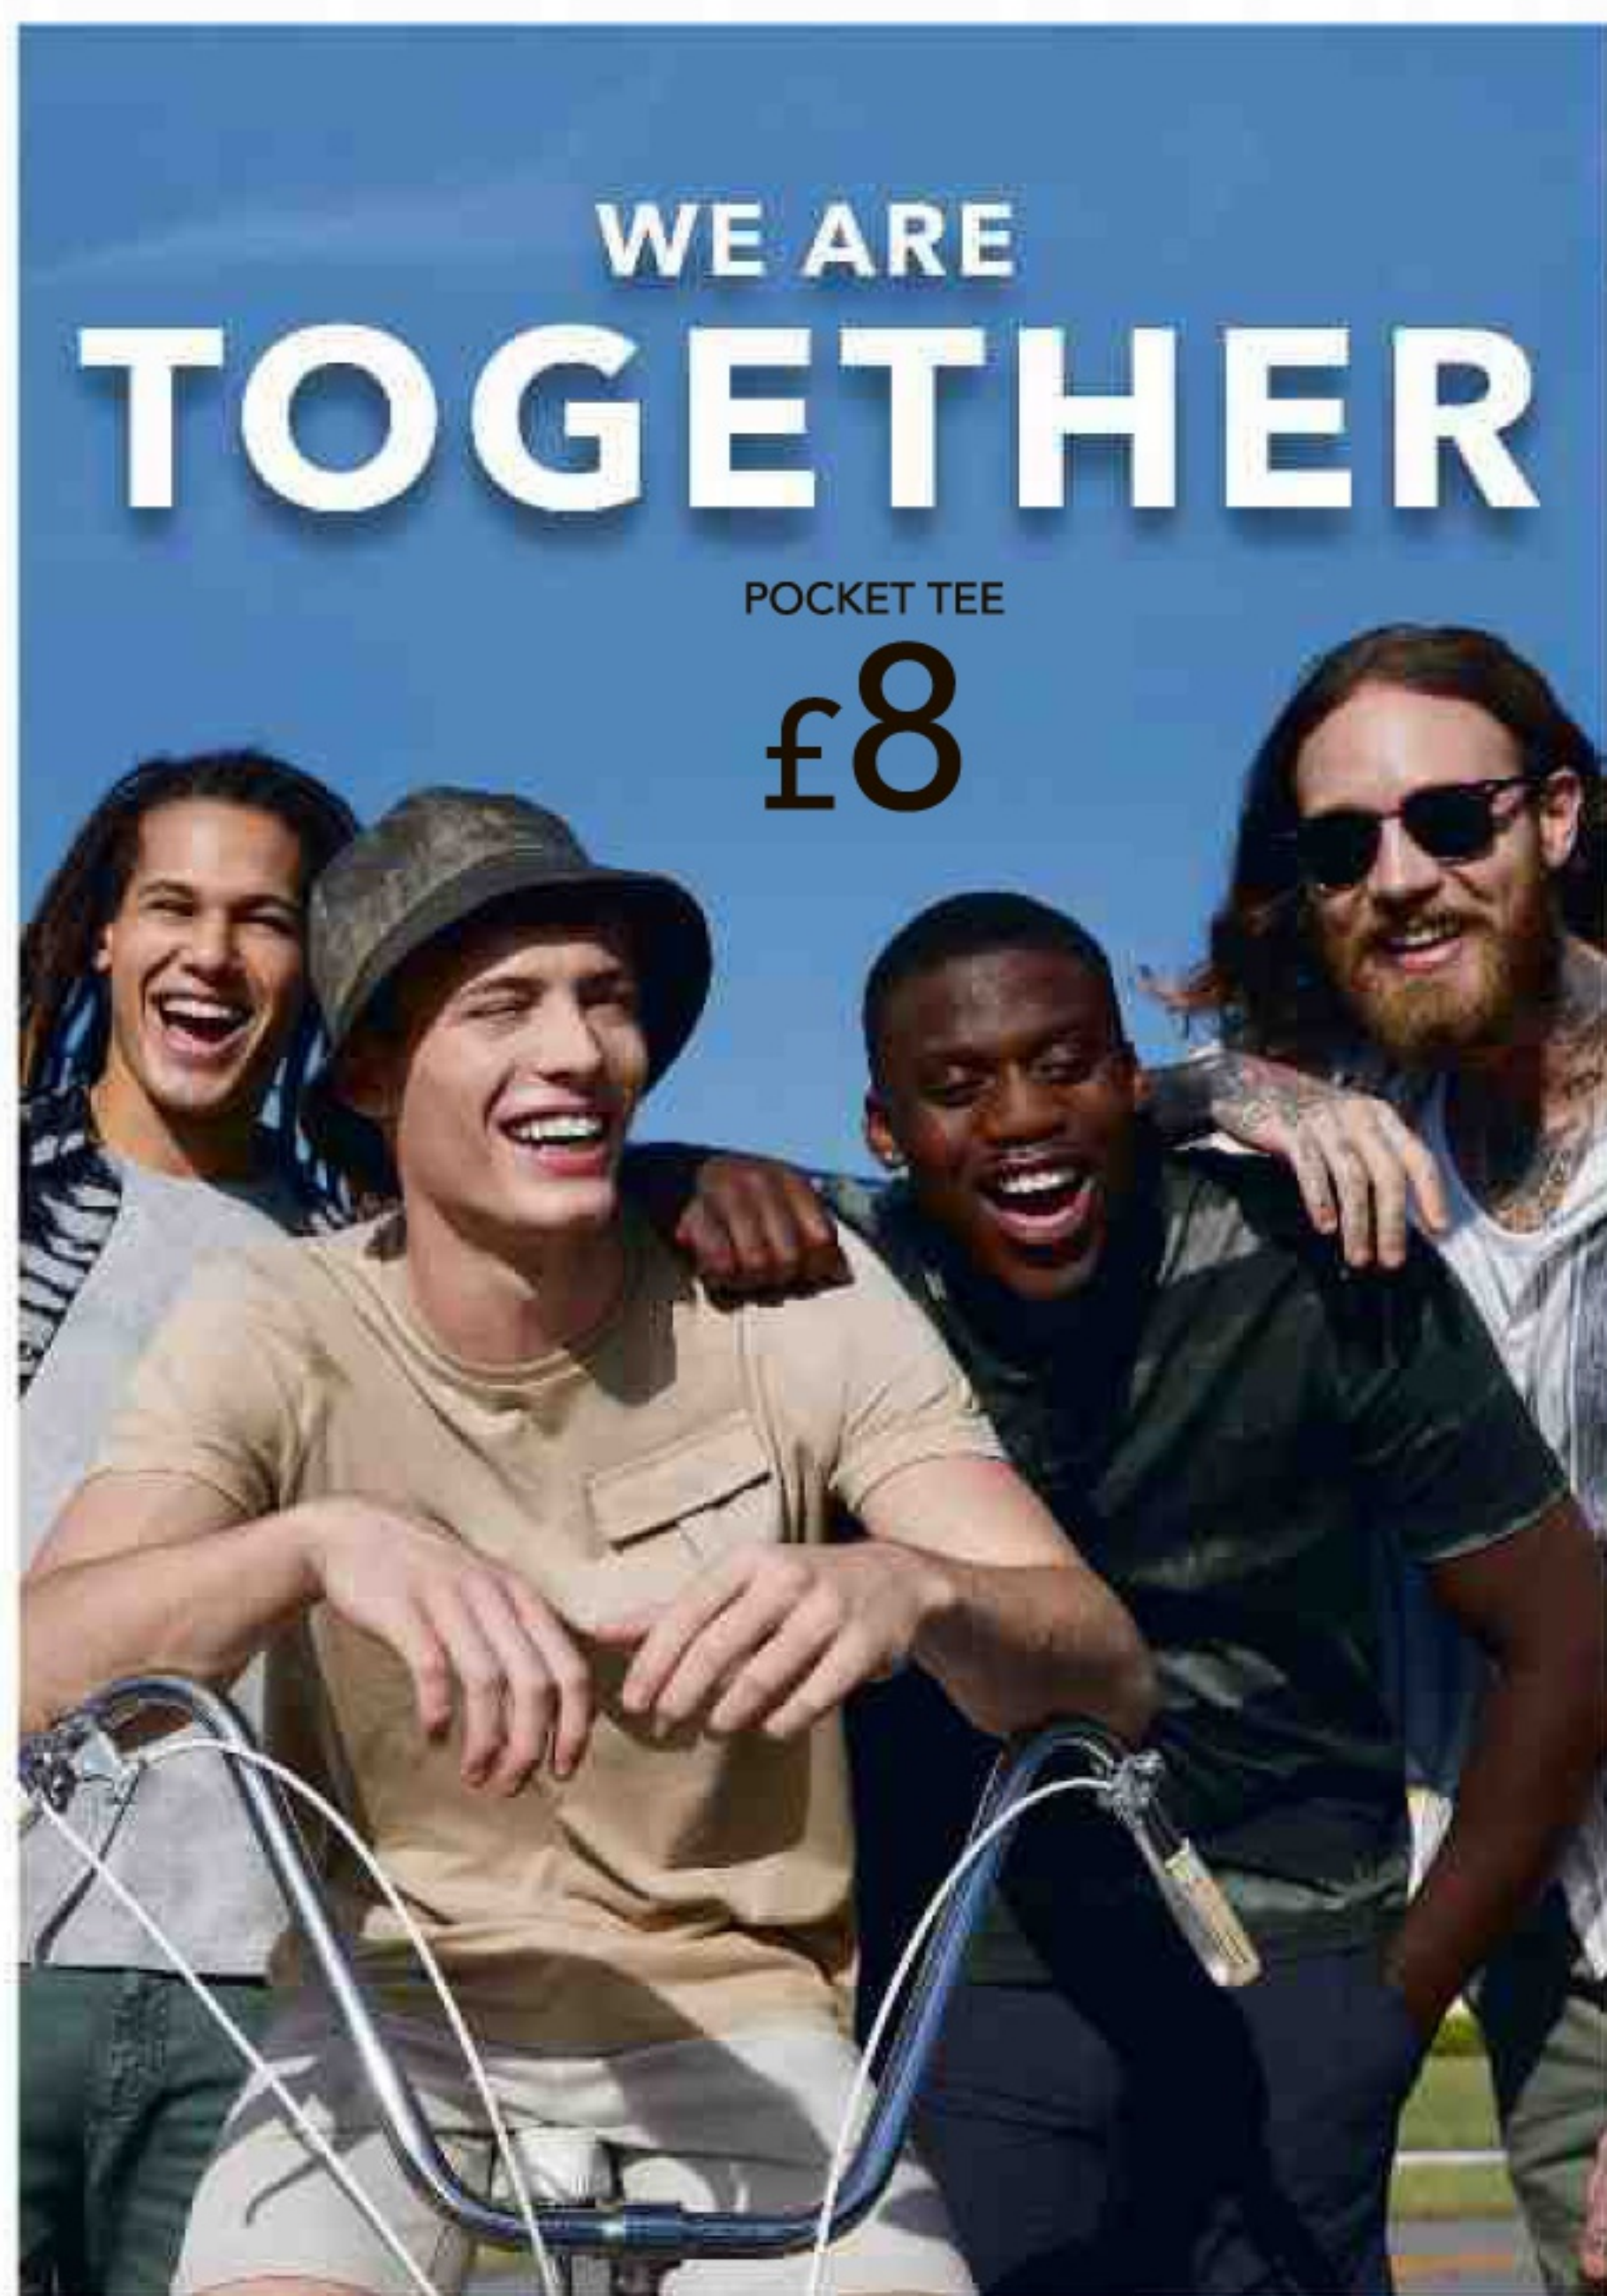

He adds: "It's like, £10,000 a year. That's a lot of money to find every year for every kid."

Jason has four children – the twins and a daughter and son – with first wife Catherine and his youngest two, a girl and boy, with Lucy Dyke, a TV producer, who he married in 2017.

Jason always wanted a big family, but admits he did not foresee having quite so many children.

He says: "I'm one of five, my mum's one of 11, so it's always been a normal thing in my world – but not necessarily six."

"But things change, I got to a point

ON THE FUNNY SIDE OF FATHERHOOD

REVEALED... Hedgehog Jason

PRICKLY DECISION

JASON still can't believe he beat opera star Katherine Jenkins on the way to finishing runner-up in hit TV series The Masked Singer.

Dressed as Hedgehog, he was only pipped to first place by Girls Aloud's Nicola Roberts.

But Jason very nearly rejected the ITV show. He reveals: "I turned it down when the offer first came because I thought it was a reality singing celebrity show, which it is really."

"I know people behind the scenes and they said, 'I can guarantee there are no reality stars', and I know that sounds quite snobbish, but it does raise the bar a bit."

Having stayed away from catchphrases during his career, Jason has avoided having fans shout obvious things at him on the street.

But he was concerned his spiky character would change that and see him heckled. He says: "I was worried I'd get called 'prk' because of Hedgehog."

Each new one leaves me of a slightly crappier car where I was in a new relationship and it's not fair your past affects somebody else's future, so you add it all up and think, 'I want her to be happy.'

He jokes: "She wanted a baby, I didn't want a baby so we compromised – and we had a baby".

His support network in Manchester, which includes his mum, is a reason why he never made the move down south.

He explains: "I've seen Peter Kay and Paddy McGuinness stay up here and felt, 'Do I really need to move down there?' It's only two hours on the train."

"My kids would be so posh if they moved to London."

"I like having my family close by. My uncle drives me to gigs and I live close enough to my brother for him to ring me up and ask if I can help rip out his old decking."

Jason's recent touring schedule has seen him on the road six months a year, but the rest of the time he can pick up usual dad duties like taking the kids to sleepovers and ferrying them to parties.

The comedian, who is hosting theatreland's Olivier Awards for the third successive year next month, is nearing the end of touring musical mystery comedy Curtains, in which he plays detective Frank Cioffi.

It is the fifth stage role of his career, which also includes lead parts in Chitty Chitty Bang Bang and The Producers.

In September he kicks off his 120-date arena stand-up tour, called Like Me. The name plays on the nation's fascination of being liked and Jason's acknowledgement that his fanbase share many similarities with him.

'I feel bad about job'

He fears the mammoth run, however, may play havoc with his "fluctuating" weight, courtesy of all those late finishes.

He says: "No one is selling a salad at midnight. When you're on a health kick and you want to lay off the carbs, you're like 'Peperami? Fridge Raiders?'."

"I fluctuate a hell of a lot. I've just been on holiday with an all-you-can-eat buffet and my wife says to me, 'It's not a challenge, it's just a description of the food'."

"I say, 'I pay the bills, I know how much this is costing'."

"At one point I had five different countries' breakfasts on one plate."

Despite his success, Jason admits he sometimes feels guilty about not having a "proper job".

He explains: "My uncles and brothers don't see it as work."

"I can see them seething about it, like, 'Yeah, you must be tired talking for two hours a night'. To them, what I do is not a proper job – and I do project that a little bit."

"I'm very lucky I'm in a job that pays well and I love it – and that's so rare, that's like two per cent of the population."

"So it's a privilege to do that job and for people to do whatever job they do and earn money to pay to come and see you do your job. So I feel bad about it."

"I take my family on holidays and give them what they need, and part of that comes down to a bit of guilt that showbiz does pay well."

"But my mum spent 20 years working her ass off as a nurse and that's a proper job."

Away from comedy, Jason hosts a Sunday morning show on Absolute Radio and presents Saturday night game show First & Last on BBC1.

He has also written and starred in kids' animated series Daisy & Ollie which will soon be on Channel 5 morning show Milkshake.

Jason hopes the success of his prime-time BBC1 game show, where contestants attempt to avoid finishing first or last during wacky games, will see him given a second series.

And he jokes: "I've got to a point where if this doesn't get a second series, I might knock game shows on the head."

"I've had a good go at them now and I can safely say I have not got a clue what people want."

Jason adds that he was surprised BBC1 comedy series Scarborough, in which he appeared alongside former Coronation Street star Catherine Tyldesley, was not renewed after the first series ended last October.

He says: "I think it suffered because it wasn't a traditional sitcom. Even now when I watch the odd episode, it's not a gag a minute, it was like a funny soap, like when Corrie used to be really funny."

"And it certainly wasn't really a good fit for a Friday night, that didn't do it any favours."

"It felt to me like a nice Sunday night series, like a modern-day Last Of The Summer Wine and could have run for five to six years."

But that has not put him off sitcoms for ever. He is now planning to write his own.

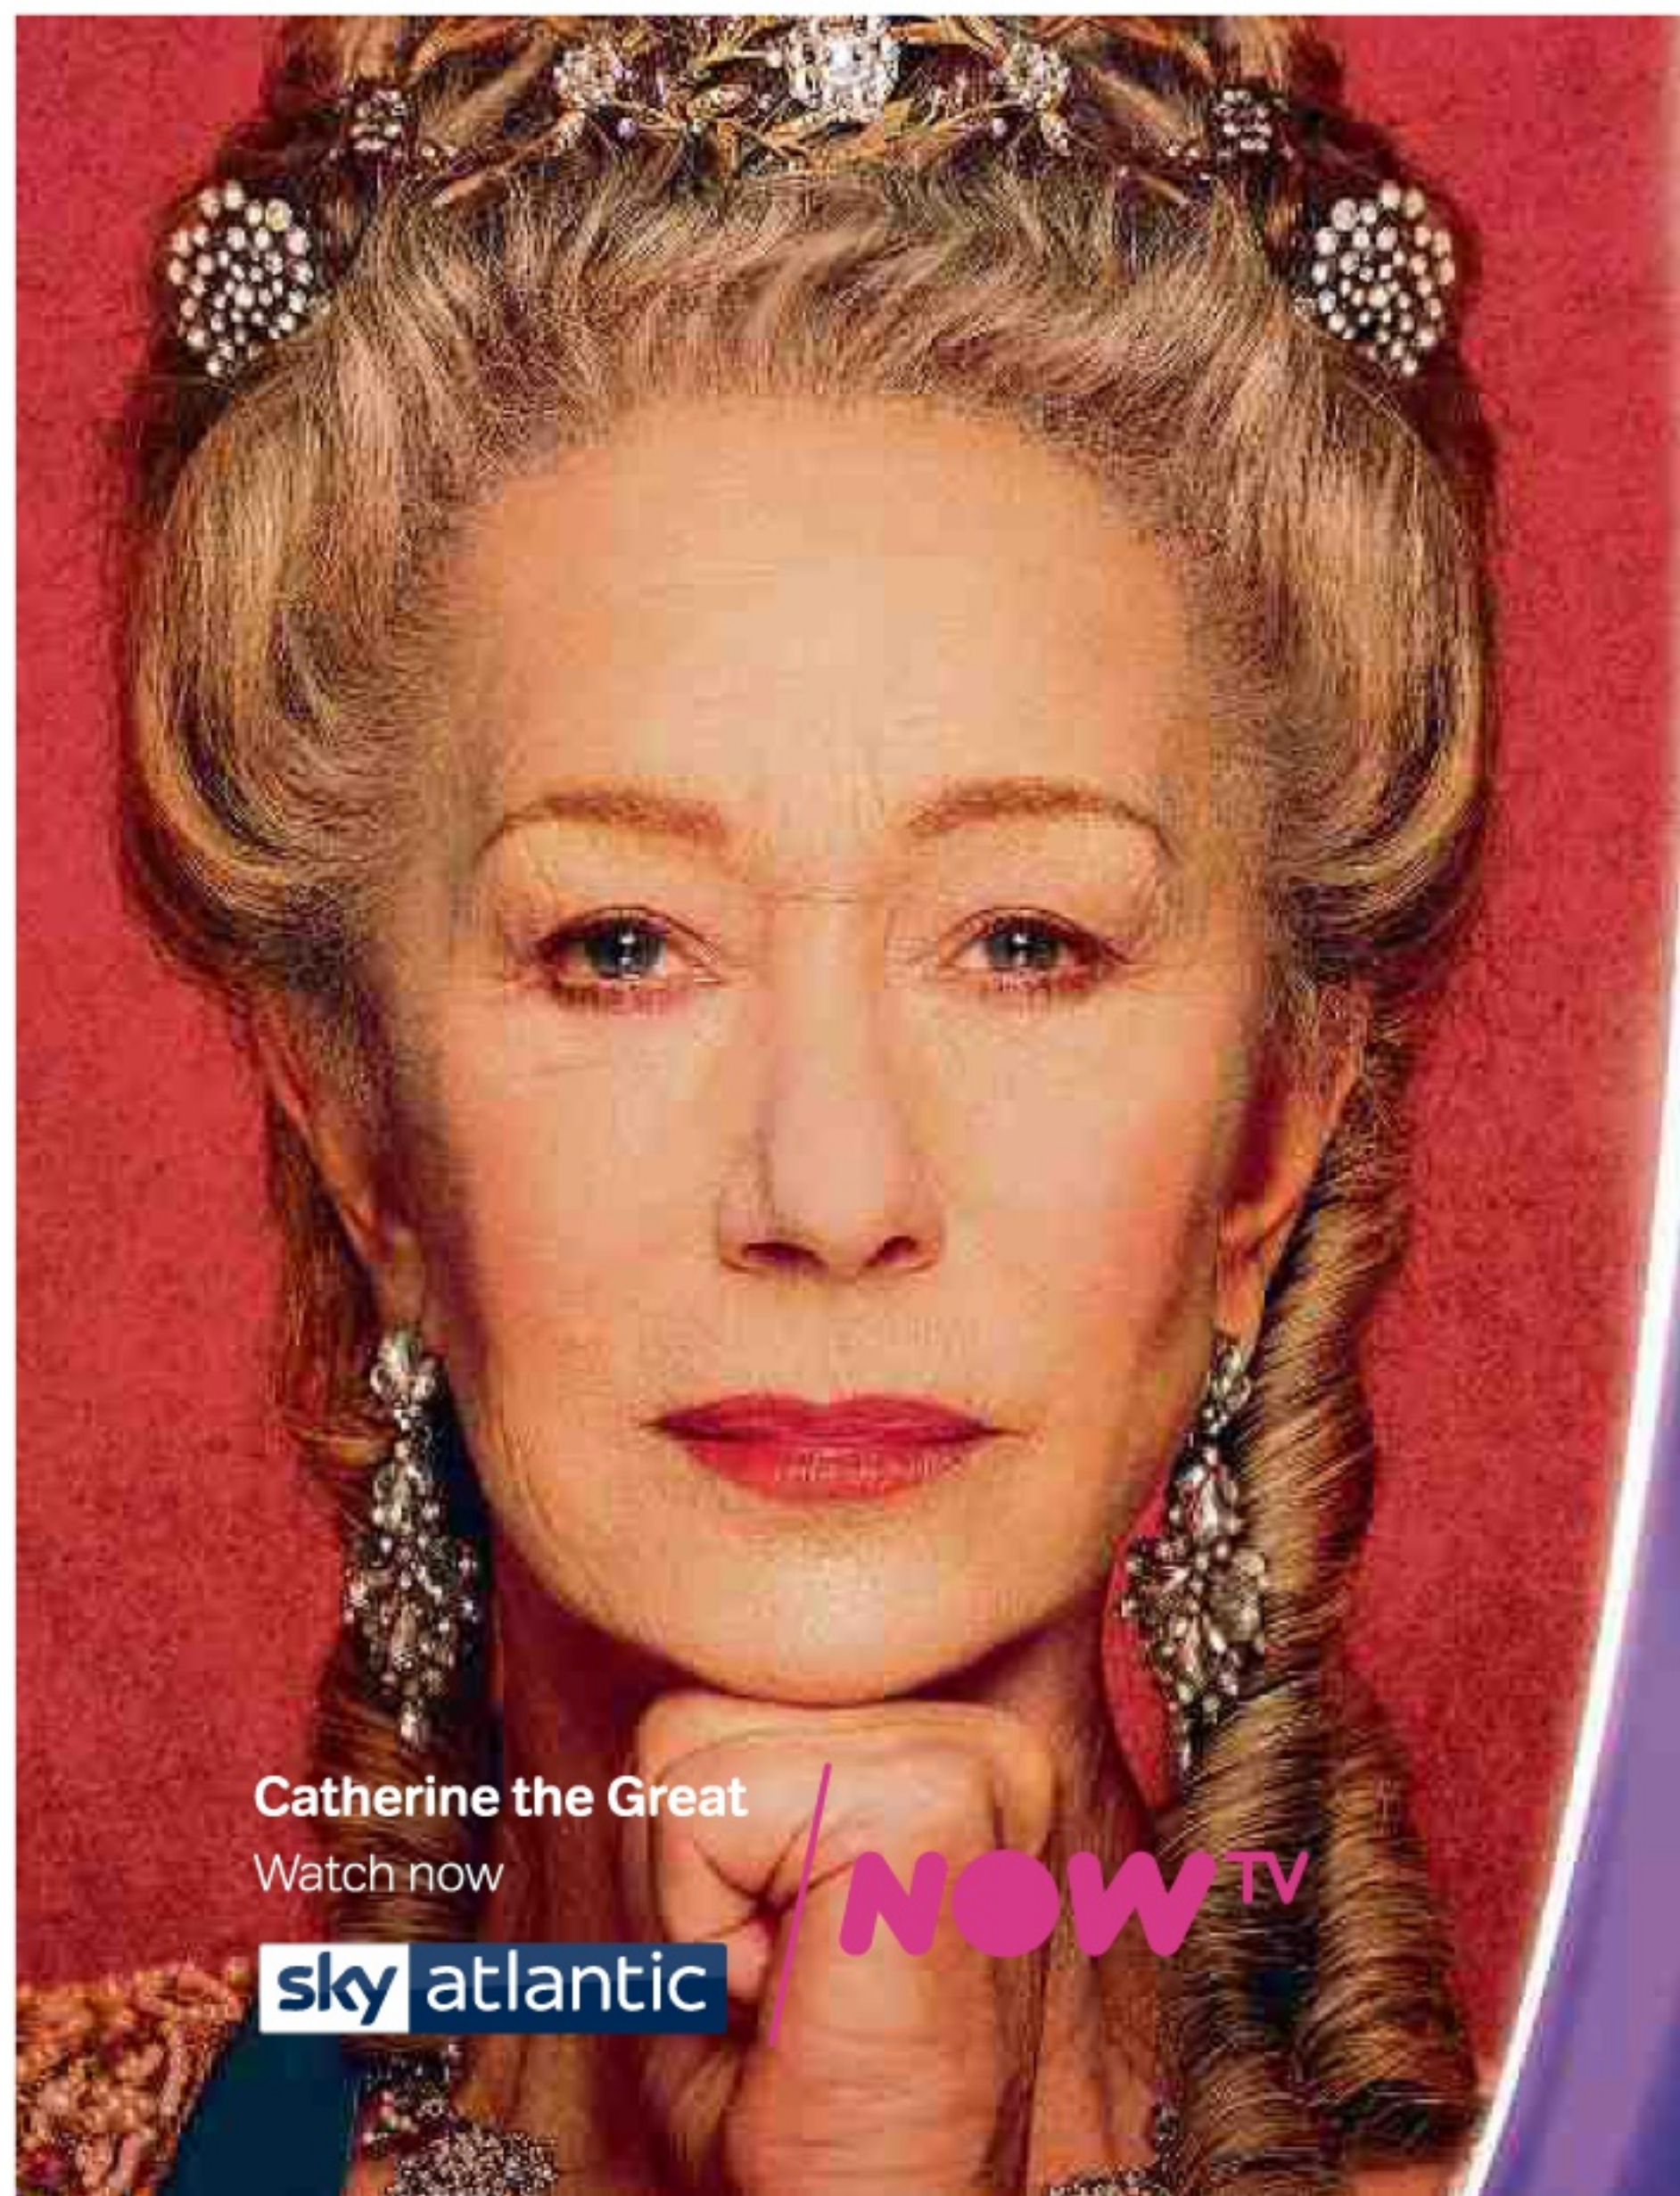

Jason adds: "I'm friends with Peter Kay and, as much as he's a fabulous stand-up comic, the thing that sets him apart from other comics was doing sitcom Phoenix Nights, and letting people fall in love with the characters he created."

"It's certainly something I'll explore at some point."

MOBILE SAVED MY LIFE OK after 3day KO

A WOMAN knocked out for three days survived because her new phone's battery still worked when she came to.

Beth McDermott, 42, who hit her head after tripping and falling down the stairs at home, could not move her legs when she woke.

The stricken trainee celebrant, who lives alone, reached for her £90 Huawei Y6 fearing its battery would be dead but it still had 50 per cent charge.

Dazed Beth, who has rhabdomyolysis – a condition in which damaged skeletal muscle breaks down rapidly – rang 999. She was picked up by an ambulance and spent a week in hospital.

She said: "It was the most horrible experience of my life. I can't believe I'm still alive – I wouldn't be if it weren't for that phone."

"It was like a blessing in disguise."

Beth, from Lancaster, bought the phone days earlier because her £400 iPhone 6 handset kept losing power.

She said: "It was constantly switching off. It was extremely annoying as it needed charging at least four times a day to stay on."

Tribute to WW2 spy

A FEMALE World War Two spy will be commemorated with an English Heritage blue plaque after a drive to celebrate more women.

Christine Granville, who died in 1952, undertook missions in Europe and has been hailed as most one of our "most remarkable secret agents".

The plaque will be at the West London hotel she lived in for the last three years of her life.

Just 14 per cent of London blue plaques are for females but the charity's Plaques for Women campaign has sparked a rise in nominations.

It has announced six to honour women in 2020.

JK home shake-up

JK Rowling is trying to restore a little Victorian magic to her mansion.

The Harry Potter author, 53, is adding a kitchen, scullery, boot room and pantry to her £2million Edinburgh pad.

She will also move the living room to the location envisioned when the property was built.

The changes are intended to reflect its Victorian heritage, her agents told planners.

Separately, planners have approved 4ft gates at her 162-acre Killiechassie Estate in Perthshire.

The author is worth about £750million, putting her 14th on the Sunday Times Rich List.

Kids chef drive ban

A NURSERY chef who drove while five times over the limit said she drank to cope with feeding 120 children a day.

Simone Morrall, 47, crashed her Mercedes C220 while trying to reverse from a space after an afternoon in a pub. Police found her slumped over the wheel asleep.

She told Stockport JPs she had felt isolated at work after her pleas for an assistant were refused.

Morrall, of Cheadle Hulme, Gtr Manchester, admitted drink-driving – her second conviction.

She got 12 weeks' jail suspended for a year, a three-year ban and is expected to lose her job.

Great-gran Suzanne Parker, 71, has reported 72 fake match.com profiles since October.

She is so good at spotting those preying on the lonely, her pals call her the Scammer Detector.

The care assistant, from Bristol, has used dating sites since husband John died in 2004 and been targeted dozens of times.

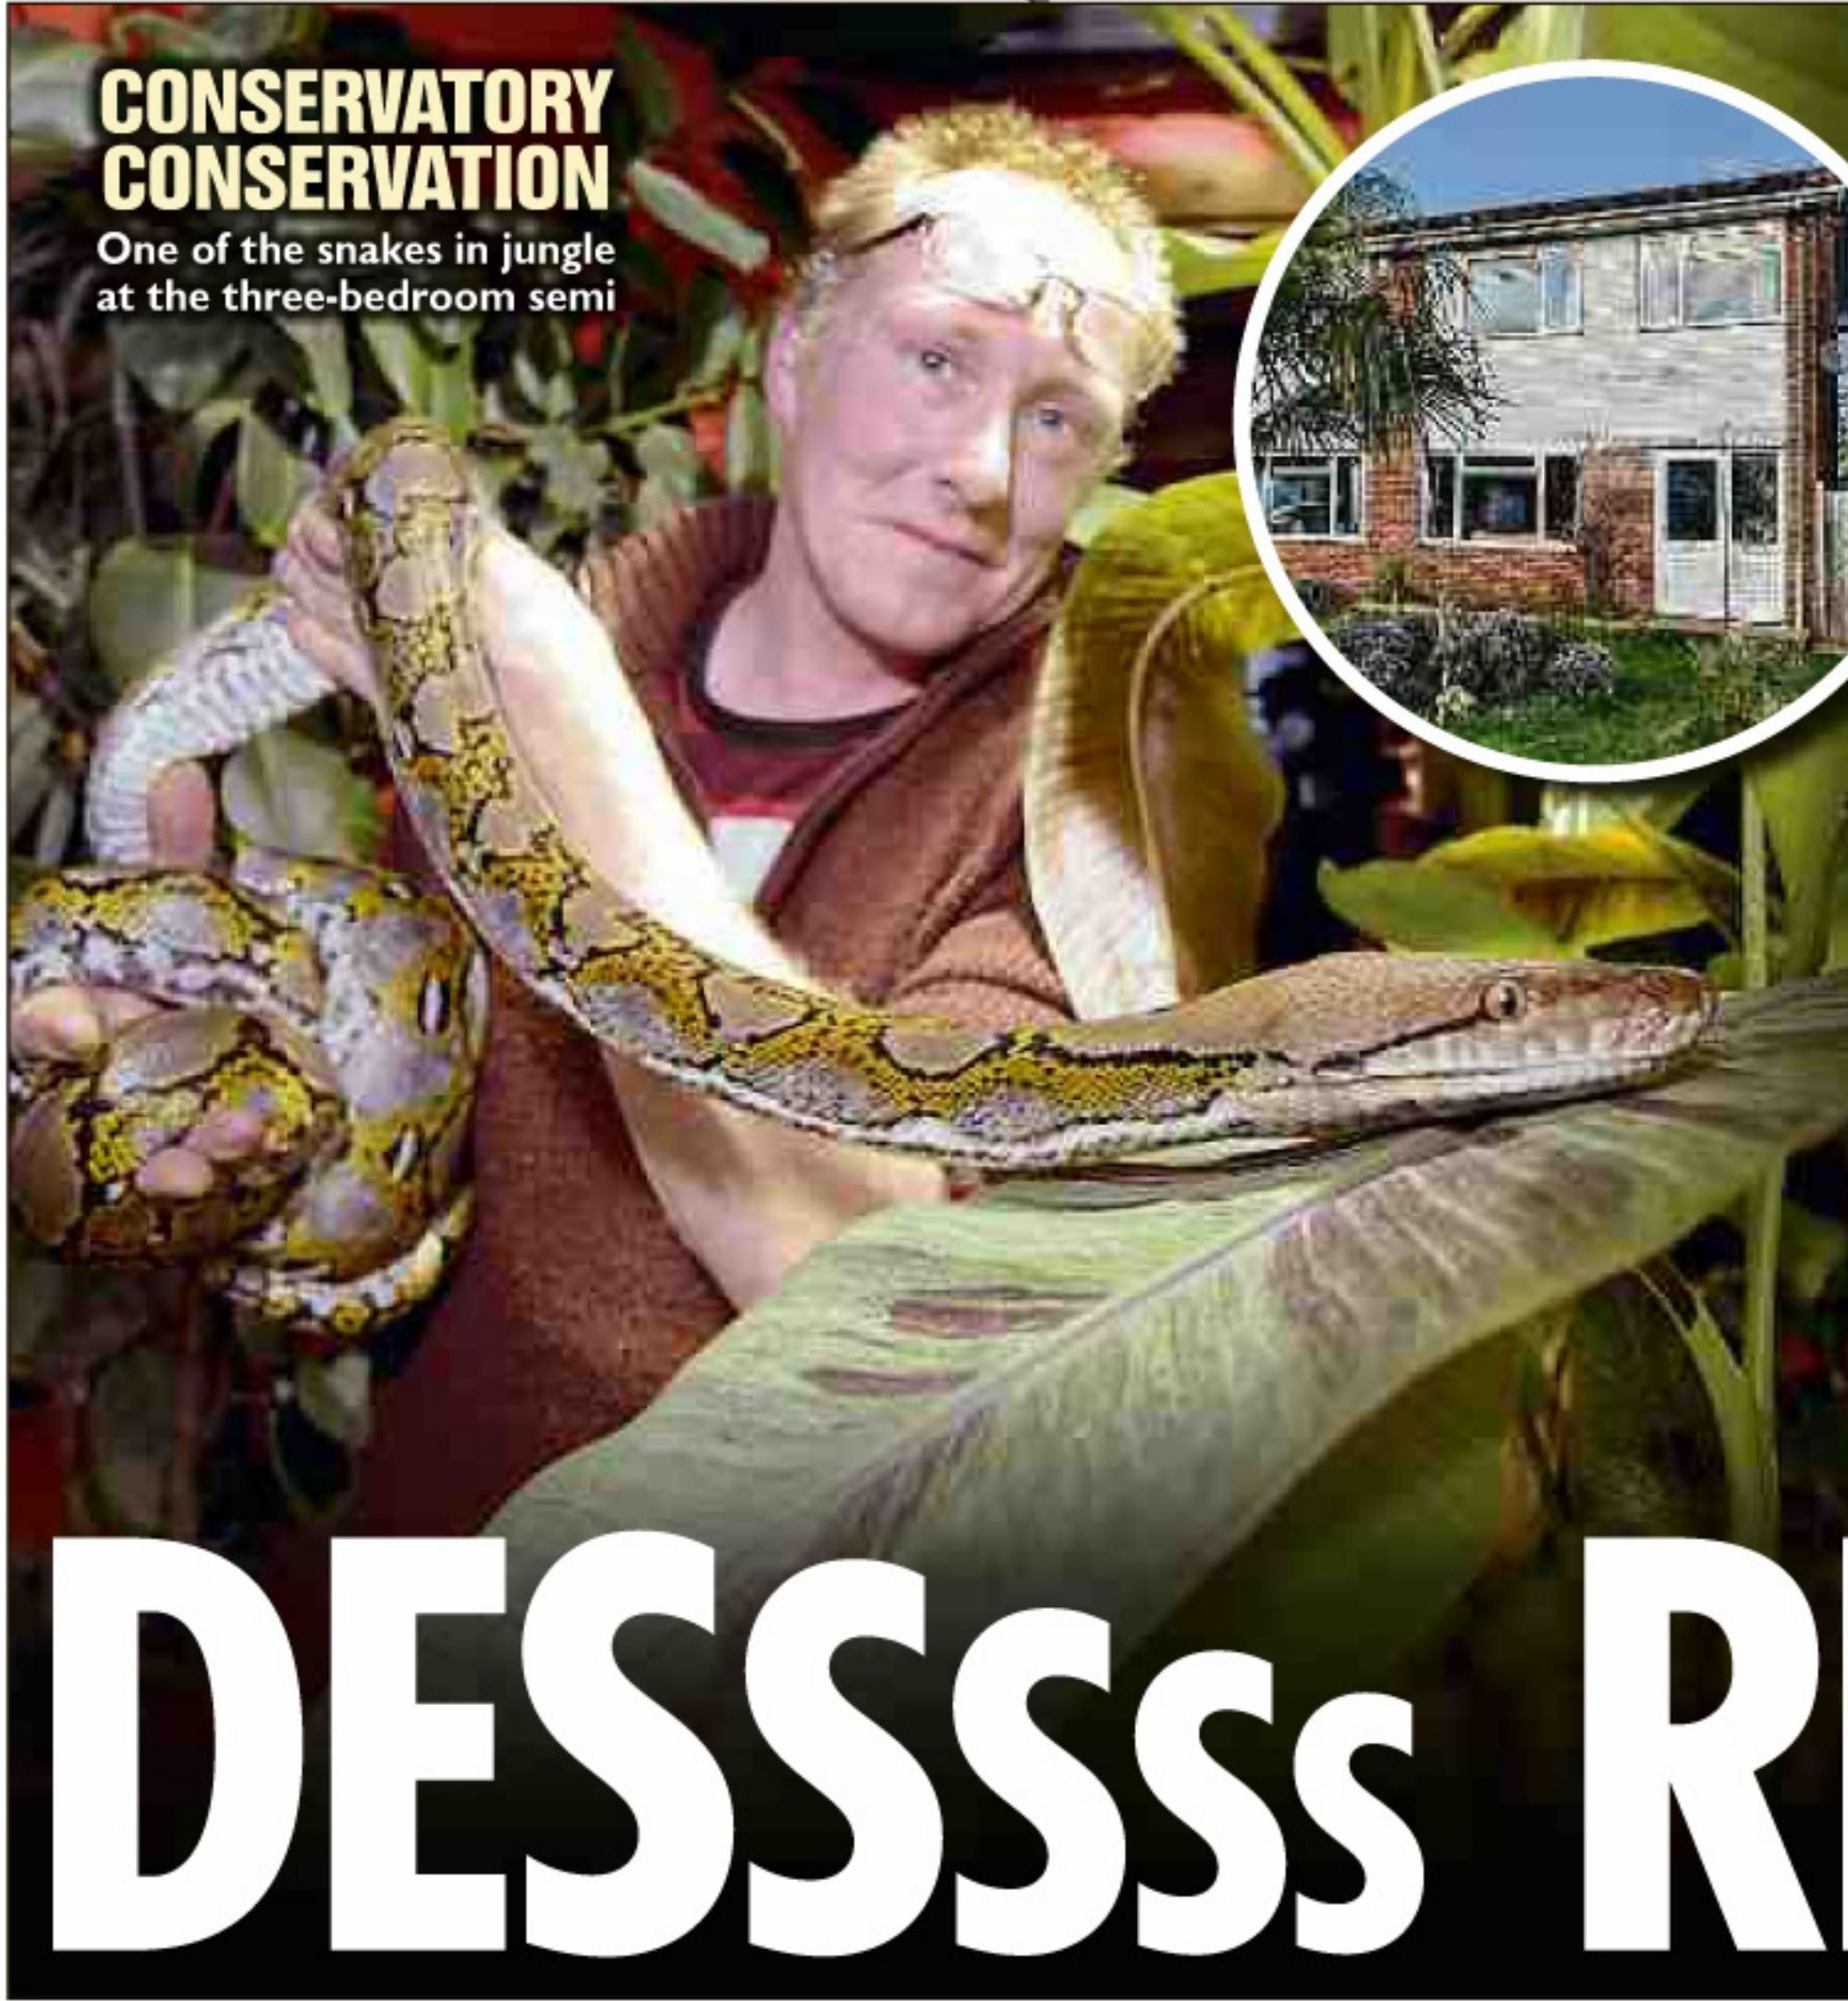

But she spots fraudsters from clues such as too-handsome profile pictures or mangled English.

She said: "It's easy to get attached when you're lonely and vulnerable."

EXCLUSIVE by WILL BARKER

A WILDLIFE fan turned his conservatory into a jungle — but struggles to sleep as the critters keep noisily mating.

Warwick Vardy, 47, spent £22,000 creating a mini-rainforest in his three-bed semi.

He lets thousands of creatures — including snakes, tree frogs, piranhas, chameleons and leafcutter ants — roam inside.

But their mating causes sleepless nights for him and wife Freda.

Worst are the bats and frogs which emit a farting noise to woo mates.

Warwick said: "There tends to be loads and loads of squealing. The bats make so much noise. It's a squabbling sound as if they're arguing and the call goes on for about 20 seconds."

"We've had people sitting here at the table having a drink and then all of a sudden you'll hear one of the tree frogs, and it sounds like a fart. It's quite embarrassing."

His sulcata tortoises once got into the kitchen — moving chairs and sounding like burglars.

THE HEARTWAR

EXCLUSIVE by KATE JACKSON

WHEN Kerry Irving looks lovingly into his dog Max's eyes it's easy to believe him when he says the devoted springer spaniel saved his life.

Once a high-powered manager with a multi-million-pound budget, he had hit rock bottom after a 2006 road accident left him with crippling spinal injuries that ended his career. In constant pain, practically house-bound and addicted to prescription painkillers, he could see no future. It looked like the end of his social life and his hobby of cycling up to 600 miles a month around his home in Keswick, in the Lake District, where he lived with his wife Angela. Kerry, 55, recalled: "I was isolated, dependent on heavy drugs and I felt a burden on my wife. "The nerve damage meant I could only shuffle along. I started thinking I didn't want to be here. Every day and night I would think about ending it all. I knew exactly how I'd do it." Then, in August 2009, Angela persuaded him to go to the corner shop for some milk, simply to get him out of the house.

Good listener

Kerry said: "I didn't think I could do it but she made me go. I got to the corner of our road and saw Max's nose sticking through the railing of a gate. "I stopped to say hello because I'd had spaniels when I was younger. He looked at me and straight away there was a connection. "Stuck in a yard, it was as if he was saying, 'My life's pretty rubbish and yours doesn't look much better'. "For me, it was a tiny glimmer of what life could become again." After that, Kerry would offer to pop out every day, just so he could see Max. Then, after a couple of weeks, he asked the dog's owner if he could take him for a walk. He said: "It was the best thing that has happened to me, after getting married." Kerry, who has now written a book, Max The Miracle Dog, said: "We went 60 feet up the road to a sandstone wall and I was exhausted. "When you have an ailment that people can't see, but you're shuffling away and physically gasping, you feel so self-conscious. "But with Max, it didn't matter. We could stop and it was just a man having a rest with his dog." From then on, Max provided Kerry with the motivation to go further and further. One of his first goals was to get to Derwentwater lake. He said: "It's six minutes' walk from my house but it took us an hour and a half because I'd shuffle then stop, shuffle then stop. "I couldn't have done it on my own because I would have panicked about how I would get back. But I wanted Max to get there because I remembered how much my old spaniels loved water." Still in immense pain, Kerry had found a reason to live - as well as a good listener. He said: "I could tell him how bad I felt my life was. As anyone who has had a dog knows, they are very good listeners and it's often easier to talk to them than to people." The arrangement also suited Max's owner, who was a carer for her father and couldn't exercise the dog as much as she would have liked. Kerry - who has since got two more dogs, Paddy, three, and Harry, one - said: "It was about reprogramming my brain. Being with Max took me from thinking, 'I'm in pain, I can't do anything' to 'I can get out and do things again'." Such was his transformation, Kerry has since retrained as a locksmith. He said: "I liked working out puzzles and thought it would let me work to my own schedule, allowing myself time off to recover when I needed it. The second thought was I could get a van and Max could come with me." To publicise his new business, Kerry made Max "Head of Security" and posted picturesque photos of him in the Lake District. Life was becoming good again - but there was just one cloud. Kerry said: "Every day it broke my heart to

CHANGES TO THE INVESTMENT MANAGER FOR MOST OF OUR INVESTMENT FUNDS.

If you have a pension or investment with Scottish Widows, Halifax, Bank of Scotland, Lloyds Bank or Clerical Medical, we want to make you aware of changes we're making to our investment management arrangements.

We're replacing Aberdeen as the investment manager for most of our funds. The day-to-day investment management of most of our actively-managed funds started moving to Schroders at the end of September 2019. This will be completed by April 2020. Aberdeen will continue to manage our passively-managed and property funds until 2022.

The change applies to a number of Scottish Widows, Halifax and Clerical Medical funds. Scottish Widows will still own the funds and remain responsible for defining how the funds should be managed. We'll continue to monitor the performance of the fund and the investment manager.

Your existing fund and policy charges will not change because of this new arrangement. Transaction costs may increase in the short-term for some of the actively managed funds as investments are bought and sold with the aim of generating higher returns. However, these will be capped and monitored by us in order to limit their impact on short-term performance.

Although you don't need to take any action, we've provided more information about the changes at www.scottishwidows.co.uk/fundchanges ve Max back. People would say, why don't you just get your own dog? And I'd say, 'But then it wouldn't be Max'. There is only one Max. He was my lifesaver.”

In 2012 fate stepped in again. Max's owner was moving away and asked Kerry if he would like to adopt him. Not long afterwards, despite the fact that he had only just mastered walking uphill, the pair climbed all 1,000ft of Ben Nevis, in the Scottish Highlands.

It took six hours to go up and down the UK's highest peak – and it took Kerry three months to recover from the exertion.

He said: “It damn near killed me. I was a fool really but I thought, ‘Go for the biggest, why not?’ If I'd been alone, I might have been tempted to pretend I'd got to the top, but I wouldn't let Max down.

“It was the best feeling to get to the top. I was the highest person in the UK, with Max at my side.”

Kerry now manages his pain with nothing stronger than the odd paracetamol.

He said: “I was on prescription pills for ten years after the accident. “I would get anxious about when I would be able to take another one. By the end I was on the strongest medication the doctors could give.

Second chance

“Sometimes I would take 12 a day and it didn't touch the pain at all. The doctor said it would take two years to come off them, by reducing the strength gradually every month.

“I thought I knew better and stopped taking them. Four hours later, Angela begged me to take one because I was sat in a corner, shaking and sweating.

“I can understand how people do stupid things on drugs, like burglaries, because it's the need for the next dose. I was addicted.”

Kerry took his last pill 18 months after he vowed to come off them.

He said: “I struggle when it's cold, wet and damp. If I go walking with my camera bag slung on my shoulder then I'll feel it the next day.

“But I wouldn't change anything. I've had a second chance at life. I was in a career that was cut-throat and ruthless.

“Going through what I have, I realise it's not about money or a fancy car, it's about time and health.

“You don't need that much to get by and from helping others by talking to them and sharing Max with them, I've become a lot richer.”

He and Max's story has delighted people all over the world. Max's Facebook page, Max Out In The Lake District, features pictures of all three of Kerry's dogs. It has more than 100,000 followers and led to an award from Keswick Tourism.

Last year, on the ITV programme Britain's Top 100 Dogs, Kerry revealed what he had been through and how Max had helped him.

Now a mental health campaigner, he said: “Suddenly people were coming up to me and shaking my hand. Or they'd stop their car and tell me, ‘I'm glad you're still here’.

“Within 24 hours of the programme being aired I had 10,000 messages. So many people told me they had experienced something similar to me, or that they'd lost a loved one, and my dogs brought them some joy. I realised this could be a vessel for something bigger.”

Kerry has organised several charity walks with his dogs and has raised more than £130,000 for good causes.

Max and Paddy have received a commendation from the animal charity PDSA for bringing comfort and support to thousands of people.

Max has trained as a therapy dog, and even attended a garden party for community champions at Buckingham Palace last year and received a pat from the Duchess of Cambridge – who he has also met in Keswick.

Kerry said: “There's something special about Max, everyone who meets him says so. It's something in the way he looks at you.

“He's the most loyal, loving friend. He looked into my soul and fixed me.”

DATING CELEBS ON LASH

IT'S a good thing the Celebs Go Dating cast didn't have any suitors to meet yesterday – as there would have been some sore heads.

I'm told that many of the E4 show's stars went on a tear-up in Soho, central London, costing £4,500 – and that was just the pre-drinks.

DEAN GAFFNEY, AMY HART, OLIVIA BENTLEY, JAMES LOCK and JOSHUA RITCHIE dropped the giant amount at Aussie restaurant Scarlett Green on Tuesday.

But at least they were generous. The tip alone was nearly £500.

The bill showed the celebs and some of the production team sunk 15 bottles of wine, two bottles of champagne, four bottles of gin and two bottles of vodka.

They also saw off 20 shots of raspberry sours, 12 of tequila, 12 pornstar martinis and 21 espresso martinis.

I've got a hangover just thinking about it.

FEMINIST FELLOWE

DOWNTON Abbey creator JULIAN FELLOWES has been called many things – now he's been given the most unlikely tag of being a feminist.

ALICE EVE, who plays devious Susan Trenchard in new ITV period drama Belgravia, says he doesn't just fill his shows with strong women, he understands them.

Alice said: "He is definitely a feminist. As a woman you read scenes and think, 'I wouldn't say that', but with Julian you think, 'That's absolutely right'." The series starts on March 15.

Sally could be forgiven for forgetting who was her real offspring and who was just putting on a good act.

YOUTUBE ACE LANDS DOCUMENTARY

HE is best known for constantly calling for ARSENE WENGER's head when the Frenchman was Arsenal manager.

But Robbie Lyle, from YouTube channel Arsenal Fan TV, is going mainstream and has landed his own ITV show.

The larger-than-life Gunners fan, who founded the often-controversial YouTube channel, will now front a documentary on ITV.

I've heard the show, currently called I'm Red, Not Black, will be a fly-on-the-wall look at Robbie's colourful life within the football world. It will air later this year.

The programme, being made by the team behind Geordie Shore star CHARLOTTE CROSBY's reality show, will also feature Troy Townsend, who fights for equality in football with organisation Kick It Out and writer and ex-football hooligan Cass Pennant. A source said: "Robbie has become a sensation in football circles.

"He divides opinion but is something of a pioneer when it comes to his channel Arsenal Fan TV.

"The documentary, currently a one-off, will give those fans a closer look at what his day-to-day life is really like.

The current plan is for it to be filmed and aired before the end of the season, so time is of the essence."

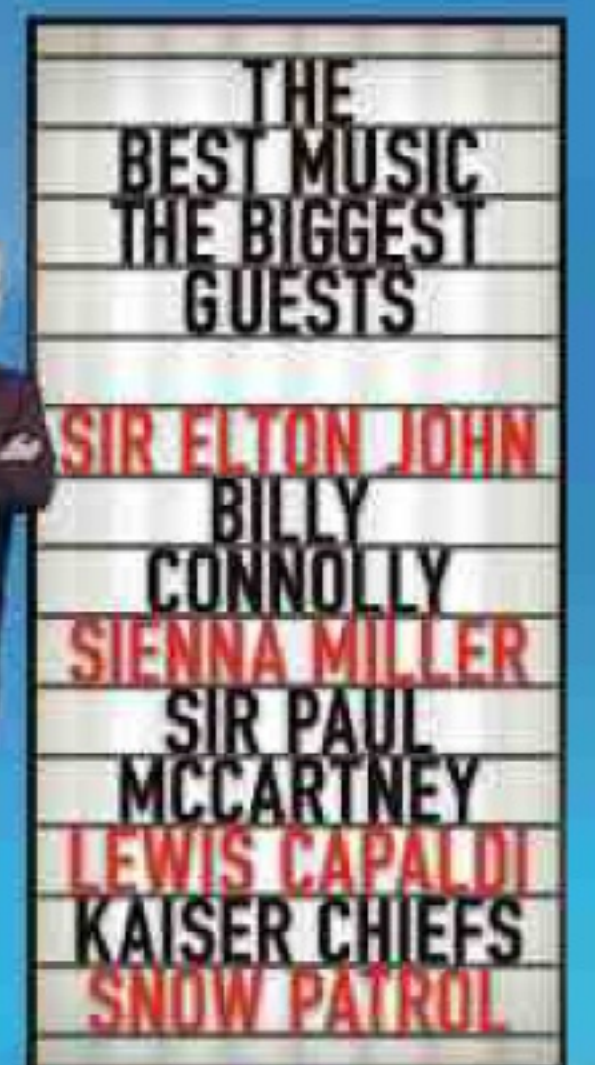

Robbie, who has previously presented Channel 4's The Real Football Fan Show, boasts more than one million followers for his YouTube channel as the outspoken voice of Gunners supporters.

But he has been at the centre of controversy over the past few months, with fans slamming his channel's negative post-match rants.

Robbie's only being honest. It doesn't take a genius to point out the Gunners have been rubbish.

Massage at spa went way too far

Dear Deidre

I CHEATED on my wife with a "happy ending" during a spa massage session I had thought was legitimate.

I work in a factory and was moving a packing box when I felt a spasm in my back. My mate realised I was in agony and passed me a business card.

It was for a massage place not far from work and he said: "The girls are really good. They'll sort you out."

I made an appointment for my lunch hour. The place looked quite classy and a pretty girl on reception showed me through to a room with a massage table.

She told me to take my clothes off, lie front down with my face through the hole on the massage bed and pull a towel over my backside.

I couldn't properly see the woman who came into the room, but I showed her where I was in pain and she worked quickly with warm oil to ease my back. It immediately felt better. She then started to massage my legs and her hand went up under the towel – before she asked me to turn over on to my back.

I could see she was a beautiful Thai girl of about 20. I must admit I felt quite turned on.

She started massaging my chest and legs – then she asked if I'd like a "happy ending".

I'm a bit naive and didn't know what she meant but she explained and I found myself saying, "Yes".

It was great and I walked out feeling 10ft tall.

My work colleagues all cheered when I walked back on to the factory floor. I must have gone red with embarrassment.

The thing is, I have a beautiful wife who's 42. She's very shy and our sex life isn't the best. I'm 45.

My back is almost better but I'm tempted to return to the massage parlour. If I go, though, I may end up cheating on my wife again.

■ DEIDRE SAYS: Why risk jeopardising your marriage and sexual health for a few minutes of sexual relief with a sex worker – because that is what this masseuse is.

Cheating isn't for you. You're a happily married man who got into a situation way out of your comfort zone.

Supposing one of your workmates tells his wife, who tells...

If it's not too late, don't admit to colleagues this was anything other than a professional massage.

If your sex life at home is disappointing, focus on your wife, telling her you'd like to spice things up. Women generally like to be romanced so start by leaving her a love note, telling her how special she is and what you would like to do with her.

Make sex fun. Talk to her and ask her what she enjoys, and ask her to guide your sex play.

My e-leaflet 50 Ways To Add Fun To Sex is full of suggestions.

Dear Deidre

MY boyfriend never tries to please me in the bedroom and I'm fed up.

We've been together for four months and are both 24.

Before we met, he had lots of relationships so I thought he'd know what he was doing, but sex is all about him.

Other aspects of our relationship are great. We get on well and have a laugh, but the sex is rubbish.

I've had five previous boyfriends and the last two have been considerate lovers so I know what I want but I'm embarrassed to talk to him about it. I've tried buying toys but he just wants to watch me and won't join in.

■ DEIDRE SAYS: If you are having sex together, you should be able to talk about it with each other.

If you feel awkward explaining, use your hands to guide him and make comments like: "That's great."

My e-leaflet How To Thrill A Woman In Bed will help you explain to him.

Dear Deidre

AM I misreading the signs? My lesbian friend seems to keep coming on to me and I'm not sure what to do about it – I'm a guy, after all.

We've been friends since we house-shared at university. I'm 23 and she's 22.

She only ever dated other girls and always said "guys are a let-down".

We've started going to the gym together and she's definitely giving me signals she's interested in me. She's tactile towards me and always gives me a hug and holds on longer than necessary.

Last night she put her hand on my thigh in the cinema. I like her – but am I reading more into this?

■ DEIDRE SAYS: Our sexuality isn't an unchanging entity. Many more identify as bisexual now.

Ask her to a concert or out for dinner. Tell her it's a date and see how she reacts. If she accepts your offer, you can see how things develop from there. Good luck!

NEV'S NEW LODGINGS: DAY 4

I'VE LOST HOPE OF TOT WITH NEW MAN

Dear Deidre

I AM devastated after having a miscarriage at the weekend. The only way I will get over this is if I have hopes of becoming pregnant again – but my partner doesn't want more children.

It happened the day after I learned I was pregnant.

We weren't trying for a baby but I was thrilled, thinking this was my last chance of becoming a mum again. I am 40, with a lovely six-year-old daughter and a son who's 17 by my ex.

I have always said I'd like another child but I don't know how to talk to my partner now. He has been a tower of strength this past week and we are very much in love. Apart from this, we agree on everything.

I don't want to resent him for denying me another baby.

■ DEIDRE SAYS: You are in the grip of the physical and emotional effects of your miscarriage. It is best not to take a major decision – like having another child – for at least six months.

Tell your partner how much you value his support and put this decision to one side for now while you focus on recovering. You have both lost the baby and my e-leaflet Had A Miscarriage? will help.

I MARRIED FAST AND NOW I'M TRAPPED

Dear Deidre

WHY did I rush into getting engaged when I have feelings for someone else?

I had sex with my girlfriend on the first date, then she found out she was pregnant and moved in. I'm 28, she's 26. I feel we rushed into being together.

I was left some money and found us a house to buy. I proposed and she said yes. Our son is six months old.

But I've met my dream woman at work. She's 25, single and very attractive. We often have lunch together.

I'm not cut out to be a dad. I struggle with doing stuff with my son. Should I try to keep my family together?

■ DEIDRE SAYS: You don't know if this woman would make you happy but you do know you fall in love quickly. Don't make the same mistake again. A good relationship isn't built on looks alone.

Talk to your fiancée to try to find a connection to make things work. She's given birth to your son and you owe it to both of them to give it your best shot.

My e-leaflet Your Relationship MoT will help, and read Commando Dad by Neil Sinclair to build your confidence and help bond with your son.

SHE'S been slammed for neglecting her kids - by taking a bath, not wrapping her baby up properly in a blanket and cuddling her tot so much he can't get to sleep on his own.

While it might sound like the description of a terrible parent, in reality, anyone who follows Stacey Solomon on Instagram can see she is a devoted mum who lives for her sons, Zachary, 11, Leighton, seven, and Rex, nine months.

Yet that has done nothing to stop the tide of insults Stacey, a panellist on ITV talk show Loose Women, has received in recent months - with most of it from other mums.

So why, at a time when you would hope women would feel a common bond, do other mums become trolls?

Psychologist Phillip Hodson says it's partly because being a good mum matters so much.

He says: "Parenting is tribal. We want to feel we are doing it right."

"That means if we see other mums doing it differently, that can make others feel like they are doing it incorrectly."

And Stacey, 30, could have found herself facing a torrent of abuse for being TOO approachable.

While the lifestyles of other celebrity mothers, such as supermodel Rosie Huntington-Whiteley, who is mum to two-year-old Jack, or mum-of-four Victoria Beckham, seem out of reach, it feels easier for some mums to compare themselves to Essex-based Stacey, who is more the girl-next-door type. Phillip says this can prompt feelings of envy, which can get channelled into aggression. He adds: "Nowadays social media allows us a tour of celebrity homes. This can trigger feelings of, 'If she's got that, why can't I?'."

By TANITH
CAREY

"There may also be a sense of 'Who does she think she is?'."

"With celebrities we tend to feel we have 'made' them by watching their shows, so we also feel in a position to pull them down."

Plus, the anonymity of the internet makes it easier to express jealous and insecure feelings that mums wouldn't otherwise be able to voice.

So what are the main parenting issues that press other mums' buttons - and why do some parents get so upset about them?

Here, parenting expert and author Dr Angharad Rudkin explains just why mums can turn into trolls - and what the flash-points are that set them off.

FOOD

Stacey was accused of weaning Rex, her son with partner Joe Swash, 38, too early at five-and-a-half months, after posting on Instagram about the tot's broccoli dinner.

The move got slammed by her "Susans" - Stacey's jokey name for her online critics.

But she clearly thinks carefully about her children's nutrition, even cutting her son Leighton's sandwiches into dinosaur shapes to encourage him to eat them.

This didn't escape criticism either, as she was attacked for putting too much in his lunchbox.

So why is food such a trigger point in parenting?

Dr Rudkin says: "It's a massive part of our biology as mums to feed our child well. It also represents love."

"We see it as a badge of honour when our child happily eats kale and chickpeas, and can be a little more secretive about our shameful Friday evening post-swimming-class KFC stop-off. Eating is a public behaviour so we are on high alert to see how we are doing in comparison with other parents."

FED UP ... bullies trolled Stacey

SLEEP

Stacey was accused of cuddling baby Rex to sleep too much - with online critics claiming it means she is not training him to sleep through the night.

Of course it's impossible for a mum to give her child too much affection but whether you are a queen of routine or a mum who takes your baby into your bed to soothe their cries, the issue of how to get kids to have regular bedtimes and get enough sleep is one of the most divisive parenting topics.

The reason sleep is a sensitive topic is that for many mums it represents the ability to provide a calm, organised family life.

Dr Rudkin says: "Sleep also feels like a key to a magical kingdom."

"If only you and your child can get enough sleep, mums feel they will be empowered to get through the day. So as parents, we are constantly on the lookout for tips and clues on how other parents get their kids to have regular bedtimes and sleep well."

SAFETY

Stacey was slammed for letting Rex freeze because he didn't have a blanket.

Whether it's scootering without a helmet or accusing other mums of not wrapping their children up warm - as Stacey was told when Rex was pictured on Instagram without a blanket - we all know how quickly other parents can give advice on keeping kids safe.

It is partly because we fear so much for our own children, and to relieve this anxiety we project those worries on to other parents.

Dr Rudkin says: "None of us want our child to be unsafe, and so we are highly sensitive to ways and means of protecting our child."

"But if this is becoming a competition about who is keeping their child most and least safe, it could be a sign that as a parent you are not feeling confident and are feeling anxious yourself."

Whatever the reason behind it, it's no excuse for trolling mums like Stacey.

GET THAT TIMING RIGHT

SIMPLE FOOD FALAFEL WRAP WITH TANGY DIP

Serves: 2

YOU NEED:

100ml Alpro No Sugars alternative to yoghurt
 ½ lemon, juice and zest
 ½ garlic clove
 4 fresh coriander stalks
 ½ red chili pepper
 3-4 falafel
 1 spring onion
 1 carrot
 100g white cabbage, finely sliced
 100g red cabbage, finely sliced
 ½ avocado
 2-4 wraps

METHOD: If you want to bake your falafels, preheat your oven to 180C and then do the dip.

Chop the coriander and crush or finely dice the garlic. Mix into the No Sugar yoghurt alternative along with the red pepper and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Pop into a bowl and finish with a topping of extra pepper, chopped coriander and a little grated lemon zest.

Now either bake the falafels with a drizzle of olive oil in your pre-heated oven, or heat the olive oil in a pan and cook them over a medium heat, turning until they are crusty and golden all over.

Then season with a twist of sea salt and black pepper. Put to one side until you're ready.

Next, make your salad. Finely slice the red and white cabbage into thin strips, grate the carrot, slice the avocado and chop the spring onion.

Warm the wrap for 30 seconds in an oil-free pan over a medium heat.

Start the filling with a dollop of dip in the middle of the wrap, then add the falafels, cabbage, carrots, avocado slices and spring onion.

Season to taste and add more dip if you like. Then fold it all up, serve with the dip and enjoy.

SLOW HIM DOWN

IF your partner is quick off the mark, it will make your orgasm gap even longer. So try these tips that work well to heighten your enjoyment while gently dampening his, helping you to finish at the same time.

LUBRICANT: Fifty per cent of women found it easier to orgasm when they used a lubricant during sex, in a study by the Indiana University Center for Sexual Health Promotion.

An added bonus is that lubes lessen friction felt by your man, which may prolong his performance. Try Almost Naked Personal Lubricant, by Good Clean Love (£16.99, Amazon).

STIMULATING CONDOMS: Take the edge off his pleasure by masking some of the sensations he will feel. They will ramp up your own fun by adding extra friction. Try Pasante Ribbed & Dotted Condoms (£6.99, lovehoney.co.uk) which are covered with raised studs to rub you up the right way.

YOU-FIRST FOREPLAY: If your sex usually begins with an equal exchange of foreplay, get selfish.

Ensure all the preliminary warm-up stages are focused on you and your arousal, and let him catch up later. Start your session with your favourite form of foreplay.

A quarter of women prefer oral sex, a Durex survey found. Aim to get yourself up to an eight-out-of-ten level of arousal before you turn your attention to him.

Or even better, climax through foreplay first, then have sex.

Unlike men, women don't have a recovery period, so there's nothing to stop you climaxing again within seconds.

WANT to enjoy sex even more? Try reminding your fella that it's a marathon, not a sprint.

A new study has revealed how long it takes women on average to reach orgasm - and it's longer than most men might think.

PRE-HEAT YOUR OVEN

SUPPLEMENT YOUR SEX DRIVE: Try some natural remedies that are believed to boost your libido.

Shatavari (£9, naturisimo.com) is an Ayurvedic herb that can balance your hormones, lower anxiety and rev up your natural urges. Or try Korean Ginseng (£28.99, 500mg 200 capsules, Holland & Barrett), is said to improve your energy levels, raise alertness and give your bits a general pick-me-up.

STOP YOUR MIND WANDERING: It might sound a little hippy but practising mindfulness can take sex to the next level. A 2017 study in the Journal of Sexual Medicine found that women's ability to orgasm increased by 30 per cent after they had completed a mindfulness programme.

Before sex, grab a moment alone and try a five-minute meditation to focus your thoughts. Be in the present and notice five things happening around you, from sounds to what you touch.

NEAT SPRAY LOVE: Another

natural way to prime yourself for a speedy climax is aromatherapy. Certain scents are believed to increase arousal, including ylang ylang and patchouli. If your partner is getting to the finish line way before you, try wearing an aromatherapy scent during the day before you hit the sheets. Try Love Sleep Pillow Spray (£30, thisworks.com), a heady blend of scents to curl your toes.

BLOOD-PUMPING BEHAVIOUR:

An orgasm is just the release of blood that gathered in your lady-garden during arousal. So for optimum orgasms, you need to ensure optimum blood flow.

Certain things (like dehydration, smoking and slobbering on the sofa all day) can leave your circulation lethargic, leading to less excitement in bed.

So ditch the cigs, drink plenty of water and get a good 20-30 minutes of exercise, like a brisk walk, before hitting the sheets. Sadly, running up the stairs to the bedroom isn't enough.

GET THE EDGE: Get a head start on your orgasm by "edging" a few times during the day - bringing yourself almost to climax, then stopping. This allows the blood to gather in your bits, ready for orgasm. When you eventually have sex, you'll find you hit the high notes much faster than usual - and possibly more powerfully.

WITH OUR SEXPERT'S BEDROOM ADVICE

orgasm GAP

While the average man takes just six minutes to climax, it takes women 13 mins and 41 secs.

And 68.6 per cent of women need some other form of action beside penetrative sex. So how can you put the max in your climax?

And what can your man do to help you along?

Here, sexpert KATE TAYLOR offers a guide to closing the orgasm time gap.

GET-YOU-THERE TOYS

SOMETIMES normal sex simply isn't stimulating enough to get you there.

So a helpful way to speed up your satisfaction is to add a sex toy to your bedroom routine.

These ones are designed to directly stimulate the parts that normal sex cannot reach – but will not get in the way of the action.

Fin, by Dame Products (£85, cultbeauty.co.uk): Dame Products is an all-female company on a mission to close the "orgasm gap" between men and women.

One of its most effective solutions is this fun, discreet stimulator. You wear it on your finger and use it to massage your clitoris during sex.

It's small enough not to get in his way, and strong enough to turn "Meh" into "OH YEAH!"

Starlet, by Womanizer (£49, womanizer.com): The Starlet is small but mighty, delivering a unique mix of suction and stimulation using air technology.

It fits over your bits and would be a perfect way to liven up positions such as doggy style or spoons.

Tracey Cox Supersex Rechargeable Vibrating Love Ring (£34.99, lovehoney.co.uk):

If you like him, then you really should put a ring on him. Vibrating penis rings increase YOUR pleasure by vibrating against your bits, while also giving him a little bit more staying power. This trusty toy delivers a powerful range of sensations during sex.

SPEED-IT-UP POSITIONS

FOR female orgasms, some positions work much better than others.

To ensure you reach the high notes together, choose a position that delivers direct stimulation to your erogenous zones such as your clitoris, G-spot and vulva, but doesn't give your fella too much depth or control – or he will be finished before you have even started.

These are my pick of positions to get in sync.

WOMAN ON TOP, FACING FORWARDS:

This is a great way to ensure that every part of you gets the attention it deserves. Climb aboard your partner and sit up straight – that way, he will be rubbing up against the front wall of your nether regions, where the G-spot is rumoured to hide.

From here, your fella can also stroke the underside of your breasts and your nipples – the most sensitive areas for most women.

SPOONS: This isn't the most hot-and-heavy position, but that's what we want – because your partner's pleasure will be slowed down in this sleepy session, while you can use your hands or a toy to build your own orgasm first.

Lie on your side with your back against your partner's chest. Bring your top leg back over his top leg, so you are fully exposed down under.

Now you are free to explore your most sensitive zones. When you feel your excitement reaching the point of no return, flip over into the doggy-style position so you can quickly climax together.

COITAL ALIGNMENT TECHNIQUE (CAT):

This missionary move combines the intimacy of face-to-face sex with more direct stimulation for you. Start in basic missionary, him between your legs, but then have your partner move himself four or five inches up the bed.

Then, instead of thrusting, he should rock his hips against you. It might take a while to notice the difference, but you should soon feel much more direct pressure than usual. This position also has the benefit of slowing down his excitement, giving you more time to catch up.

PETA TODD'S

IN her weekly column, the mum of four discusses the ups and downs of family life. Today Peta, who is married to cycling great Mark Cavendish, talks about being honest when it comes to a woman's monthly visitor.

THE other day I was putting my daughter Delilah to bed and she was talking about how many days there are until her eighth birthday.

It's big news in our house, obviously – it's 29 days, by the way. As I looked at her it suddenly dawned on me that in the next few years she is going to start her periods. This made me almost verge on feeling sorry for her.

I myself had been "on" this week – sorry for the extra info, but I'm an adult woman, it's kind of what happens.

Maybe my own hormones played a part in why I felt so emotional about it.

I remember one of my best friends starting her period when we were nine and it was this mysterious "thing" that I was both jealous and terrified of.

With both my daughter and my sons I have always been very open about sex, sexual health and puberty, as I think it's the best way to be.

I know they are going to get a sideline briefing from their peers and the internet but I want to be the trusted source.

I asked Delilah whether she understood what a period was and why women had them. She was not impressed to hear they rocked up every single month and that they could bring some cramps, headaches and moods that needed naming, like storms.

She was then imploring me to take a guess as to when hers would arrive and no matter my answer, she would say: "No Mum, really, when will it?"

It made me think about the big moves being made lately to normalise periods, with ad campaigns such as This Girl Can that hugely help.

The image in a TV advert of a woman getting changed for sport with a visible tampon string is enormous.

I have never shied away from questions, although I wish companies didn't make a tampon in a handbag look quite so exciting to a toddler searching for sweets.

I explain to my eldest son how to have compassion and understanding, as sometimes I don't quite feel my patient, resilient self or need him to run into the shop to grab me supplies.

This is part of relationships, of friendships, families and life.

The options that are available now are also amazing – reusable pads from companies such as Wear 'em Out and period cups are making strides to help the environment.

I am going to make it my mission to get on board so I can educate my gang and normalise our bodies in all their weird, wonderful and normal ways.

CAR-OWNER

IT'S not just a swanky car show and gallons of free coffee scuppered by coronavirus.

Take it from me, the whole industry is shaking in its boots right now.

Nearly all car factory supply chains lead back to China, where millions of people are confined in their own homes.

Car plants have already been hit by a shortage of parts and could soon grind to a halt.

The cancellation of this week's Geneva Motor Show – where 90 new cars were due to be unveiled – was another blow. Now many launches, where people like me drive cars to tell you if they are any good or not, are being canned in a further bid to stop Covid-19 spreading.

All of which means the showroom dates for dozens of new models are bound to be pushed back.

Who reckons Tesla is regretting going to Shanghai now?

But that's enough of all that. Let's take five and have a look at what should have been on the stands at Geneva.

Here's my A to Z guide.

ASTON MARTIN V12 SPEEDSTER: No roof, no windscreen and therefore absolutely no point in rainy Britain but I absolutely love, L-O-V-E it. This beautiful gem of a car is powered by a stonking 5.2-litre V12 sending 700hp to the rears. Top speed: 186mph. Price: £765,000. Limited to 88 lucky people.

AUDI A3: Guaranteed to sell quicker than a box of hand sanitiser at Superdrug. The £24,900 A3 is Britain's favourite Audi and by some distance. Top-notch interior crowned by digital instrument cluster in all grades, 10.1in touchscreen and hexagonal air vents nicked off a Lambo. Out May.

BENTLEY BACALAR: You want one? Sorry, too late. All 12 sold already at £2million a pop. It's like sitting inside the jewellery box of Kim Kardashian. That's strapped to a missile. Open top and 200mph. Named after a Mexican lake, apparently.

BMW i4 CONCEPT: Squint a little and you're looking at the all-electric i4, on sale 2021. With 530hp on tap, it's not far off a BMW V8 and that's absolutely fine by me. Battery: 80kWh. Range: 373 miles. Price: Expensive. It's going to start with a four.

What are you going to buy, this or a Tesla Model 3?

DACIA SPRING ELECTRIC: Yes. It's the first budget EV from Dacia, left. No. It's not sponsored by Ready Brek – but I do like the orange glow.

● THE Peugeot 208 has been named European Car of the Year. It isn't. The Ford Puma is better in all the areas that matter – price and practicality, handling and hybrid power. And that's from a man who grew up with little Peugeots.

● BLOODHOUND needs to find £8million by April or the 2021 land speed record attempt will be scrapped. Boss Ian Warhurst said: "The clock is ticking. It would be devastating to end here when we are so close." Driver Andy Green hit 628mph in tests and wants to smash his own 763mph record set in 1997. Ratcliffe? Branson? Caudwell? Dragons' Den? If you see this, please chuck them some cash. Bloodhound is inspiring our next generation of scientists and engineers.

Here's the cars we missed... but they won't be out for ages

Price: Under £15k. Range: 120 miles. Out: 2201.

FIAT 500: Now even more adorable as a pure electric car. Fiat quotes 198 miles from the 42kWh battery. Lots of nods to the Fifties original, wifi, eco seats using reclaimed sea plastic, bellissimo. The lush "La Prima" (the first) Edition is a convertible costing £29,000.

Cheaper lower-spec hardtops to follow. Fiat will also auction three one-off specials designed by Giorgio Armani, Bvlgari and Kartell for the Earth Alliance charity.

HONDA CIVIC TYPE R: The last hurrah for the British-built Type R is this very yellow – and very rare – Limited Edition. Just 20 are earmarked for the UK. Same 320hp engine as before but with a stripped-out interior saving 47kg, modified dampers and sticky tyres. Proper track-day weapon. Price: £40k-plus.

HYUNDAI PROPHECY: Mr. D. Vader, your new car has arrived. This sinister electric concept thing has more tech than a TIE fighter, minus twin cannons and a deflector shield generator, obviously. Much closer to home/reality is the new i20 with 17in alloys and a two-tone roof. Niiiiiice.

McLAREN 765LT: The usual McLaren recipe: Lighter, more powerful, dreamy looks. Not two but FOUR top-mounted exhausts.

The 765 stands for 765hp, which is enough to catapult you from 0-124mph in 7.2 seconds. Yikes. Estimated price: £275,000.

MERCEDES E-CLASS: No picture needed. It's an E-Class after all and the Germans don't go big on facelifts. All you need to know is that Merc tech is way ahead of everyone else and it has the plushiest cabin this side of Bentley. Hurry up with the E63, please.

PORSCHE 911 TURBO S: Nailed it. That's all I need to say, really. Anything else is just filling space. The best-looking sports car in the world has more of everything. More speed (650hp), more width, more wing, more downforce, more luxury. Raid your 50p and 20p jar for £155,970.

RENAULT MORPHOZ: This nutty EV concept s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-s like a Slinky Dog, hence the picture top right. In City mode, it's 4.4 metres long. In Travel mode, it extends to 4.8 metres to allow for a bigger battery pack and more luggage. See the grey area under the wing mirror? That's what I'm on about. Have a day off, Renault.

SKODA OCTAVIA vRS iv: The go-faster Octavia is now even faster, as well as being a cheeky tax dodge. That's because it's a plug-in hybrid with 245hp, a pure electric range of 37 miles and just 30g/km CO2. Interior as black as a coal hole. I like it. Out September from £34,000.

TOYOTA B-SUV: Toyota was due to unveil a baby SUV based on the Yaris at Geneva. It will now be revealed in the summer.

VOLKSWAGEN ID.4: Quick recap. ID is the name of VW's electric car family. We've already seen ID.3, a Golf-sized hatch due in showrooms this summer, and here's ID.4, which is – yep, you guessed it – an SUV. VW promises the biggest battery pack will do up to 310 miles. We'll see.

That's it. You're up to speed. Go and wash your hands for 20 seconds.

WHY is Priti Patel getting all this crap thrown at her? She was put there to do a job but the people in Whitehall do not like it.

For years they rubber-stamped all EU laws. Now they have to work for Britain, not the EU.

ARIES March 21 – April 20

Venus moves into the values sector of your chart and your aim is to get the right balance between what you give to a relationship and get from it. If you start the day single, don't be put off by a newcomer's flash cash ways – it's just done to impress because he, or she, is attracted to you. Luck travels to find you.

TAURUS April 21 – May 21

Venus powers into your sign and creates a new emotional leader – you. Model the kind of behaviour you want to see, and so many changes kick in. If single, talking about yourself can be the key to unlocking the secret self of someone who intrigues you. A friend's job success inspires you to do even better.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21

Your sector of hidden agendas lights up as Venus moves in and you see why someone close is behaving the way they do. You deal with it well. If single, a creative love interest doesn't give much away, but try to remain patient – it's worth it. Travel planet Mercury keeps you close at heart to a relative you miss.

CANCER June 22 – July 22

Taking on a charity challenge leads you to passion – and raising support together for a cause is the spark that rekindles long-term love. Talking from the heart wins over an audience, maybe of one, that's been reluctant to really listen. A personal moon gives the "go" signals to a style makeover.

LEO July 23 – August 23

Mix quiet but unstoppable determination with your ambition, and goals start to take off – but avoid setting rigid deadlines that ask too much of yourself. Be clear, but be kind, both to yourself and the people you deal with. If single, a friend's former partner may seem perfect, but it could be complicated.

VIRGO August 24 – September 22

Venus sets you free from the belief that only one specific type of partner is right for you. Someone different turns out to be The One. Jobwise, you may not see yourself as ambitious until you read about a project that sounds meant for you. Luck could begin when you meet someone who looks so much like you.

LIBRA September 23 – October 23

This month Venus will be searching for your soulmate – or helping you to turn the partner you have into a soulmate. You can think faster and smarter, and in ways that could win jobs and prizes, now that Mercury is in the winning part of your chart. An emotions-healing moon makes the family feel like a team again.

SCORPIO October 24 – November 22

You can talk a good game at work but, for real success, it's smart to check every detail – especially pricing. In romance, you can be clear about where you're going. Single? A Taurus comes into your life and, though you're from opposite sides of the zodiac, you understand each other on the deepest level.

SAGITTARIUS November 23 – December 21

When two people are both reluctant to reveal their feelings, love can't get started, but today a gentle hint could put things right. The sun adds energy to the home sector of your chart and you have ideas to create more living space. But luck could be waiting at home – is there a prize ticket waiting to be checked?

CAPRICORN December 22 – January 20

Established couples are ready to take a break from the serious side of love and focus on having fun together. Yes, this may sound frivolous but it helps a relationship get back to its best. The most promising place to find new love is the gym. A relative you rarely see but often think about is so lucky for you.

AQUARIUS January 21 – February 18

Venus dives into the foundations of your chart, giving you a cool confidence. You have some tantalising choices to make. Workwise, Uranus, the planet that rules your sign, helps you earn more, and learning more about selling on line is the key. Finding a famous face in your family past is a surprise.

PISCES February 19 – March 20

The Venus effect tells you that passion on its own is rarely enough to sustain love. But now that minds, as well as hearts, are involved, it turns into a real and lasting relationship. If single, a voice attracts you – then the dancing. An ambitious plan for a worldwide reunion of friends starts to make sense.

Today's Solutions

DO YOU FIND EXERCISE DIFFICULT DUE TO LIMITED MOBILITY OR LIMITED TIME?

Then you need the new, revolutionary

PedalPal

ELECTRIC EXERCISE MACHINE

that does ALL the hard work for you!

Enjoy the benefits of exercise while sitting in your favourite chair!

If your limited mobility makes typical exercise difficult, or if you struggle to find the time to exercise, then PedalPal is the perfect solution – an electrically-powered, remote-controlled device that brings exercise to you! With the revolutionary new PedalPal, you can enjoy all the health benefits of exercise without having to leave the comfort of your own home!

PedalPal's clever design features a wired remote control, so you simply switch your PedalPal on and let it take you for a ride whilst you stay seated in your favourite armchair.

With variable speed settings and automatically programmed routines – for all abilities – that much-needed 30 minutes of exercise couldn't be easier!

SO SIMPLE TO SET-UP

Your PedalPal is practically ready to go out of the box. It's so quick and easy to set up, you'll be enjoying the benefits of exercise almost instantly.

It's perfect for both lower body (legs) and upper body (arms) workouts and, as it's electrically-powered, you get the benefits of exercise without the strain.

ELECTRICALLY-POWERED TO DO THE WORK FOR YOU

Simply place your feet or hands in the pedals and, using your remote control, select the programme you want. PedalPal then does the work for you, turning the pedals at the chosen speed to boost both your vitality and your mobility in just 30 minutes a day!

Just 30 minutes a day brings big exercise benefits!

There is strong scientific evidence that people who are active have a lower risk of heart disease, stroke, type 2 diabetes, some cancers, depression and dementia. It is widely recognised that just 30 minutes of exercise a day can bring with it a large number of health benefits, both physical and mental. And, of course, exercising the body is vital in ensuring good blood circulation.

As you continue to use PedalPal, you should notice improved muscle strength and joint mobility. And, of course, you'll be burning calories, too!

IMPROVE YOUR HEALTH AND HAPPINESS

PedalPal can also help boost blood circulation, a crucial aspect in improving both your health and happiness.

PedalPal fits neatly under any desk, too, so if you're too busy to get to the gym, or go for a bike ride or run, then PedalPal could be the perfect time-saving exercise solution.

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE

The benefits of exercise to our physical and mental health are well-known, particularly as we age, and it's never too late to start.

NHS Consultant, Dr Nick Cavill says: "The biggest benefits come to those who start from scratch. It's moving from a sedentary lifestyle to a moderately active one that makes the biggest difference to your health. The more you do, the greater the health benefits."

The revolutionary PedalPal

- Perfect for 'in-the-home' exercise and to aid rehabilitation if you suffer with limited mobility – or simply limited time!
- Electrically-powered pedals do the work for you – suited to all abilities
- Variable speed settings

"It's so easy to use!"

Multi-function wired remote control with easy to read LCD display allows you to turn your PedalPal on and off, select the desired programme, adjust the speed – even choose whether to pedal backwards or forwards – all from the comfort of your favourite chair!

via remote-control
• Exercises legs, arms and upper body

"I have never felt better since buying the PedalPal. You don't realise the importance of exercise until you try what you're missing. Thank you Local Mobility!"

Mrs Raines, Leicester.

ONLY £149*

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE TO REDUCE YOUR RISK

Suffering from poor blood circulation can result in a number of health problems or contribute negatively to existing health conditions.

Do you suffer from any of the following conditions? Swollen legs, ankles and knees; Arthritis; Diabetes; Alzheimers; Thrombosis (DVT).

For example, older adults who are active will reduce their risk of heart disease and stroke to a similar level as younger people who are active.

Alzheimers and Arthritis Societies promote benefits

"Leading a physically active lifestyle can have a significant impact on well-being." The Alzheimers Society.

"If ever there were a perfect excuse not to exercise, arthritis pain would seem to be it. In fact, research shows quite the opposite. A properly designed exercise programme may not only decrease your pain, but may also increase your flexibility and overall fitness – and it can do wonders for your state of mind." Arthritis Society

Over-the-top cost... drug

NHS PRICE RIG 4 GET £4.4M RAP

FOUR drugs firms have been slapped with a £3.4million fine for rigging the price of an anti-depressant that the NHS prescribes to thousands of patients every month.

On top of the fine, the firms must also hand the NHS £1million.

The Competition and Markets Authority said KING PHARMACEUTICALS and AUDEN MCKENZIE colluded to fix prices for the supply of Nortriptyline between September 2014 and May 2015.

The NHS spent £38million on the drug in 2015, when the price-rigging was at its height.

The four firms fined were King Pharmaceuticals, Auden McKenzie, ALISSA HEALTHCARE RESEARCH and ACCORD-UK.

CMA chief exec Andrea Coscelli said: "These firms exchanged sensitive information and shared out supply to try and keep prices up, meaning the NHS — and ultimately the UK taxpayer — could have been paying over the odds for this vital drug. Today's decisions should act as a clear warning to any pharmaceutical company that considers stifling competition and cheating the NHS."

SERVICES SICKENING

THE UK's vital services sector is struggling after being badly hit by the coronavirus outbreak.

It has driven down tourism and hit travel and transport businesses, with bookings cancelled and projects delayed.

But it has also reduced confidence in the overall market, according to IHS MARKIT.

The latest services purchasing managers' index report paints a depressing picture for the sector.

IHS Markit chief business economist Chris Williamson said: "The post-election rebound in service sector growth lost some of its bounce in February."

HIGH ST'S VIOLENCE

VIOLENCE and abuse against shopworkers increased by a tenth last year, the BRITISH RETAIL CONSORTIUM has warned.

It wants the Government to act to protect retail workers who face 424 attacks each day, with weapons such as knives increasingly brandished. It called for a law to make assaults on retail workers a specific criminal offence.

BRC chief Helen Dickinson said: "No one should have to go to work fearing violence or threats."

Retailers spent a record £1.2billion on crime prevention last year, their losses reaching £1billion.

MEAT SITE CHOP

AROUND 650 workers at a meat factory are facing losing their jobs after owner TULIP announced plans to shut the site.

The company, which is Britain's leading pork supplier, employs 5,000 across a number of sites. It plans to shut its pork manufacturing plant at Tipton in the West Midlands, left, and transfer operations elsewhere.

Tulip said: "The site itself requires significant investment and redevelopment to cater for future requirements, while its location places severe restrictions on any further development."

BANK AXING 250

BANKING giant BARCLAYS is axing 250 jobs "in order to drive collaboration", it said.

The job cuts will hit staff in Glasgow, Manchester and Northampton.

Meanwhile, a Barclays site in Leeds is closing after the landlord's decision to sell it for residential development. Barclays said: "We are investing in new campuses and office space which will enable us to innovate at pace for the customers and clients we serve."

"We will do everything we can to support colleagues impacted by the changes."

LEGO IS BLOOMING

TOY giant LEGO is splashing out on 150 new shops.

The group, which already has 570 stores globally, wants to profit from the growing demand for experiences at outlets, rather than just the chance to buy stuff.

Profits rose three per cent to £970million last year on sales for licensed ranges like Harry Potter and Marvel's Avengers.

GLOOM FOR MALLS

Shops go Into freefall

THE future of one of Britain's biggest shopping centre owners has been plunged into doubt after investors refused to back its recovery efforts.

INTU owns 14 shopping centres across the country including Essex's Lakeside, the Metrocentre in Gateshead, and the Trafford Centre in Manchester.

But the debt-laden firm, which owes around £5billion, has been hit by a wave of big-name retail collapses in the last couple of years that have left its centres full of empty units.

It hoped to raise up to £1.5billion from investors to reduce its debt and secure its future. But it had to scrap the emergency fund-raising yesterday.

The news sent the firm's shares plunging almost in half in early trading before recovering a little to end the day down a third, its lowest-ever level.

Boss Matthew Roberts said: "It is disappointing that the extreme market conditions have prevented us from moving forward with our planned equity raise."

He said that the company will explore "a number of alternative options", such as flogging assets.

AJ Bell investment expert Russ Mould said: "Its future is looking far from bright."

But Roberts said he was confident it would "emerge a leaner, fitter and more focused business".

HACKERS IN BOOTS CARD HIT

BOOTS has halted payments using loyalty points after hackers tried to break into accounts.

Shoppers will not be able to use Advantage Card points to buy goods until the issue has been dealt with.

Boots said none of its systems were compromised, but attackers had tried to access accounts using re-used passwords from other sites.

A spokeswoman said the issue affected less than one per cent of the 14.4million active cards — around 150,000 people.

Suspending payments using points removed the risk of hackers stealing the points to spend themselves, she added.

Customers can still earn points with purchases, and Boots hopes to have point payments back up as soon as possible.

It comes days after a similar issue hit 600,000 Tesco Clubcard holders.

WIZZ AIR CUTBACK

BUDGET Euro airline WIZZ AIR is slashing routes, cutting costs, and freezing recruitment to cope with plunging demand because of the coronavirus outbreak.

The London-listed Hungarian airline, which focuses on central and eastern Europe, will cut flights to countries affected by the virus from next Wednesday.

Most of the flights cut are those scheduled to fly to Italy, the European country most hit by the virus so far.

RITZ PRICE £1BN

THE RITZ hotel in London has been put up for sale — but potential buyers will need to stump up more than £1billion.

Sir Frederick Barclay, the co-owner of the 114-year-old Ritz, said there are several people interested in buying.

He added: "I can disclose that there have been a number of competing offers for this first class hotel in excess of £1billion. There is no place for any sale at less than full value."

He has been involved in a legal case with family members after he accused them of bugging his private conversations in the hotel conservatory.

S.O.S. FOR CASH

CHANCELLOR Rishi Sunak has been urged to use next week's Budget to save notes and coins.

The ASSOCIATION OF CONVENIENCE STORES warned that rates on ATM machines and bank closures are threatening the future of cash.

James Lowman of the ACS said: "We need the Chancellor to take action at the Budget to reverse cuts to interchange fees and exempt free-to-use ATMs from business rates that are making them unsustainable."

Gareth Shaw of WHICH? said: "Unless urgent action is taken, the cash system will collapse within two years."

Hearn so hot on AJ 'n Fury

UP FOR BIG GRIN... Joshua is eyeing up elusive WBC belt

EDDIE HEARN has a plan in place for Anthony Joshua to face the winner of Tyson Fury versus Deontay Wilder in December.

WBA, IBF and WBO champ AJ wants to land the WBC belt being contested again on July 18 – if he beats mandatory challenger Kubrat Pulev on June 20. Fellow Brit Fury famously won his last showdown with Wilder in Las Vegas in February.

But the American exercised his right to a rematch – keeping Joshua away from the one title missing from his collection for at another ten months.

By WALLY DOWNES JR

But Matchroom boss Hearn revealed he has spoken to Fury's US promoter Bob Arum and the huge decider is just around the corner.

Hearn said: "We spoke on Tuesday and have been talking about how the deal would work."

"We're willing to do the deal and sign the deal now for December – subject to AJ winning and Fury winning."

"We would also do the same for Wilder if he wins the rematch."

"We're a little cautious because of the Andy Ruiz memories and all the talk of Wilder and undisputed."

"We've just got to get Pulev beat and Fury has to beat Wilder."

Saudi Arabia, which hosted Joshua's December rematch win over Andy Ruiz Jr, would love that potential mega-fight.

But Cardiff and Las Vegas are also in the running.

Any deal will come down to cold hard cash once the soon-to-be-decided WBC king and AJ know how much money is on the table for a two-fight deal.

And Hearn said: "The fighters will say, 'Tell me what's out there' and there are only three options. Wales, because it's December, Vegas or Saudi."

"For me, any deal is likely to be a two-fight deal. In an ideal world they would both want to do it in the UK."

"But we would have to come up with something special in the UK to even get to half the numbers of another territory as there's no government help."

"It's just ticket prices and pay-per-view – that's it. You're up against governments willing to pay huge site fees to bring the fight there."

Fury is only planning on two more fights before retiring from boxing.

He said: "I've already been undisputed heavy-weight champ. When I beat Klitschko I had all the belts, so as far as I'm concerned Joshua just has my leftovers."

He Can hurry

By WALLY DOWNES JR

BILLY JOE SAUNDERS looks favourite to land a megabucks May fight with Saul 'Canelo' Alvarez but told his bitter rival to hurry up or "f off".

Britain's WBO super-middleweight champion (below) has a long-running feud with four-weight superstar Canelo, 29, who repeatedly vows to deny him a life-changing payday.

Canelo's Las Vegas showdown on May 2 – planned around the Mexican holiday Cinco De Mayo – is just eight weeks away and Saunders, 30, or Callum Smith, 29, need to know if they should be packing a suitcase.

Promoter Eddie Hearn said: "I think Billy Joe is the frontrunner now but previously it was Callum."

"Both fighters are standing by to see who gets the golden ticket but neither have set a deadline."

"Billy has been telling me for two weeks, 'I want to know today or tell Canelo to f off'."

IT'S A DARK TIME FOR FORMULA ONE AS REBEL ALLIANCE STRIKES BACK IN FERRARI FUEL STORM... CAR WARS

FORMULA ONE is in revolt after SEVEN teams went to war with the FIA over their handling of the Ferrari "cheat" storm.

The rebel group have split the sport in two, threatening to sue the governing body over their "deal" with Ferrari after a potential law breach.

Those teams forming the resistance include Lewis Hamilton's Mercedes plus Red Bull, McLaren, Renault, Racing Point, AlphaTauri and Williams.

They are all furious over the FIA's attempts to cover up their investigation into Ferrari's 2019 engine – after paddock claims that the Italian giants broke rules relating to the amount of fuel used.

And the huge row has plunged the sport into turmoil just days before the new season kicks off.

The Australian Grand Prix is set to take place in

By BEN HUNT

Melbourne a week on Sunday against a backdrop of chaos.

Last week, the FIA released a statement saying it had "reached a settlement" with Ferrari after completing their probe – but insisted details would remain confidential.

And yesterday, seven of the ten F1 teams issued a strongly worded joint statement over their shock that the FIA had refused to explain whether Ferrari had actually broken the rules.

The action group demanded "full disclosure" of the report as their statement read: "We were surprised and shocked by the FIA's statement regarding the conclusion of its investigation into the Scuderia Ferrari Formula One Power Unit. An international sporting regulator has the responsibility to act with the highest standards of governance, integrity and transparency."

"After months of investigations undertaken by the FIA – only following queries raised by other teams – we strongly object to the FIA reaching a confidential settlement agreement with Ferrari to conclude this matter."

"We hereby state publicly our shared commitment to pursue full and proper disclosure in this matter – to ensure that our sport treats all competitors fairly and equally."

"We do so on behalf of the fans, the participants and the stakeholders of Formula One."

"In addition, we reserve our rights to seek legal redress before the competent courts."

The only teams not to protest were Ferrari plus Haas and Alfa Romeo, who both use Ferrari engines to power their cars. The storm poses yet another headache for the sport's owners, Liberty Media, who are already battling against the killer coronavirus.

The bust-up stems from accusations Ferrari had found a trick way to bypass the FIA's software – that monitors the amount of fuel being used by the engine – to give them an extra boost of speed.

It reached a head after a technical directive was issued to clarify matters ahead of last year's US GP, where suddenly Ferrari's run of six poles came to an abrupt end.

Teams are angry, not only at the FIA's "settlement" but also the timing of the release, crucially coming after the designated six days of pre-season testing.

One team insider said the lenient punishment "sounded like community service" and also joked that the FIA acronym stood for "Ferrari International Assistance."

SEEING RED... rivals say Ferrari broke fuel rules

THE ROGUE ONES!

WHAT HAVE FERRARI DONE AND HOW DID THEY DO IT?

Teams believe Ferrari found a trick way last season to boost the power of their engine on the straights, making them quicker, particularly during qualifying.

Rivals teams suspect they achieved it by burning more fuel. F1 rules limit the amount you can use so there was a feeling that Ferrari achieved this by somehow by-passing or tricking the FIA's monitoring devices.

WHY ARE THE TEAMS ANGRY?

The fact the FIA wanted to keep their findings secret. In the interests of fairness, findings should be made public.

WHAT HAPPENS NOW?

This will cause a stink ahead of the first race and Ferrari will get stick.

The teams want a full disclosure but ultimately they would probably like to see Ferrari punished. If Ferrari lose their points – which is unlikely – other teams would earn more prize money.

MYLER... reality check

Rich's got wee issue

By GARY CARTER

RICHIE MYLER hopes to bathe in success after almost having something else to bathe in after his last win — his son's wee!

The Leeds ace was buzzing after helping his side to a 36-0 hammering of Warrington last Friday and picking up the man-of-the-match award for his first stint at full-back.

But thoughts of a blissful night's sleep ended when youngest boy Louis wet the bed, on his side!

And Myler admitted: "It brought me down to earth and reality hit home."

Leeds come up against the man who last got them to the top, Brian McDermott, tonight — now at Toronto Wolfpack.

Myler added: "I hope he gets a great reception."

★ JO KONTA dumped Kim Clijsters out of the Monterrey Open in Mexico for her first win for six months.

The British No 1 beat the multiple slam ace 6-3 7-5 in the Belgian's second match since returning to the Tour.

Nick Kyrgios and Marin Cilic will play at Queen's in June.

Don't fall asleep, you might not wake up

LEACH FEARED HE'D DIE OF SEPSIS

HEALTHY RETURN... Jack Leach at England's team hotel in Colombo

JACK LEACH has revealed for the first time that he feared for his life during a terrifying bout of illness earlier this winter.

England spinner Leach, 28, said: "I remember thinking, 'Don't fall asleep because you might not wake up'."

"It was that serious in terms of how I was feeling."

Leach was struck down by sepsis in late November, near the end of the tour to New Zealand, and then did not bowl in South Africa because of further illness.

As if that was not bad enough, a man who is more vulnerable than most to infection and illness now has the global coronavirus pandemic to worry about.

Leach arrived on Tuesday in Sri Lanka for the two-Test tour as the senior slow man and a key bowler in England's pursuit of victory.

The Somerset left-arm took 18 wickets at 21 apiece when England whitewashed Sri Lanka 3-0 in late 2018.

But the two other spinners on that trip — Moeen Ali and Adil Rashid — made themselves unavailable this time, meaning Leach must operate alongside the less experienced Dom Bess and Matt Parkinson.

Leach's No 1 priority, however, is to stay healthy.

He has Crohn's disease, which weakens his immune system, and recalls with horror contracting sepsis, a potentially-fatal form of blood poisoning, after first suffering from gastroenteritis.

By JOHN ETHERIDGE

He explained: "I didn't know too much about it at the time, how serious it could be, but I remember feeling very, very ill."

"I was out of it, really. My blood pressure was dropping quickly, my heart-rate was 190 and my temperature was 40 degrees. That's when they called an ambulance."

"Once I got antibiotics in my arm and on a drip, I started to feel better quite quickly — but it still took a couple of nights in hospital. I was probably still recovering when I flew back from New Zealand."

A total of 11 England stars caught the bug at the start of their South African tour. Leach was more seriously affected due to having Crohn's.

He said: "I picked up a couple of things in South Africa and my body couldn't cope."

"Other people got ill but I struggled to fight it off like a healthy person would. My medication for Crohn's weakens my immune system, so it's a bit more of a struggle."

"You can start to feel fine in general but playing high-level sport is a completely different thing and probably something I didn't think about enough."

"As sportsmen, we try to push through pain. You don't want to be weak mentally or physically but unfortunately I was weak physically."

"With your health, you sometimes have to take a step back."

Because of Covid-19, guests at the team hotel in Colombo are being scanned by infra-red sensors that detect anybody running a temperature — and the staff are wearing masks.

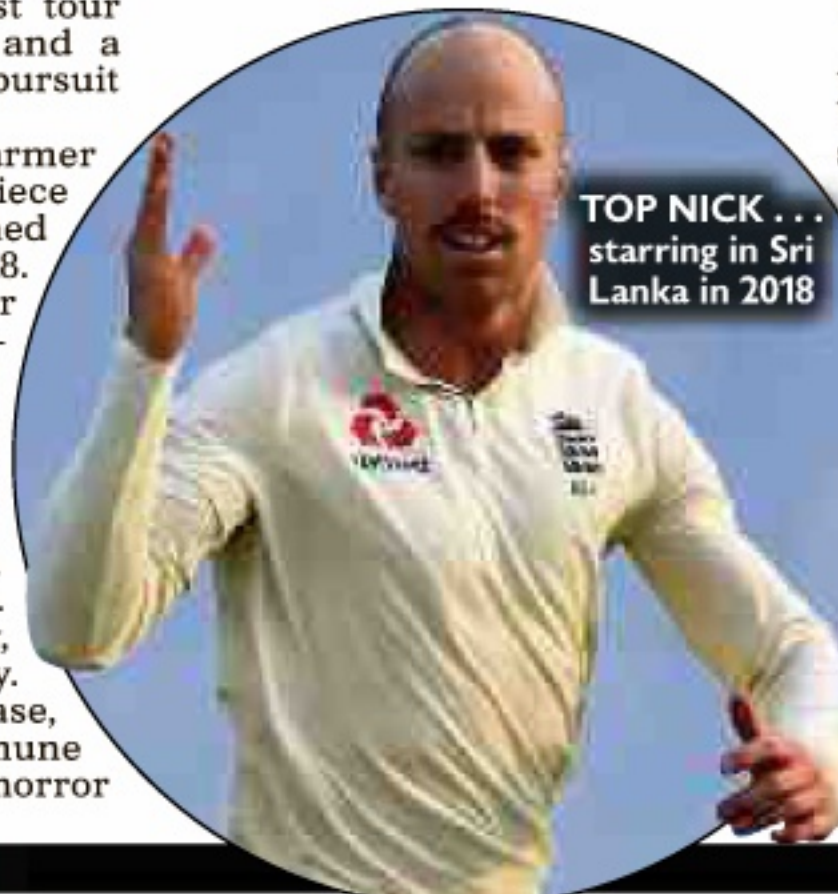

Leach, also recovering from a calf strain, insisted: "I've come to a safer place. I've been nervous in England but I feel fine here."

"I guess I'm a little more concerned than others."

"We have been given packs with wipes, hand-sanitiser and we're drinking bottled water."

"I just have to do the right things and keep my fingers crossed."

From Back Page

after the Italian government last night announced ALL sports events would be suspended until April 3 unless they can be staged without fans present.

Six Nations bosses held an emergency meeting and decided to postpone the match rather than play in an empty stadium.

The news will cause chaos for 20,000 fans who have already booked travel for England's final game of the tournament.

The death total in Italy from the virus had last night reached 107 from over 3,000 cases.

And both ITV and the BBC had already decided not to send staff to Rome.

The Italian government's decree read: "Sports events of all kinds are suspended. However, it is permitted to carry them out behind closed doors."

Eddie Jones' side were due to fly to the Eternal City after taking on Wales at Twickenham on Saturday.

Ireland's health minister called off Saturday's Dublin game against Italy last week and that fixture might not even be played until the autumn as the spread of the virus wreaks havoc across the globe.

England have already ordered prop Mako Vunipola to stay away from their camp, on the advice of their medical team, after he flew via Hong Kong on his return from Tonga last week.

However, he has been cleared to play for Saracens against Leicester in two days by his club, who refused to adopt England's ultra-cautious approach.

Government guidelines suggest only people who show symptoms of the deadly virus need to self-isolate for 14 days.

And Vunipola has shown no ill-effects after flying home for a family matter with injured brother Billy.

Saracens said: "Travelers returning from Hong Kong are not currently subject to mandatory quarantine or self-isolation unless they become symptomatic."

"Neither Billy nor Mako have displayed symptoms."

Meanwhile, SIX other people involved in cycling's UAE Tour have tested positive for coronavirus.

Team INEOS yesterday took the decision to withdraw from all racing until the Volta a Catalunya on March 23.

They said they owed a "duty of healthcare to riders and staff" in these "exceptional times".

It also gives them a chance to mourn sporting director Nico Portal, who died on Tuesday aged 40.

Boss Sir Dave Brailsford said: "This is a uniquely sad moment for everyone at the team."

"This pause will give us the time to grieve for Nico — but I also believe it is in the best interests of both cycling and the wider public."

ENGLAND v WALES

2 DAYS TO GO

ROSS: I'LL BE BOSS

Moriarty back-row battle

By DAVID FACEY

THE Welsh powerhouse born in England cannot wait to tangle with the Englishman forged in Wales.

Ross Moriarty is also looking forward to taking on the "young pup" who became a real attack dog.

Wales back rower Moriarty is relishing the chance to go up against the much-hyped England duo of Sam Underhill and Tom Curry.

Moriarty (left), 25, saw plenty of both players while at Gloucester, before linking up with the Dragons two years ago, and admits they are fulfilling their potential.

But the Merseyside-born hardman, who helped the England Under-20 side win the Junior World Cup before following dad Paul and uncle Richard into the Wales team, is clearly keen to prove a point against Underhill, 23, and 21-year-old Curry.

He said: "Sam was in the academy when I was at Gloucester but he didn't really get a look-in. He moved to the Ospreys where he did quite well."

"He took an opportunity in Wales and that's got him into the England team."

"I played against Tom quite a few times for Gloucester against Sale. He was a young pup at the time but you could tell he had a lot of potential. He's showing it now in an international shirt. Fair play to him and Sam but it doesn't make me worried about anything.

"It's a good challenge which I'll look forward to."

"Getting stuck into people physically is my bread and butter. And we know if you don't match England physically then you've got no chance."

Moriarty does not react well to the suggestion he could have joined Underhill and Curry in the Red Rose back row.

He was born in St Helens after his dad left Wales to play rugby league for Widnes.

He snarled: "Playing for England Under-20s was something I looked at as an opportunity to make an impact in the game, which I grabbed with both hands."

"If I hadn't taken that route I might never have played for Wales."

"So you can't look at it like, 'He should never have played for England, blah, blah, blah'."

"That's not the case. I only lived in England for two years and then I moved back to Wales until I was 16, when we moved to Gloucester. So I'm pretty Welsh, if you get me!"

EDDIE JOKES... England boss Jones enjoys himself during yesterday's training session

MARO ITOJE plans to pulverise the Wales pack as England believe that their scrum is becoming a major weapon.

With new forwards coach Matt Proudfoot on board from South Africa — the side that ripped Eddie Jones' World Cup finalists apart in Japan — Itoje believes they have taken their game to the next level.

Prop Mako Vunipola has been stood down due to coronavirus fears, but England have Joe Marler, rated as the best set-piece scrummager in the country, as well as dynamic Ellis Genge to take on the Dragons at Twickenham on Saturday.

And second-row Itoje (right) warned Wales: "I have experienced being on the other side of a team where they have a dominant scrum and it's not nice and not comfortable.

"We like to use our scrum as a weapon and when you can't use it, it is almost seen as a weakness and it is not a place you want to be in."

Every pack would say the same thing in terms of trying to have a dominant lineout, maul.

"We've always seen the scrum as important but Matt has come in and probably placed a greater importance on it with both sides of the ball — when we have it and when the opposition puts in."

"It is the responsibility of not just the front row, but everyone in the pack. When the scrum is getting marched forward, as a front row, you get massive pats on the back."

"I get just as much enjoyment of winning a scrum penalty as I do a maul penalty. They are both massive parts of the game and that is what Matt has come in and tried to emphasise."

Marler added: "Matt has added a different mindset to the scrum and more licence to attack, which is always nice for a prop to hear."

"It's trying to get the back rowers to buy into loving scrummaging, as much as we do. It's been noticeable — seeing back-rowers smiling for a scrum session has been good." Not only will England look to hit Wales up front but they will also look to restrict their backs.

Tackling-machine Itoje knows that by targeting fly-half Dan Biggar they can suffocate Wales' backs and deny them their first Championship win in London since 2012.

Itoje said: "Biggar is their ten, so we know that we are going to have to stop him playing his best game."

On the domestic front, Harlequins have signed England star CHRIS ASHTON following his departure from Sale Sharks.

The wing, 32, who won the last of his 44 England caps a year ago, has scored 20 Test tries. He said: "I can't wait to get started."

NEVILLE... slump

Neville: I Believe in better

From STEVE BRENNER in Orlando

PHIL NEVILLE is sure he can turn around England's post-World Cup slump.

The Lionesses boss has come in for flak — with his side winning just two of their last seven games since losing a dramatic semi-final to the USA in France eight months ago.

Neville will be reunited with the world champs here tomorrow tonight, as England attempt to defend the SheBelieves Cup they won last summer.

But the Americans are unbeaten in 28 games — and fancy their chances of extending that superb run.

Neville said: "When I first got the job two years ago, it seemed to take a massive upwards curve.

"In our first SheBelieves match we beat France and I thought, 'This will not last forever, there will be a downturn'.

"The best managers can get the sack, I was always prepared for that.

"The thing I was really passionate about was that I wanted to protect my squad. I see players who have their mojo back — we're in a good place."

Boss Neville is without crooked full-back Lucy Bronze for the four-team tournament, which also includes Japan and Spain.

MANCHESTER UNITED record goalscorer Wayne Rooney will be lining up against the Red Devils in tonight's FA Cup tie at Derby.

Odion Ighalo is in line for a start and having scored in the Europa League game against Club Brugge is 10-11 to bag another tonight.

Rooney's best hope of a goal will come from a penalty and you can get a spot kick to be awarded and scored for either side at 4-1.

It could go the distance and Derby are a tasty 25-1 to nick it in extra-time.

DIAMOND: Ighalo to score anytime, 10-11.
NEXT BEST: A penalty to be awarded and scored, 4-1.
LONGSHOT: Derby to win in extra-time, 25-1.

BLUES' LITTLE BIG MAN

BULLY FOR YOU, BILLY

Gilmour lesson from Maguire

By ANDREW DILLON

BILLY GILMOUR has little legs but a long memory — and he will never forget being 'bullied' by Harry Maguire.

Maguire literally went for the jugular against a boy eight years younger, and more than a foot shorter, during Chelsea's League Cup defeat against Manchester United in October.

And 5ft 6in midfielder Gilmour learned a hard and valuable lesson against United's 6ft 4in centre-half.

Yet he proved just how far he has come on Tuesday night with a brilliant man-of-the-match performance.

The Glaswegian, 18, ran rings round Liverpool in the FA Cup to show he can compete with bigger boys — and win.

He said: "That was pointless for Maguire but obviously he is going to try to bully young ones and that's where I need to learn how to be stronger.

"I have been working on that and can only get stronger as a player.

"But that was definitely a learning curve when he gripped me up in the box. I remember that very well.

"Basically, he was saying I'm a wee guy. He was pushing me off, gripping me by the throat and that's something I have to deal with.

"But I won't let that happen again, that's for sure."

United's captain might want to watch his ankles for teething marks when he next faces Chelsea — which could yet be this season with both teams still in the FA Cup.

Gilmour has already proven himself a tough cookie mentally.

He joined Chelsea for £500,000 from Rangers in 2017 just after taking his GCSEs and moved to Surrey on his own, aged just 16.

His mum had planned to join him, but a decision was taken for Gilmour to go it alone and live with a host family to help him mature.

Gilmour showed why he is so highly rated by Blues boss Frank Lampard by running rings around Liverpool in their 2-0 fifth-round win.

Lamps first clapped eyes on Chelsea's newest talent off the production line while studying for his coaching badges at the club's Cobham training HQ and has raved about him ever since.

The win over Jurgen Klopp's runaway Premier League leaders was only his third start — but already he feels settled.

And the pint-sized midfielder is already gaining a reputation for having a big heart.

Gilmour said: "I've had a bit of a taste of it now, so wasn't really nervous. I was more looking forward to going out there and showing what I can do.

"It was a really good game. We won, stuck together and played really well.

"What's not to love? And to beat Liverpool as well!

"I'm not here to be just a player being quiet. I need to tell folk to get into position. It's the same for people telling me.

"That's how I get better and they get better. Just telling folk to help out.

"I have to communicate well, specifically with my position and the way that I play."

Gilmour has adapted his game to make the most of his talents, appreciating he will never outmuscle the big guys.

Ahead of Sunday's home Premier League clash against Everton, he added: "When I came to Chelsea we were given individual action plans and had to focus on a player.

"Mine was Cesc Fabregas — I just loved how he played.

"So I watched a lot of videos of him and, now I'm older, I've tried to put it into the games and it's working."

BAD CHOKE ... Maguire grabs Gilmour

VAN: KEEP CALM

By ANDREW DILLON

VIRGIL VAN DIJK wants shell-shocked Liverpool team-mates to ignore the haters and keep plugging on to glory.

But the defender admits the Prem leaders need to improve after an alarming dip in form — which has coincided with the absence of Jordan Henderson.

Liverpool have won 82 per cent of their games when the England star has played, compared with just 58 per cent without him.

Tuesday's 2-0 FA Cup defeat at Chelsea was the third loss in four games.

But they remain 22 points clear in the title race.

And Van Dijk (right), 28, said: "There are people that are never satisfied. They are always looking for negative things.

"Either you're going to think about these things and go with that negative spirit or you just focus on the good things — and I'm definitely focusing on the good things.

"We are in a very good situation, close to what we all hope to achieve. Let's just go for it, enjoy it.

"This is a big blow but we were playing against a very good side."

Chelsea join Atletico Madrid and Watford in beating Liverpool in a miserable two weeks.

Van Dijk thinks it is because teams are shutting up shop against them.

He said: "If you look at the three games before Chelsea, they are quite similar in their approach against us.

"Atletico are one of the best teams that play in that kind of way. And we lost with a corner.

"The West Ham game, they were also playing defensively and we tried to find solutions. It's the most difficult thing in football to break a team down.

"We don't need to talk about the weekend at Watford too much any more.

"The way we lost was totally deserved. It was a very tough day for all of us.

"We wanted to keep winning every game but we deserved to lose at the weekend. We all knew it.

"We all discussed it. We got over it easily because we accepted we have to improve."

they are not here any more – you don't have to explain every time then."

It is a steely side of boss Solskjaer that has already resulted in Romelu Lukaku and Alexis Sanchez being shown the door.

Paul Pogba will be next this summer if United can get the right money for the midfielder.

Solskjaer is looking to create a mentality at the club where winning is everything and the frills and rewards that come with that are secondary.

He said: "Football has changed and some players get affected by 'I've made money, I've made this, I've won a trophy, I can sit back and relax'."

"I had the best of the lot as a player. If you win something you move on."

"The squad I was in with Roy Keane, Gary Neville, Ryan Giggs, Scholes, you won something but you moved on."

"You want to be better. You want to win the training session the next day or playing cards."

"That group of Treble-winners we had in 1999, their personality and the drive and the hunger in them was unbelievable."

"I didn't have that when I came to Manchester United. I was happy smiley, I was always trying to be the best I could be but when I came here and started to win things I realised it was not what football's all about."

"It was not just trying to better yourself, it's challenging yourself all the time and being hungry and going for it."

And that hunger has still not left Wayne Rooney – as United will be all too aware of tonight.

WAYNE IS WARRIOR

Desire still drives him on

By PHIL CADDEN

WAYNE ROONEY admits he still sees the red mist... even at the age of 34.

The hothead Derby captain lines up against old club Manchester United in the FA Cup fifth round tonight.

And United's record goal-scorer Roo – whose Old Trafford team-mates tried to curb his temper by making him count to five during a fiery moment – revealed he raged after a 3-2 defeat to Luton in January.

It goes to show his desire to win still burns as bright as ever.

The Rams ace, who netted 253 times for United and 53 for his country, admitted: "I am still trying to learn how to control it now."

"It came into play a couple of weeks ago when we played Luton away."

"I went in the dressing room and I absolutely erupted. I had to take myself away before I went too far. I took myself into the shower area and had a few seconds to myself."

Rooney, who won 12 major trophies in 13 years at Old Trafford, will be hell-bent on dumping his old club out of the FA Cup at the fifth-round stage tonight.

He even admits he would celebrate if he scores against former team-mate Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's Red Devils.

Rooney laughed: "Yeah, of course. My time at United, I loved every minute of it. I'm a Derby player and I want to win. For that 90 minutes, obviously I want United to lose."

"Everyone will understand I want Derby to win in this game and after that I will go back to being a United fan wanting them to win."

"I can't wait. The one team I wanted in the draw was United."

"We were on the coach going to the hotel the night before a game when the draw was taking place and there was a cheer when United came out."

"It is a great draw for us, having United come to our ground and for the fans it is a great game to go to."

"For us as a team it is a great challenge for us to come up against United, to see if we can beat them."

"I've seen Ole a few times now he's been in the job and it will be nice to see him, Michael Carrick and a few of the players I played with who are still there."

"But this is a game that is a big opportunity for us to go into the quarter-finals of the FA Cup."

"Obviously for United, there is this and the Europa League where they have a chance to win a trophy this season, so we know that they won't be taking it lightly."

Rooney, who won the full set of trophies at United – five Premier League titles, Champions League, Europa League, Club World Cup, FA Cup and three League Cups – says the Old Trafford dressing room was the best he experienced.

Ex-Everton forward Roo added: "Without doubt it was the United one."

"I was there for many years and to be in there with team-mates but also people who you keep in touch with as friends."

Rooney joined Derby as a player-coach under Phillip Cocu in January.

He said: "I am not putting sessions on because I am still training."

"But all of the preparation for whoever we are playing, the opponents, with the video analysis, the meetings with the staff, I am involved with them, trying to give us the best preparation for the games at the weekend or in midweek."

CARRICK'S CALL

By GRAEME BRYCE

MICHAEL CARRICK reckons Wayne Rooney will become a top boss once he hangs up his boots.

Rooney, 34, has one eye on moving into the dugout as he enters the final phase of his playing career.

Former Manchester United star Carrick is now part of Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's coaching staff and thinks his old team-mate will soon follow him in studying for his Uefa Pro licence.

He said: "He'll go on to coach or manage one day. He knows the game so well, he's intelligent on the pitch."

"He took on the role of leader in his final years at United. It wouldn't surprise me at all if Wayne stayed in the game for a long time."

Carrick says he was shocked by the demands of playing for United, where winning is not enough – you have to do it in style.

He thought he had entered a madhouse when he witnessed Sir Alex Ferguson and Ryan Giggs rip into each other after WINNING at Watford. Carrick said: "It hit home pretty much straight away. I thought I'd come from a big club in Spurs but, in truth, it was a big jump in class."

"My first match was Watford away and we won 2-1. I was thinking it was a good away win but then the boss came in and went absolutely mental. I remember thinking, 'This is different!'."

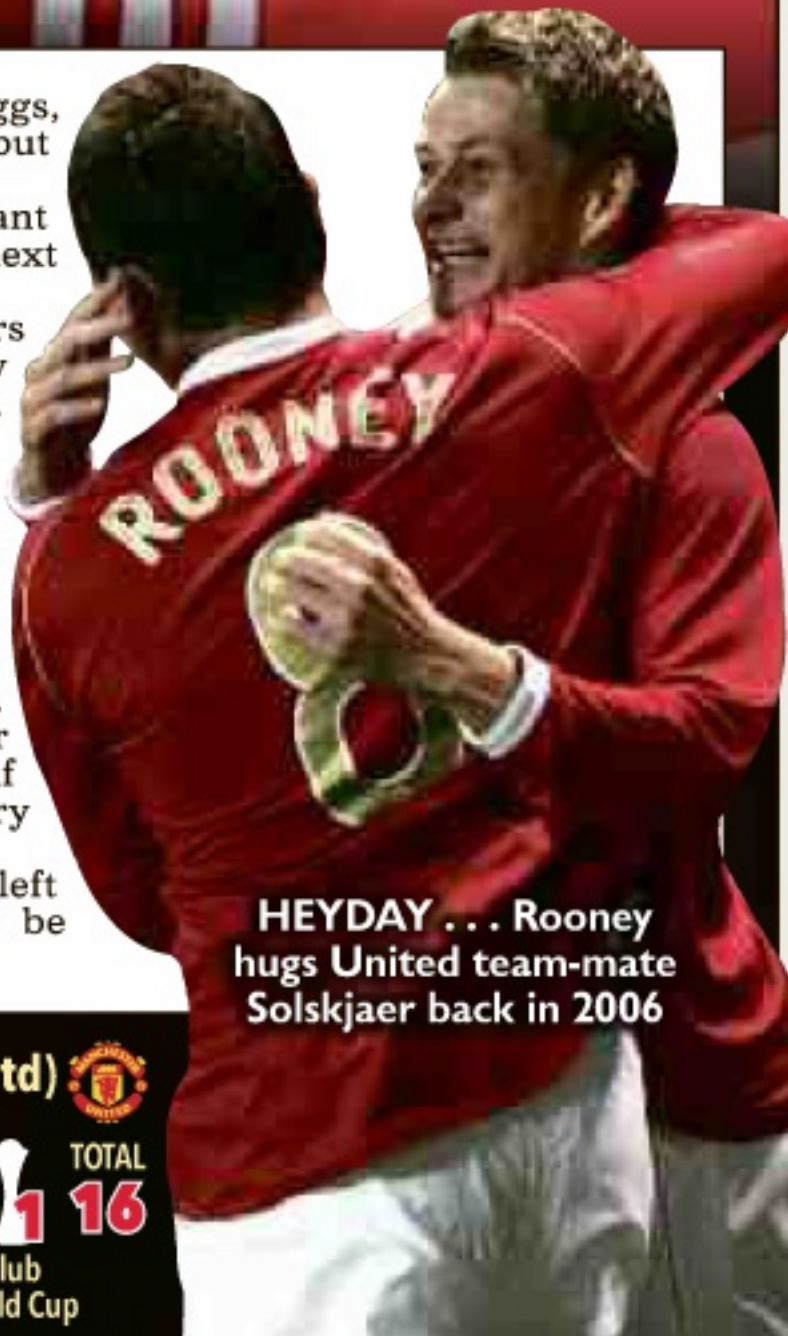

"Giggsy had scored but the gaffer had a go at him anyway."

"Ryan was the only one that would have a go back at him, so Sir Alex and him went at it for ten minutes."

"And all the time, I am thinking, 'This is a team that's just won three points away from home – at Tottenham they would have snapped your hands off!'."

"Eventually, when it all calmed down, Fergie turned to Giggsy and said, 'You! Don't ever talk to your granddad like that again!'."

"There is a different expectation and different standard. That is just how it is at United."

LEKO . . . 'let down'

By GARY STONEHOUSE

JONATHAN LEKO launched a stinging attack on the FA, PFA and top anti-racism bodies over his N-word abuse hell.

FA chiefs have banned Leeds keeper Kiko Casilla for eight games and fined him £60,000 for racially abusing Leko — who was on loan at Charlton.

But Leko, 20, claims he had no support from the players' union, Kick It Out or Show Racism The Red Card during his ordeal.

The West Brom forward blasted: "It made me question whether I would be prepared to go through it all again, were I on the receiving end of similar abuse in the future."

Casilla, 33, was rapped for calling Leko a "fing n" — despite the Spaniard denying using racial language.

But Leko fumed: "I am relieved the process is now complete and the FA have upheld what I have always known to be true."

"That I was racially abused by Casilla in a manner which still angers and upsets me to this day."

"I've been disappointed with the time it has taken to reach this point."

"It was difficult to watch Casilla continue to play for such a lengthy period as if nothing had happened."

"I urge the game's governing bodies to look into their own processes."

"It was 22 weeks between the incident and the hearing — during which I had minimal contact from the PFA, of which I am a member."

"And no support from anti-racism bodies such as Kick It Out and Show Racism The Red Card."

PFA chiefs apologised to Leko last night, saying: "We do not want any player to feel unsupported when going through something as difficult as this."

"We'll review our procedures to ensure we learn from this moving forward."

Kick It Out declined to comment last night.

Moss hit with fine

BOURNEMOUTH coach Neil Moss has been fined £1,150 after he admitted using foul language during the 3-0 Premier League defeat at Burnley.

He accepted the FA's improper-conduct charge, having been sent to the stands by referee Mike Dean at Turf Moor.

Bournemouth saw two goals ruled out by VAR, the second after Adam Smith had handled inside his own area in the build-up — with Burnley then scoring from the resulting penalty.

AGUERO PASSES ROONEY MANC MARK

SERGIO AGUERO struck early in the second half to be crowned the new Roo-ler of Manchester goalscorers.

The Etihad idol's goal took his tally to 254 for City — one more than a certain Wayne Rooney managed across town at Old Trafford.

He still needs a few more to dethrone the King himself, Denis Law, whose 275 goals were spread across both clubs.

But no matter what happens, Aguero will always be football royalty in the eyes of those of a sky blue persuasion in Manchester.

And while this victory will not go down as one of Aguero's most memorable moments, it got Pep Guardiola and his players dreaming of more silverware.

No wonder City fans refer to Wembley as Etihad South.

Just three days after lifting the Carabao Cup there, only Newcastle stand between them and a return to the legendary venue for the FA Cup semi-finals.

You would not bet against them going all the way in this one, too.

City were never at their best here but still had too much for Garry Monk's spirited Owls.

It is 23 years since Wednesday last reached the FA Cup quarter-finals and ending that barren run against City always looked like a huge task.

The holders have not lost a one-off domestic cup tie since the shock defeat to League One Wigan more than two years ago.

Since the draw was made in late January, Wednesday's form has dipped and their fans have grown disillusioned, meaning Hillsborough was nowhere near full. High ticket prices and the fact it was live on TV would not have helped either.

Under-fire boss Monk sprang a surprise by handing keeper Joe Wildsmith a first start in 18 months.

It was the hosts who had the first chance as Jacob Murphy drifted in from the right but planted a left-footed effort wide.

City were completely dominating the ball but not moving it with their usual zip — and, as a result, chances were hard to come by.

John Stones hung up a pass to the back post and Gabriel Jesus planted his header wide when he should have hit the target.

The best chance of the half came when Riyad Mahrez curled over a free-kick which was met by Nicolas Otamendi — but his header thumped against the bar.

The Argentine defender got there first to another free-kick minutes later, but this time his header was high over the top. And just before half-time, Stones came round the back and headed a free-kick by Benjamin Mendy into the ground and up over the bar.

Guardiola told his players they should have been thinking of winning their next trophy as soon as they hit the Wembley showers on Sunday evening.

Yet they needed a bit of a freshen-up at half-time here.

Despite winning just one of their last eight matches, Wednesday had coped reasonably comfortably with what City had to offer.

But City looked a different proposition after the break.

Before long Aguero had his team's first effort on target of the night — but his tame effort should have tested Wildsmith more.

Then Mendy's thumping shot was tipped on to the bar by Wildsmith.

The 24-year-old keeper was there again to get down low and save Bernardo's fizzing effort.

But City were turning the screw and the breakthrough came as Mendy slipped in Aguero. Wildsmith got a good hand on the Argentine's shot but failed to keep it out.

The Owls fought to the end and could have grabbed an unlikely equaliser as Alex Hunt's cross found its way to the back post, where fellow sub Steven Fletcher could not quite get a toe on it.

KEY DOUBT FOR DERBY

KEVIN DE BRUYNE is a doubt for Sunday's Manchester derby after picking up a back injury in the Carabao Cup final win over Aston Villa last weekend.

The Belgian was not fit for last night's FA Cup win at Sheffield Wednesday and boss Pep Guardiola admits he does not know how long he will be out.

Pep said: "Kevin was not fit. He fell down in a bad position in his back. I don't know for Sunday. It's better to go there winning games, being in the FA Cup than being out."

City were never at their best but Sergio Aguero's goal puts them in the last eight.

The Argentine striker's second-half winner against Wednesday failed to stop a telling off from Guardiola.

Aguero, who did not obey Pep's orders, said: "He is a good manager and crazy!"

Guardiola was delighted to book a quarter-final trip to Newcastle later this month.

He said: "What is important is that we are there."

"It's the FA Cup. We cannot win the league, we have the FA Cup and Champions League so we knew it."

"It was their final. We prepared for that, we talked about this game and at the end we had success."

PEREIRA 82

SO PERFECT!

Ricardo late show outfoxes brave Brum

RICARDO PEREIRA was a bloody hero as he bravely headed Leicester into the quarter-finals.

The Portuguese right-back suffered a gash above his right eye after colliding with defender Jake Clarke-Salter when heading in Marc Albrighton's cross.

That goal, eight minutes from time, was enough to KO the brave Brum and carry the Foxes to within 90 minutes of a Wembley semi-final.

Pereira and Co will now fancy their chances of flooring Chelsea at home in the next round.

And they will have revenge in mind – having been dumped out at the same stage of the competition by the Blues in 2012 and 2018.

Foxes manager Brendan Rodgers paid tribute to his Portuguese man of phwoar.

He said: "We'll relish fighting to get to Wembley."

"It was always going to be tough for us if you look at Birmingham's record."

"I felt the goal was coming and we finally ended up getting it with a great header by Ricardo. He's a brilliant player who always wants to get forward and is up there with the top right-backs at this level."

By GRAEME BRYCE

The Foxes have never won the FA Cup in 136 years of trying, despite having four final appearances.

But Leicester, third in the league and closing in on a Champions League spot, are now dreaming of ending their hoodoo.

Rodgers turned this tie on its head when he called on his big guns as Harvey Barnes and Youri Tielemans were sent on to save the day.

James Maddison had smacked the crossbar with a deflected effort and was brilliant throughout.

But it was Pereira who was head and shoulders above the rest when he settled this tense fifth-round tie.

However, they made rather heavy work of it.

Leicester had not lost at home in the FA Cup to a side from a lower division since Wycombe beat them 2-1 here in March 2001.

So confidence was not exactly in short supply, even if their form had dipped of late.

Rodgers' side were winless in their last five games and, without their talisman Jamie Vardy, this was never going to be an easy passage against their Championship opponents.

Pep Clotet's Brum arrived with more than 5,000 raucous fans – on the back of a 13-match unbeaten run – determined to cause mischief.

Despite being 15th in the Championship, Birmingham were nobody's mugs. After all, how many clubs could choose to leave a £50million-rated mainstay out of their team?

Yet that is what Clotet decided to do as he gave 16-year-old sensation Jude Bellingham the night off.

The Blues boss feared burning the youngster out after he clocked up more than 30 appearances.

Yet even without him and injured winger Jeremie Bela – who had scored in two of his three FA Cup appearances this season – the visitors reached half-time unscathed.

In truth, Rodgers' men hardly laid a glove on them. In fact, the only time keeper Camp was called on in a dull opening 45 minutes arrived six minutes before the break.

Maddison bobbed and weaved in front of Maxime Colin before rifling in a ferocious right-foot shot.

Camp hurled himself to his left, smiling to the cameras no doubt, as he tipped the ball away spectacularly.

Rodgers' men had 76.1 per cent first-half possession. Yet that was their only shot on target.

The hosts' frustration continued after the break, until Pereira finally broke Brum hearts.

And Birmingham chief Clotet said: "We all feel disappointed not to get through. We knew we had to be spot-on in all our duties."

PREM'S VIRUS WARNING TO CLUBS

and FA chiefs had begun wargaming virus scenarios in a bid to get the season finished.

Italy last night announced that all sport fixtures – including Serie A – will be staged behind closed doors until April 3.

And now all 20 Prem clubs have been sent a letter regarding the worldwide spread of deadly Covid-19.

More than 95,000 coronavirus cases have been reported worldwide, with 87 in the UK, while more than 3,000 people have died. Clubs are being urged to ensure the highest hygiene standards but there was also an acknowledgement, for the first time, that there is a possibility of the Government banning all large gatherings of people, forcing matches to be played without spectators.

That would be the option of last resort for Prem chiefs and also the clubs, with a concern that fans may still choose to congregate outside of grounds that are hosting vital games.

Clubs have also been advised to reduce non-essential visitors and keep face-to-face meetings to a minimum. The instructions came as Inter

Milan president Steven Zhang said: "Closing doors but continuing matches is the right thing to do."

Inter have had two Serie A games postponed since the outbreak and also played a Europa League tie against Ludogorets behind closed doors last month.

West Ham boss David Moyes said last Saturday: "Football behind closed doors is not worth it as football is for fans. I hope we can find a way of overcoming what is going on."

But Zhang, born in China where the outbreak began, added: "As a club, we've a responsibility to deliver the right message. Safety is the highest priority."

Uefa has set up a working group to assess the situation – and the prospect of European ties over the next fortnight going ahead without fans is growing.

It is feared England v Italy at Wembley on March 27 will be axed, with the friendly a key part Gareth Southgate's Euro 2020 preparations.

But former Chelsea boss Gianluca Vialli, part of the Italy coaching set-up, said: "I don't know if the game will go ahead. We assume it is but it is difficult for us."

EURO VISION... Southgate and Smalling

It's a Small apology by Gareth

By MARTIN LIPTON

GARETH SOUTHGATE said sorry to Chris Smalling for his public England rejection — and opened the door to a stunning recall ahead of Euro 2020.

Manchester United defender Smalling, who impressed on loan at Roma this season, was hurt by Southgate's decision to axe him from national duty in November 2017.

Southgate suggested Smalling's limitations in playing out from the back meant he was not suited to his Three Lions blueprint.

But the England boss now admits he was "unfair" on Smalling and paved the way for a potential return to the fold.

Southgate said: "I have never ruled anybody out. I think that would be wrong."

"I think I said I probably regretted the way the message came across if, by praising others for certain attributes, there was criticism for Chris. It was my fault and it was unfair on him."

The England chief suggested that Smalling had fallen behind the likes of Harry Maguire, John Stones and Eric Dier in the pecking order because that trio could "do it better" than him.

Smalling has not been in the England frame since missing out of the 2018 World Cup semi-final run.

But with Stones and Everton's Michael Keane enduring torrid times, the 30-year-old is very much back in the England reckoning.

Southgate and his assistant Steve Holland flew out to Italy to watch Smalling in action before Christmas.

The England boss added: "I spoke to him when I left him out of the squad and explained what I explained to everybody."

"Of course, because of the way it came out, there was little point — I wasn't going to say anything that hadn't already been said."

"But I think he's done well in Italy, playing at another big club."

"He was obviously playing at a big club before. We're watching everybody because we've got to make sure we make the right decision."

He's been Cenk back

By TONY LITTLE

CENK TOSUN has returned to parent club Everton for scans on a knee injury.

The Turkey striker (below) is said to have suffered a serious problem while on loan at Crystal Palace. He will have medical tests at Everton's Finch Farm base before the extent of the problem is known.

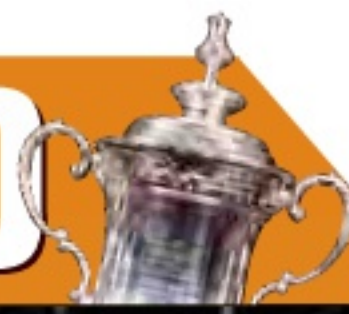

Tosun, 28, moved to Selhurst Park in January until the end of the season.

He has made two starts and three substitute appearances for Palace, scoring one goal in the 2-2 draw at Manchester City. Roy Hodgson's men have an option to sign Tosun permanently in the summer for £20million.

But that move could be in jeopardy if the injury is serious — as could his participation at Euro 2020.

KRUL WAY TO GO

Tim's got bottle for a shootout

TIM KRUL was the Norwich hero as he saved two shootout penalties — after appearing to have a cheat-sheet written on his water bottle.

He stopped efforts from Troy Parrott and Gedson Fernandes to deny trembling Tottenham a last-eight spot.

Incredibly, the Dutch keeper was given a list of Spurs' likely spot-kick takers and whether they tend to hit the ball left or right.

The 31-year-old is known as a penalty specialist — and was even brought off the bench in the last minute of extra time to save twice in the shootout as Holland beat Costa Rica in the 2014 World Cup quarter-finals.

His Norwich side will now play Derby or Manchester United — the Canaries' first FA Cup quarter-final for 28 years — after this stunning win.

But Krul's counterpart Michel Vorm had a night to forget, as his horror blunder gifted Josip Drmic a late equaliser after Jan Vertonghen's thumping early header.

And Spurs even had a Serge Aurier effort heroically cleared off the line by Ben Godfrey minutes before the end of the 90.

Both teams huffed and puffed in added time but spot-kicks looked somewhat inevitable as the shot-shy rivals laboured in front of goal. Spurs his best defender Toby Alderweireld on the bench.

But Spurs had the first big chance of the game in the 11th minute when Steven Bergwijn's quickly taken short free-kick caught Norwich napping – and sent Lucas Moura haring off.

Just outside the box, Moura offloaded the ball to fellow South American Giovanni Lo Celso, who was overlapping on the right.

But the Argentinian's shot was well blocked by Krul.

Yet there was nothing the classy stopper could do to keep out Spurs' opener on 13 minutes as Belgium defender Vertonghen rose above his marker Jamal Lewis to head in Lo Celso's free-kick at the far post.

Vertonghen may have marked the occasion with his trademark 'Superman' celebration – but the visitors' defending was so poor Lois Lane probably could have scored that one.

Norwich's big regret was that they did not test ring-rusty Vorm more in the home goal.

Tottenham's third-choice keeper, who rejoined the club in October after being released last summer, was not forced into a save until the 33rd minute when he blocked Emi Buendia's shot.

Though Vorm, making his first appearance since Spurs' 2-2 draw at PSV Eindhoven in October 2018, then blotted his copybook by almost spilling Lukas Rupp's long-range shot over the line moments later.

Moura should have doubled Spurs' lead following a slip by Mario Vrancic – but the Brazilian's shot was pushed over the bar by Krul.

Tottenham looked a little nervy after the break – only natural for a team on the back of three losses – and began to drop deeper and deeper as they seemed to invite Norwich to attack. Buendia also had a shot deflected over the bar and Vrancic curled a 20-yard free-kick on to the roof of the net.

As the hosts got more anxious, you sensed there might be a sting in the tail.

And so it came to pass as Vorm failed to hold Kenny McLean's 25-yard shot and Drmic bundled in to make it 1-1 in the 79th minute.

In a frantic finale of normal time, Aurier had a shot blocked on the line – but it was Krul who kept his cool in the shootout.

DIERBOLICAL

From Back Page

crowd as stewards rushed in, while Dier was heard to shout: "He's my brother!"

Spurs boss Jose Mourinho condemned Dier's actions but pleaded for the club NOT to punish him.

Mourinho said: "I think Eric Dier did something that we professionals cannot do – but in these circumstances every one of us would do."

"Because when somebody insults you and your family is there and you get involved with the person that is insulting you, in this case a younger brother."

"I think Eric did what we as professionals cannot do. I repeat, probably everyone of us would do."

"This person insulted Eric, his family was there. The young brother was not happy with the situation and then Eric, I repeat did what we professionals cannot do."

"I am with the player and I understand the player. But I repeat, as professionals we cannot do."

The unsavoury incident took place in the lower tier of the West Stand and Mourinho said: "These people are in privileged positions by the tunnel."

"Of course some are Tottenham fans but I think a lot of corporate, a lot of invitations and a lot with special status."

"It's the place of the stadium where I sometimes have doubts over if they are the real Tottenham fans who support the boys to the last."

The FA are certain to investigate the incident – which had shades of Manchester United's Eric Cantona kung-fu kicking a fan at Crystal Palace in January 1995 – and Dier is likely to be punished with a fine and a ban.

Cantona was hit with a massive nine-month FA suspension although Dier did not catch up with the fan in question.

Asked if Tottenham will punish the player, Mourinho said: "If the club does that I will not agree but he did wrong."

Some posts on social media had claimed Dier had jumped into the crowd to apprehend a fan who had allegedly racially abused Gedson Fernandes, the Portuguese star who missed the decisive penalty in the shootout.

But Mourinho dismissed this, insisting: "I cannot say that, I don't know."

"I just know the reaction of Eric was based on his brother, who didn't like what was happening."

"I cannot go in that direction with details."

Spurs visit Burnley on Saturday before their Champions

League last-16 return leg at RB Leipzig.

Mourinho says he fears for his shattered troops.

He said: "I have to think about what's next and I have to speak to my club because I think some of these boys to have a chance to fight Tuesday for a Champions League position – they just can't play on Saturday."

"Behind we have options but not going forward."

Jan Vertonghen headed Spurs in front early on but Josip Drmic bundled a late Norwich equaliser.

They won on penalties to set up a home last-eight tie with Derby or Manchester United.

Canaries boss Daniel Farke, whose side took a huge 9,000 supporters to Spurs, said: "We have played for the fans, given our all on the pitch."

"We want to be brave and attack. We have such unity and spirit. We're the biggest underdogs."

"I can't guarantee if we will stay in the league or win the FA Cup, but we have created memories."

KANE... at Spurs last night

Kane: I'll 'definitely' be fit for the Euros

By PAUL JIGGINS

HARRY KANE insists he will be fit to captain England at the Euros this summer – barring "something drastic".

The Tottenham striker has been sidelined since New Year's Day after hamstring surgery.

SunSport exclusively revealed last week Kane is on course to return to action in early April, much earlier than expected.

It is good news for England – with boss Gareth Southgate worried his skipper, 26, might not be fit for Euro 2020.

Kane, in an interview with the Evening Standard, said: "In my head, I'm definitely at the Euros."

"Unless something pretty drastic happens between now and then, I'll be there. I'm still not back training with the first team but I'm working hard in the gym."

"We're talking a few more weeks and I'll be playing again."

"I am hoping to be back between the start and the middle of April."

Spurs backed our story on Kane's early return when they announced last week he had started his "on-field rehabilitation."

Troy Parrott has been told by Republic of Ireland boss Mick McCarthy his Euro 2020 dream is OVER – unless he gets a run in the Spurs' team.

Tottenham manager Jose Mourinho refused to send the striker, 18, out on loan in January.

He came on as a sub in last night's FA Cup clash with Norwich – but blundered when he missed a penalty in the shootout as Spurs crashed out.

And his lack of action worries McCarthy, who gave Parrott his only cap in November's 3-1 friendly win over New Zealand.

McCarthy said: "Jose is one of the best managers. If he doesn't want to play him, that's his choice."

"It would suit me but Jose's his own man. Yet it affects Troy's chances if he is not playing."

McCarthy's men will face Slovakia in this month's Euro 2020 play-off semi – before a potential clash with Northern Ireland.

Mourinho put the boot into Parrott last night, snapping: "Now people can see he has to work a lot, so don't think that Parrott is the second Harry Kane."

"The penalty's nothing – the problem is the 30 minutes before."

24

TOTTENHAM were involved in a penalty shootout in the FA Cup for the first time in 24 years since 1996 against Nottm Forest in the fifth round, which they also went on to lose (3-1).

28

NORWICH have reached the quarter-finals of the FA Cup for the first time in 28 years – since 1992. The Canaries went on to be KO'd in the semi-finals by Sunderland.

2

SPURS have kept just three clean sheets in their 24 matches under Jose Mourinho since his first game in charge on Nov 23, with none of those coming in cup competitions (five games).

FAB OFFERS TO WHET YOUR APPETITE FOR THIS GREAT BRITISH DISH

Chicken and leek pie

Serves four

YOU NEED:

Olive oil
4 rashers unsmoked streaky bacon, diced
500g chicken thigh meat, cut into 2cm pieces
1 onion, diced
2 leeks, trimmed and sliced thickly
150ml white wine
2 tbsp plain flour
200ml chicken stock
200ml whipping cream
1 tbsp wholegrain mustard
320g puff pastry, ready rolled
1 egg, beaten

METHOD: Preheat your oven to 220C/200C fan/gas 7. Drizzle a little olive oil in a large saucepan, then add the bacon and chicken. Sauté over a medium heat for five minutes. Add the onion and leeks and cook for a further five minutes.

Add the white wine and after five minutes mix in the flour and cook for a minute. Pour in the chicken stock and simmer for 20 minutes, then add the cream and mustard. Stir and boil for ten minutes to reduce. Season to taste.

Spoon into a pie dish (approximately 23cm x 30cm). Brush a little beaten egg around the lip of dish.

Unroll the puff pastry and place over the top of the chicken and leek pie filling. Trim away any excess pastry.

Crimp the edges using your fingers or a fork. Brush the pastry lightly with the beaten egg and, using kitchen scissors, snip 3 holes in the pastry. This will allow the steam to escape.

Bake in the preheated oven for 20 minutes or until the pastry is golden brown and risen.

Serves eight

YOU NEED: For the pastry: 400g flour; 2 tbsp custard powder; 200g cubed; finely grated zest of 1 orange; 100ml ice-cold water.

For the filling: 2kg Bramley apples, cored and diced; 125g caster sugar; 3 cubes orange or lemon-flavoured beaten egg to glaze; 1 tbsp demerara.

METHOD: First, make the pastry. flour and custard powder into a large bowl. Then rub in the butter with your fingers until the mixture resembles breadcrumbs.

Stir in the orange zest and caster sugar. Add the cold water and mix until the mixture is soft and sticky. Knead lightly, then wrap in cling film.

VEGGIE PIES

Bite into Asda Extra Special Butternut Squash & Spinach Pie, 200g, £2.

Have a pie with a French twist, with two Tesco Vegetarian Mushroom & Camembert Pies, priced at £1.75 or buy three packs for £4.

jelly cubes have dissolved. Take off the heat and set aside to cool.

Preheat the oven to 200C/180C fan/gas 6. Roll out two-thirds of the pastry and use it to line a 23cm-wide, 4cm-deep pie dish.

Spoon the cooled apple mixture into the dish in an even layer. Roll the remaining pastry out and cut into 1cm-wide strips, long enough to cross the top of the pie.

Brush the rim of the pastry case with the beaten egg, then arrange the pastry strips over the top of the pie about 1cm apart. Press into place at the rim. Repeat across the other way to create a lattice effect.

Brush the strips with beaten egg and sprinkle with sugar. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes, until the pastry is golden. Serve warm, with custard, cream or ice cream.

Affordable travel insurance even with pre-existing medical conditions

It is always important to find the right travel insurance policy for your needs, whether you are taking a short weekend break in Europe or travelling further afield for longer.

You should ensure that any medical conditions you have are covered. Mr Gould, from Norfolk, made sure the policy he purchased via PayingTooMuch.com suited his needs.

He bought an annual policy so he and his wife had the freedom to book a few trips or travel on a whim without needing to organise further insurance.

Mr Gould said: "I saw PayingTooMuch.com advertised in the newspaper and decided to call them. I think it's always best to speak to someone when you have medical conditions."

"I spoke to a very helpful chap who explained all the different options including the cancellation levels."

Mr Gould was delighted with the price he paid, too. He said: "It was cheaper than the policy I purchased the year before, so I was very happy."

Aaron Hackett, from PayingTooMuch.com, said: "We always encourage our customers to find the policy that most suits their circumstances."

"There are many factors to take into consideration when buying travel insurance and our team is here to answer any questions to make that decision easier.

"PayingTooMuch.com can cover most travellers with pre-existing medical conditions, with no upper age limit except those who are waiting for investigation or treatment."

The get ready for summer plan

'KIDS LOVE LEARNING TO COOK WITH ME'

BUSY mum Rachel Falcus feared her children would be overweight and bullied at school, just like she had been.

She had tried every fad diet going but always regained any weight she lost.

Luckily, she then discovered Slimming World and dropped an incredible six dress sizes – with the added bonus that her kids learned about healthy eating too.

Rachel, 39, from Newcastle upon Tyne, says: "I was really overweight, ordering in take-aways every night, and I just thought, 'I can't do this once the children grow up.'

"I worried my children would be overweight at school, like I was, and didn't want them to be picked on because of their size."

She lost 3st 7lb in a year and a half – and the proud mum of three, pictured as she is now, says: "The best part for me has been having my children on this journey with me. They've loved learning to cook meals from scratch with me. Now it's a way for me and my family to maintain a healthy lifestyle."

DIVINE VEGGIE RECIPES

Mushroom and spinach lasagne

Serves 4

Cooking time: Ready in 1½ hours

INGREDIENTS:

Low-calorie cooking spray
1 onion, finely chopped
400g shiitake mushrooms, chopped
4 garlic cloves, crushed
400g spinach leaves, chopped
800g fat-free natural cottage cheese
¼ tsp freshly grated nutmeg
2 eggs, lightly beaten
600g passata with onion and garlic
12 dried lasagne sheets
30g freshly grated vegetarian Parmesan-style cheese
5 bottled roasted red peppers in brine, rinsed, drained and cut into chunks
Salad, to serve

METHOD: Preheat oven to 200°C/fan 180°C/gas mark 6. Lightly spray a rectangular ovenproof dish with low-calorie cooking spray and set aside. Spray a large non-stick frying pan with low-calorie cooking spray and place over medium heat. Add onion and mushrooms and stir-fry for 10 minutes. Stir in the garlic and spinach and cook for 6-8 minutes or until the spinach has wilted. Season to taste, set aside.

Put the cottage cheese and nutmeg in a mixing bowl. Add the eggs, season to taste and beat until fairly smooth using an electric hand whisk. Spread half of the passata over the base of the prepared dish and top with four lasagne sheets. Spread one-third of the cottage cheese mixture over the lasagne sheets and top with half of the mushroom mixture. Sprinkle over half of the Parmesan-style cheese. Arrange the pepper pieces over the cheese in an even layer and top with four more lasagne sheets. Spread over the rest of the mushroom mixture and half of the remaining cottage cheese mixture.

Top with the last four lasagne sheets, the remaining passata and the rest of the cottage cheese mixture. Sprinkle over the last of the Parmesan-style cheese, cover with foil and bake for 30 minutes. Remove the foil and cook for 15-20 minutes or until the top is lightly browned and the pasta is tender. Cover with foil and leave to stand for 25-30 minutes and serve with the salad.

Five-spice tofu skewers

Serves 4

Cooking time: Ready in 30 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

16 small new potatoes
400g plain/naturally smoked firm tofu, cut into bite-sized chunks
16 button mushrooms, stalks removed
8 baby courgettes, each cut into 3 pieces
1 red pepper, deseeded and cut into bite-sized chunks
Salad, to serve

For the marinade:

6 tbsp tomato purée
4 tbsp light soy sauce
Juice of 2 limes
1 tbsp Chinese five-spice powder

METHOD: Cook the potatoes in a pan of lightly salted boiling water for 7-8 minutes or until tender, then drain and pat dry.

Meanwhile, put all the marinade ingredients in a wide bowl, season to taste and whisk well.

Preheat the grill to medium-high.

Tip the potatoes, tofu, mushrooms, courgettes and pepper chunks into the marinade, toss to coat evenly and thread on to eight metal skewers (or wooden skewers soaked for 20 minutes to stop them burning).

Grill the filled skewers for 10-12 minutes, turning frequently and brushing with the remaining marinade every few minutes.

Serve hot with the salad.

Ricotta and spinach crêpes with basil and tomato sauce

Serves 4

Cooking time: Ready in 1 hour 15 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

Low-calorie cooking spray
12 large eggs
2 tbsp dried parsley
1 shallot, finely chopped
4 garlic cloves, crushed
200g chestnut mushrooms, finely chopped
400g baby leaf spinach, roughly chopped
150g ricotta cheese
200g fat-free natural cottage cheese

A large pinch of freshly grated nutmeg
Vegetables, to serve

For the sauce:

500g passata with onion and garlic
1 vegetable stock cube
2 tbsp tomato purée
A large handful of finely chopped fresh basil, plus sprigs to garnish

METHOD: Put all the ingredients for the sauce in a wide saucepan and bring to the boil over a high heat.

Reduce the heat to low and cook gently for 25-30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Season to taste and keep warm.

To make the crêpes, spray a medium-sized non-stick frying pan with low-calorie cooking spray and place over a high heat.

Crack one egg into a small bowl, add pinches of parsley, salt and pepper and beat. Tip into the frying pan, tilt to spread the egg thinly and cook for 1-2 minutes or until lightly browned underneath. Flip over and cook for another 1-2 minutes. Transfer to a baking sheet lined with baking parchment, cover with another sheet of baking parchment and keep warm while you cook the rest of the crêpes in the same way, adding each new crêpe to the pile until you have 12.

To make the filling, spray a large non-stick frying pan with low-calorie cooking spray and place over a medium heat. Add the shallot, garlic and mushrooms and fry for 6-8 minutes or until the mushrooms have softened.

Put the spinach in a bowl and pour over a little boiling water. Wilt for 3-4 minutes then tip into a sieve, drain and squeeze out excess water with the back of a spoon. Put the spinach in a mixing bowl. Add the mushroom mix and stir in the ricotta, cottage cheese and nutmeg. Season to taste, and stir.

Divide the spinach filling evenly between the 12 crêpes and roll each one up neatly. Drizzle the warm sauce over four plates then arrange three crêpes on each one. Garnish with basil leaves and serve with your favourite vegetables.

Wild mushroom and chestnut pies

Serves 4

Cooking time: Ready in 1 hour 10 minutes, plus cooling

INGREDIENTS:

Low-calorie cooking spray
1 onion, finely chopped
2 carrots, peeled and diced
4 celery sticks, finely chopped
2 garlic cloves, crushed
4 tbsp tomato purée
1 tsp Marmite
200g can chopped tomatoes
225ml boiling vegetable stock
500g mixed wild mushrooms (or a mix of button and chestnut), wiped and roughly chopped
2 tbsp chopped fresh tarragon
100g cooked and peeled chestnuts, roughly chopped
Vegetables, to serve

For the topping:

300g celeriac, peeled and diced
½ swede, peeled and diced
2 carrots, peeled and diced
4 potatoes, peeled and diced
100ml boiling vegetable stock
A large handful of finely chopped fresh parsley
2 eggs, lightly beaten

METHOD: First make the topping. Cook the celeriac, carrots and potatoes in a large saucepan of lightly boiling water for 15-20 minutes or until the vegetables are tender. Drain and roughly mash with the stock and seasoning. Leave to cool, then stir in the parsley and beat fairly smooth.

Meanwhile, spray a large non-stick frying pan with low-calorie cooking spray and place over a medium heat. Add the onion, carrots, celery and garlic and stir for 5 minutes. Add the tomato purée and Marmite and cook for a further 5 minutes.

Add the tomatoes, stock, mushrooms, tarragon and chestnuts and simmer for 10-12 minutes or until the mixture has reduced and thickened. Remove from the heat and cool slightly. Season to taste.

Preheat the oven to 190°C/fan 170°C/gas mark 5. Spoon the mushroom mixture into four individual dishes (or one big ovenproof dish), top with the mash and bake for 30 minutes or until golden. Serve hot with the vegetables.

Portobello mushroom cheeseburger

Serves 4

Cooking time: Ready in 15 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

4 large portobello mushrooms
Low-calorie cooking spray
125g fat-free natural cottage cheese
2 garlic cloves, crushed
½ tsp dried chilli flakes
A small handful of finely chopped fresh chives, plus extra to garnish
4 x 60g wholemeal rolls, split and toasted if you like ½ cucumber, sliced into ribbons with a peeler
1 tomato, sliced
½ red onion, sliced
Salad, to serve
Spicy wedges, to serve

METHOD: Preheat the grill to high. Remove the stalks from the mushrooms (you can save them to use in another dish if you like) and spray the caps with low-calorie cooking spray.

Season to taste, spread the mushrooms out on the grill pan and grill for 3-4 minutes on each side or until cooked but still firm.

Leave the grill on.

Meanwhile, mix the cottage cheese, garlic, chilli flakes and chives in a bowl and season to taste.

Spoon the mixture into the mushrooms and grill for 1 minute or until hot and bubbling.

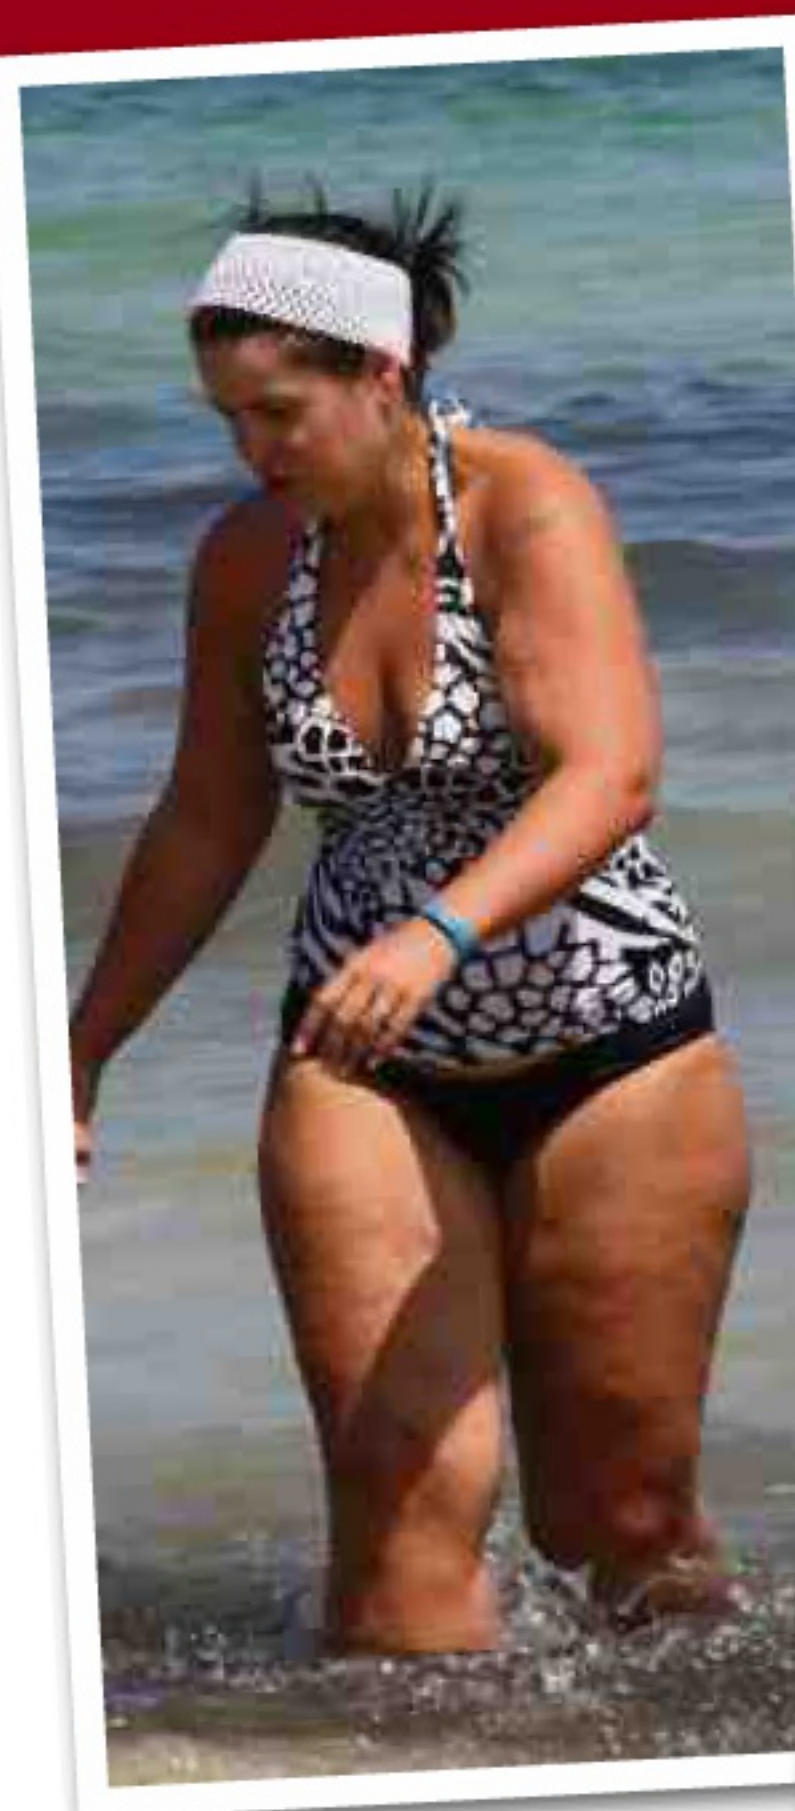

Fill the rolls with the cucumber, tomato, red onion and cooked mushrooms.

Scatter over the chives and serve hot with the salad and spicy wedges (see tip).

TIP: To make spicy wedges, preheat the oven to 200°C/fan 180°C/gas mark 6. Mix a teaspoon each of smoked paprika, ground cumin and cinnamon in a bowl.

Peel four sweet potatoes, cut into wedges and toss in the spices. Spray with low-calorie cooking spray and bake for 30-35 minutes or until tender.

Season with salt to serve.

BEFORE AND AFTER . . . Rachel in swimsuit on holiday and, right, as she is now with husband Craig

'I couldn't believe that I was eating the same type of food as before – pizzas, burgers, kebabs – and losing weight'

RACHEL FALCUS had tried every fad diet but never managed to keep weight off. The civil servant, 39, who has children James, 15, Liam, 12, and five-year-old Emily, says it was only after becoming a busy mum and searching for a healthy way of life for her family that she found Slimming World and dropped six dress sizes. Speaking to JENNY FRANCIS, Rachel, who lives in Newcastle with civil servant husband Craig, 39, says:

“I WAS overweight from the age of nine. I didn't play any sports and my mum worked nights so food was always convenience over health.

We had a lot of takeaways and ready meals, as mum rarely cooked from scratch.

I don't know what my weight was back then but I was always the biggest in my class at school and, by my teenage years, I was a size 12.

After college, when I began work as a civil servant, I started trying fad diets.

I did at least two a year and, although I'd lose around a stone, it never stayed off because the diets were unsustainable, so I'd yo-yo up and down.

After I met Craig, we married when I was 23 and I walked down the aisle in a size 12 dress after two months of crash-dieting.

I fell pregnant with James less than a year later, and gained 3st in nine months. The minute I became a mum, I knew I wanted more children, so I just put the weight to the back of my mind.

I had my second child three years later and gained another 3st with that pregnancy, taking me to over 15st and a size 22.

It was only then that something switched in my attitude to my weight.

I was ordering in takeaways every night and just thought to myself: “I can't do this once the children grow up.”

I worried my children would be overweight at school like I was and didn't want them to be picked on because of their size – just like me.

I was at a parent-toddler group when one mum told me she was a Slimming World member. She said it was amazing, because she could cook the same healthy meals for herself and her family.

It was what I was looking for, so I went home, researched my local group and signed up.

It was May 2007 when I first walked through the Slimming World doors and it was scary, as I didn't know what to expect.

The minute I heard about the Food Optimising plan and the recipes, I loved it. I couldn't believe I was eating the same foods I was eating before – pizza, burgers, chips and kebabs – and losing weight at the same time.

I was in the kitchen cooking up these healthier versions of the foods I loved and the weight just dropped off. It felt so good to be cooking for my family, knowing it was healthy, and seeing how they enjoyed the meals.

I lost 3st 7lb in 18 months and felt like a new woman. Everyone was amazed at the difference, not just in my looks but my confidence, too.

When I fell pregnant again, at the age of 33, everything was different third time around.

During my pregnancy I ate healthy, home-cooked meals and, instead of feeling sluggish like I had during my first two pregnancies, I had energy.

I only gained a stone over nine months and lost it straight away after giving birth.

I felt so good.

By sticking to the Slimming World Food Optimising plan, I lost another 2st, taking me down to a dress size 10 and 10st 7lb. It gave me the confidence to join a gym and now I go to spin and body-pump classes.

The best part for me has been having my children on this journey. They've loved learning to cook the meals from scratch with me. To them, a takeaway is a rare treat.

My husband has loved it, too, and has lost 5st with my meals.

Now it's a way of life for me and my family.

I've become a Slimming World Consultant and even my mum Lorraine, who's 64, signed up to one of my groups and has lost 2st. Clothes shopping is great fun now and the compliments from friends and family give me a buzz.

I've also saved hundreds of pounds by not getting takeaways – cooking healthy food at home is much better value. If I can do it, you can too.”

DIVINE VEGGIE RECIPES

Quinoa with roasted beetroot

Serves 4

Cooking time: Ready in 1 hour

INGREDIENTS:

800g red and golden beetroot, peeled and cut into chunks
Low-calorie cooking spray
A small bag of baby-leaf spinach
2 red onions, sliced
3 garlic cloves, crushed
300g dried quinoa
1 tbsp fresh thyme leaves, plus sprigs to garnish
800ml boiling vegetable stock
1 red chilli, deseeded and finely chopped

METHOD: Preheat the oven to 200°C/fan 180°C/gas mark 6. Put the beetroot chunks in a roasting tin and spray with low-calorie cooking spray. Season to taste and roast for 45 minutes or until the edges start to caramelise.

Meanwhile, put the spinach in a bowl and pour over a little boiling water. Leave to wilt for 5 minutes then drain thoroughly and set aside.

Spray a large non-stick saucepan with low-calorie cooking spray and place over a medium heat. Add the onions and garlic and cook for 3-4 minutes or until lightly golden.

Rinse the quinoa under cold running water, drain and add to the onions along with the thyme, stock and most of the chilli.

Bring to the boil over a high heat then reduce the heat to low and simmer for 15 minutes or until the liquid has mostly been absorbed, stirring occasionally.

Lightly stir the spinach and beetroot into the quinoa and divide between plates or bowls. Scatter over the remaining chilli and garnish with thyme sprigs to serve.

Sweet potato puff pies

Serves 4

Cooking time: Ready in 1 hour 15 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

2 sweet potatoes, peeled and diced
3 red onions, roughly chopped
2 courgettes, diced
3 carrots, peeled and diced
Low-calorie cooking spray
200ml boiling vegetable stock
2 garlic cloves, crushed
1 tsp dried mixed herbs
1 tsp mustard powder
200g plain quark
A small handful of chopped fresh chives
80g ready-rolled light puff pastry
1 egg, beaten
Vegetables, to serve

METHOD: Preheat the oven to 200°C/fan 180°C/gas mark 6.

Put the sweet potatoes, onions, courgettes and carrots into two large roasting tins and spray lightly with low-calorie cooking spray. Roast for 20 minutes or until soft and nicely coloured, turning occasionally.

When the vegetables are nearly done, put the stock, garlic and dried herbs in a saucepan and bring to the boil over a high heat. Remove from the heat and whisk in the mustard powder, quark and chives. Season the vegetables, divide between four individual pie dishes (that have lips) and spoon in the creamy sauce. Leave the oven on.

Roll out the pastry on non-stick baking parchment and cut into thin strips long enough to cover the pies. Brush the rim of each dish with some of the egg and arrange the pastry strips in lattice patterns over the top of each pie. Brush the pastry with the remaining egg.

Put the pie dishes on to a baking sheet and bake for 15-20 minutes or until puffed up and golden.
