TAKE NO PRISONERS

New general manager Ann Reynolds whips Wentworth into shape

Life will never be the same for the inmates and officers of Wentworth Correctional Centre in the aftermath of last season's tragic siege, which resulted in multiple lives lost.

When season eight of critically acclaimed local drama Wentworth gets underway, your favourite characters will be struggling with their new normal.

For Allie (Kate Jenkinson), there will be serious ramifications for mortally wounding bent officer Sean Brody (Rick Donald); Boomer (Katrina Milosevic) will face devastating consequences for ending Liz's (Celia Ireland) suffering; for Marie (Susie Porter) and Rita (Leah Purcell), being in protection means being separated from allies and loved ones, including Rita's sister, Ruby (Rarriwuy Hick); Jake's (Bernard Curry) willingness to sacrifice himself for ex Vera (Kate Atkinson) will have him reassessing his feelings for her; while for acting governor Will (Robbie Magasiva), there will be hell to pay for letting things get so out of hand.

And new general manager Ann Reynolds (Jane Hall, pictured near right, with Atkinson) is just the woman to take charge. A long-time friend of governor Vera's – who is on maternity leave – Ann is enlisted to clean house.

"Ann's brought in to pull Wentworth out of its hole," Hall previews. "She will do whatever it takes and she will trample on whoever she needs to."

Wentworth returns to FOX SHOWCASE [115] next month for its gripping eighth season.

SOUL SISTERS

She's one of Australia's hottest musical exports, with numerous accolades to her name and devoted fans who simply can't get enough of her. But have you ever wondered who Jessica Mauboy's own idols are? Or what songs get her up on the dance floor?

Well, wonder no more! This month, in celebration of International Women's Day on March 8, the Little Things hitmaker sits down to discuss her biggest musical influences – from Tina Turner to Mariah Carey and Brit girl group All Saints.

"[Tina Turner] is just phenomenal," Mauboy gushes.

She adds of Carey: "Mariah has taught me so much through her music; her music has guided me on vocal passion and how to write. It's okay to express all the truth in music, no matter how painful it is, as it makes it feel more real. Mariah has and will always be someone I look up to in music."

10 Songs I Love with Jessica Mauboy airs Sunday March 8 at 12pm, ENCORE at 5pm on foxtel smooth [806/133].

In some great news for fans of long-running car show Top Gear, Discovery Channel and Discovery Turbo have snapped up the original UK series – starring revheads Richard Hammond (pictured), James May and Jeremy Clarkson – as well as its US spin-off.

Fun for the whole family, we dare you not to laugh at the antics of the British trio as they, at times, risk life and limb putting vehicles to the ultimate test.

Stream* or watch Top Gear (s13-16) from March 2, weeknights at 6.32pm and Top Gear America from March 6, Fridays at 7.30pm, both on Discovery Turbo [620], and Top Gear (s21) from March 9, Mondays at 7.30pm on Discovery Channel [612].

Not only is the hugely popular series syndicated worldwide, but countries as far-flung as China, South Korea and France have their own versions.

IN MY OPINION

Ready and raring to go

Former NRL star Braith Anasta reflects on how players feel on the eve of a new league season

"Preseason is the hardest training of the year so, by the time footy kicks off, you just can't wait to get onto the field.

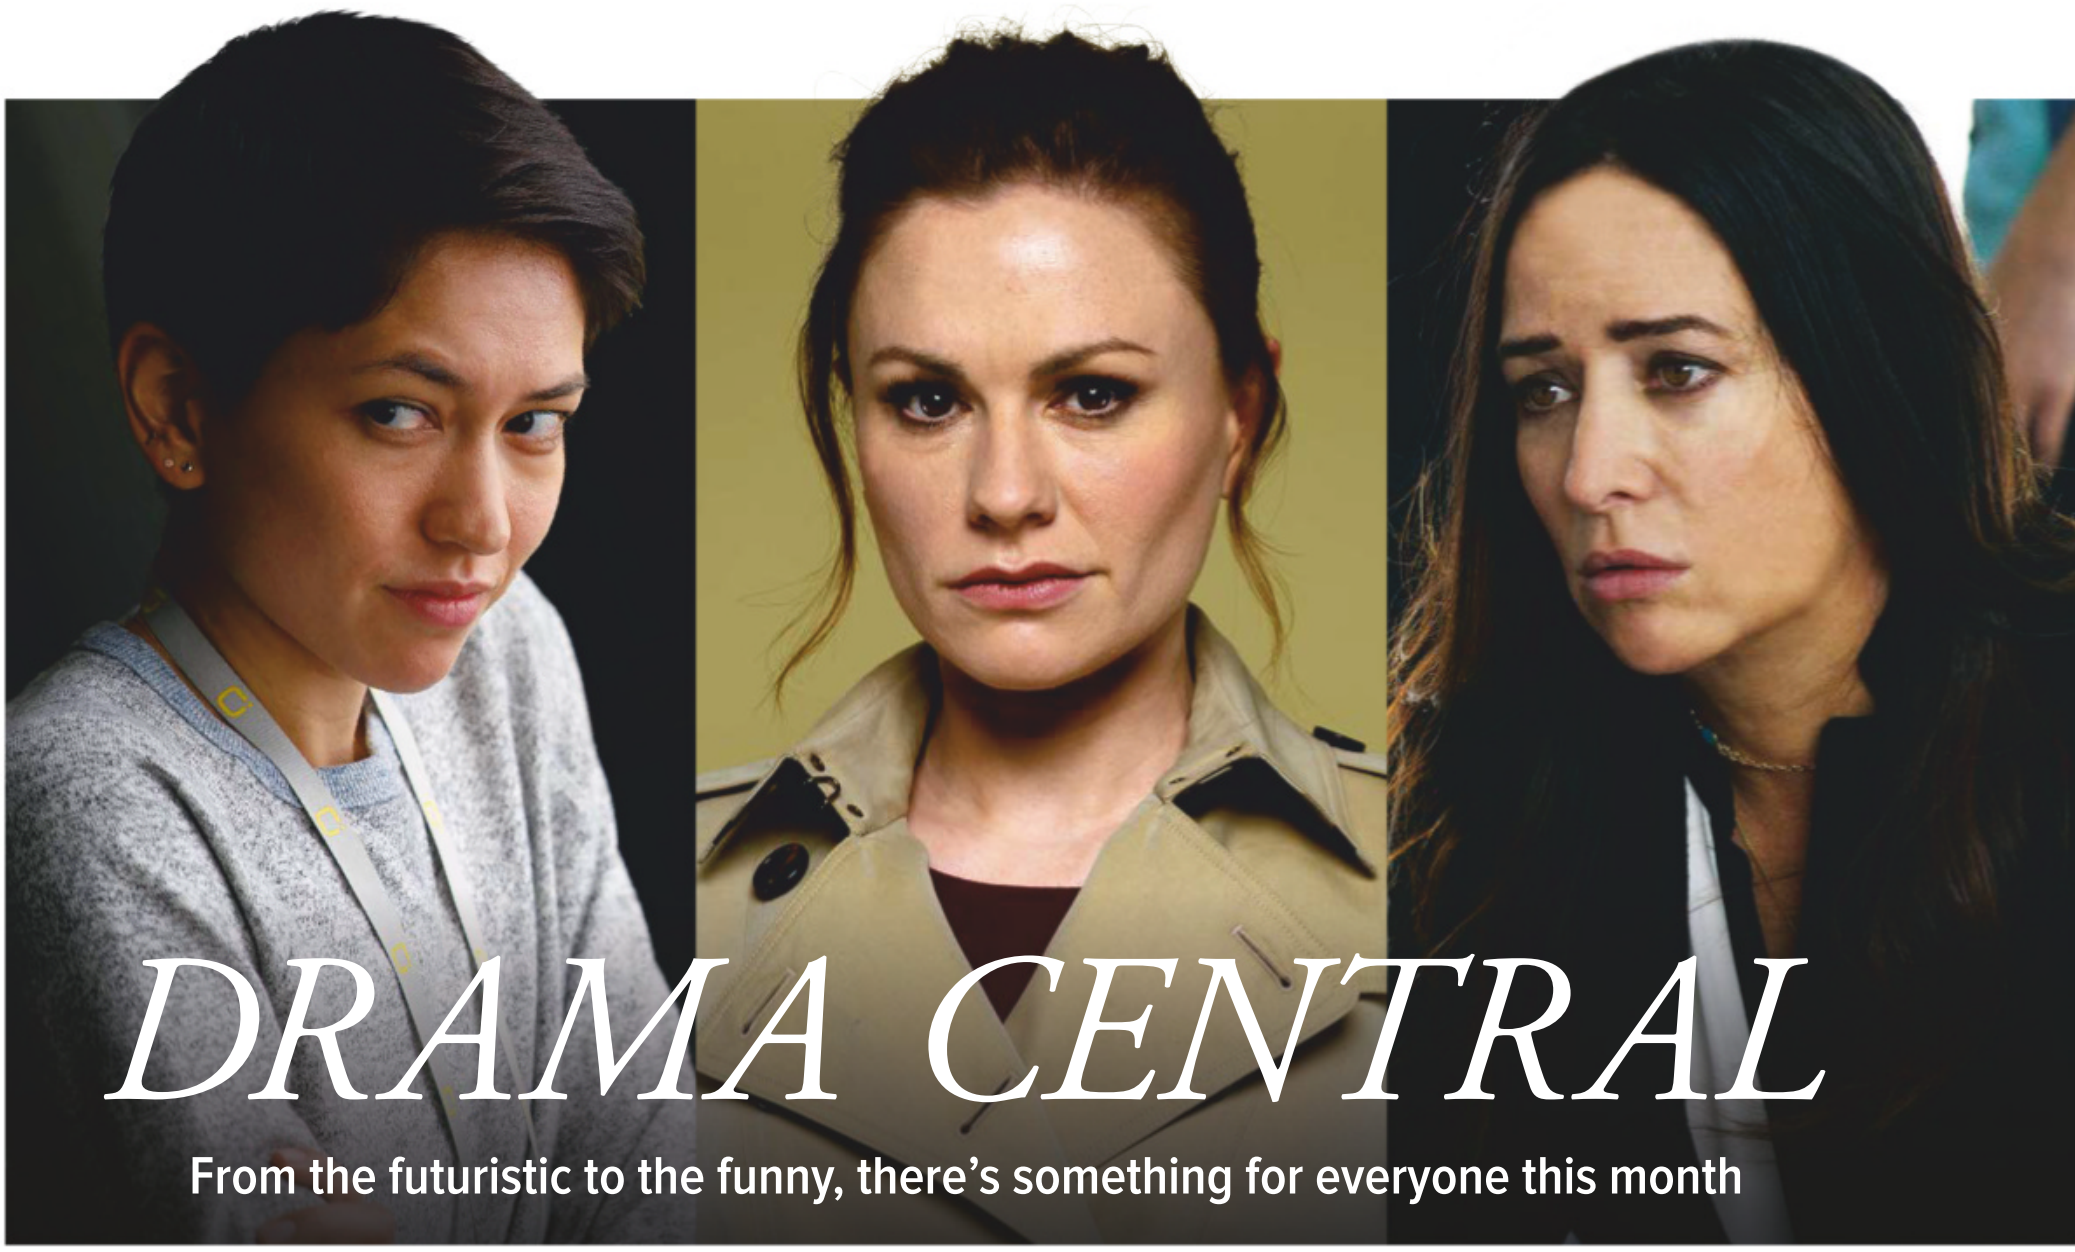

You've trained the house down for four to five months so, physically and psychologically, you're in a really good frame of mind. You're as positive as you can possibly be and your expectation is to do well because you feel good.

It's an exciting time because you're ready and raring to go, but there are still nerves and insecurities as expectations are so high. You're anxious to get on the field.

Experienced older players are like racehorses and don't want to peak too early because they are setting themselves up to play 26 rounds without hitting a brick wall at the end of it. Whereas young guys don't know any different and are fit and ready to get out there and play first-grade NRL.

That was my favourite part of my career: being young and feeling I was reaching the peak of my powers."

QUESTION TIME

David Berry

The Aussie Outlander star makes the most of regular long-haul flights to film in the UK by bingeing his favourite drama and lifestyle offerings

My current TV obsession is... Barry – it's one of the most accurate and hilarious depictions of what it is to be an actor in LA. I also think Sarah Goldberg, who plays his girlfriend Sally, gives the most on-point depiction of every actress I've ever met in my life. So from an actor's point of view, it's amazing. I can't really speak to what it's like to be a hitman, but if it's true of the acting it must be true of what it's like to be a hitman, too!

When I watch TV I must have... at least an hour to myself, which I rarely ever get, or a seat on a plane. I do most of my TV-watching on planes.

My dream evening of TV would include... Probably a pizza – TV and pizza is just the best combo.

My dream television-watching companion is... the two guys who used to be on Gogglebox – Adam and Symon. I think they are just hilarious. I crack up every time I watch those guys. I met them once and they were really down to earth. I think I was more starstruck by them; I don't know if they even knew who I was.

My favourite kind of television program is... It really depends on my mood. There's just so much choice now. If I'm in a fun mood, it would be comedy, if I'm really stressed and busy, I'd probably go for something lighter, like a lifestyle program, or if I really want to get into what it means to be an actor, then I really get into a drama.

If I could be on any other television show it would be... I really love Killing Eve and I would love to play a spy of some sort.

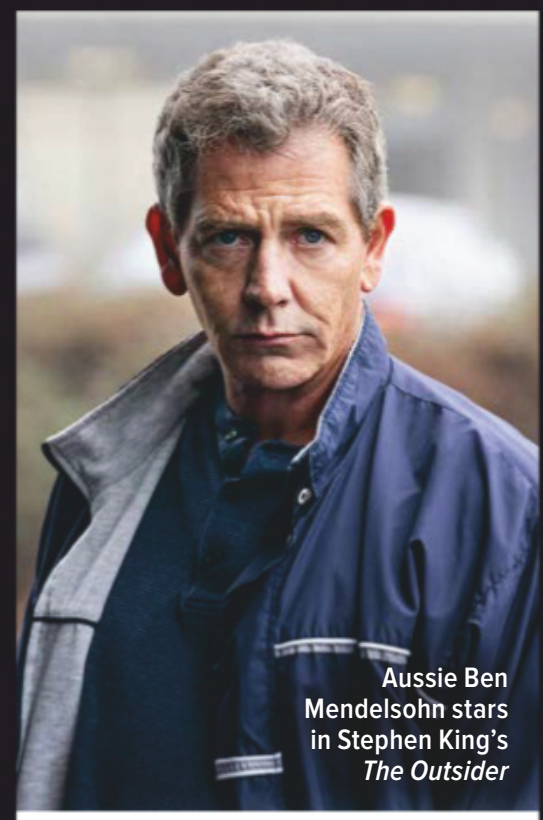

The last time I cried watching television was... watching the final episode of A Place to Call Home. We were all together watching it, all the cast, and it was very emotional.

My first TV crush was... April O'Neil from Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles – that yellow jumpsuit.

CESS

As the winter codes return, we gather a who's who of Australia's female sporting talent in celebration of International Women's Day

Ellyse Perry. Tayla Harris. Liz Cambage. Charlotte Caslick. They may be some of the biggest names in sport right now, but there's not an ounce of ego between them.

Heroes of Australia's favourite pastime – in cricket, AFLW and boxing, basketball and rugby union, respectively – they compete at the very highest levels of their professions.

On game day, they are unflappable, but posing for a few photos was a different story.

Enlisting some of our most successful and prominent female sporting talent, both on-field and off – including FOX SPORTS presenters Tara Rushton and Mel Jones – Foxtel magazine discovered there's one thing that doesn't come quite as naturally to these gifted superstars.

"I don't like looking at this stuff," Perry admitted as she tentatively approached the monitor to see her photos, despite having appeared perfectly at ease while shooting.

Of course, what unites the stars of our cover story is the fact that they're all inspirational women making waves in their chosen fields.

Whether competing or reporting from the sidelines, they each play pivotal roles in the sporting sorority – and are champions of one another.

"Workwise [I'm inspired by] the women I work with," says FOX LEAGUE identity Hannah Hollis of her fellow presenters Yvonne Sampson, Lara Pitt and Jess Yates, who also took part in our shoot.

"I'm sure they'd say that there were women ahead of them that were the trailblazers. [But] moving to FOX SPORTS changed my life. It's given me the opportunity to work with the women that I do who have become not just professional inspirations but, personally, really good friends."

Amid the excitement of new and continuing seasons, our featured women speak candidly about their inspirations, their career-defining moments and the role family plays in their success. ▶

Tayla Harris

AFLW and boxing

It's not easy being a dual athlete – not least as a female competing in what would arguably be considered two male-dominated sports. But Tayla Harris isn't easily deterred.

At just 22 years old, she has made a name for herself in two very tough disciplines: AFLW and boxing.

Having made her debut for the Brisbane Lions during the inaugural 2017 AFLW season, Harris is now in her third year playing for Carlton.

With eight goals to her name, she finished 2019 as the club's leading goal kicker and also received the JLT Mark of the Year award for the second consecutive year.

However, all of that was overshadowed when a photo of Harris making an impressive yet pretty standard on-field kick went viral for all the wrong reasons in March 2019. Attracting unwanted attention from online trolls who sexualised the star athlete, Harris didn't think twice about hitting back.

"That photo has probably been the defining moment in my career," she acknowledges. "I understand that I'm more known for that photo and what happened after the fact rather than what I'm doing in the photo – which is playing footy. But that's fine with me, because I've made an impact in the real world."

That she has. While it would have been far easier to bite her tongue and not add any fuel to the fire, Harris decided to use her platform to be a role model for all the young girls – and boys – who look up to her.

"I had what I felt was a duty of care to actually step up and to take back our position as women in sport, rather than let other people bring us down," she explains, adding: "I'm happy for that to be my legacy."

Harris is remarkably level-headed for someone so young. It would be easy to get an inflated ego when a bronze statue is erected in your likeness, quite literally immortalising that infamous moment in time. However, Harris can see it for what it is.

"You definitely don't ask for a statue of yourself, but it doesn't feel so personal because it's not about me at all – I've played a handful of games and not done anything particularly special in AFLW," she explains, adding: "That image represented a lot more than just kicking the ball; it was change and it was a movement. I'm proud to have been a part of it, but it really wasn't about me; I just happened to be the person in that photo. It was a good kick. I'm glad it was. Imagine if it had been a massive shank! That would have been funny."

> "I've made an impact in the real world"
> — Tayla Harris

Being a positive influence in all aspects of her life is something the sportswoman takes extremely seriously.

"It's a very important part of my role playing sport and being in an environment where people look up to you," she states. "Whether it's not swearing on social media or not having any photos of me drinking... I am really conscious of and cautious not to have any slip-ups in that department."

Someone she's taken her cues from is fellow sportsperson Ellyse Perry – herself initially a dual athlete competing for Australia in football and cricket before shifting her focus solely to the latter.

"Her doing that was really inspirational," Harris beams. "I was doing boxing and aspiring to be an AFL player as well, so I followed in her footsteps a little bit by pursuing both at the same time, which is not typically the way you do things. She inspired me to persist with both."

With eight professional fights now under her belt – her proud dad, Warren, in her corner for every bout ("He's my water boy!") – the undefeated boxer has not only proven her ability to excel in two sports simultaneously, but also to draw a crowd to a women's boxing match.

"Women will be headlining a MAIN EVENT card sooner than you would expect," she declares. "Whether it's me in Australia or Claressa Shields in America or Katie Taylor in Ireland. But I'd love to do it."

So what other goals does she have her sights set on in both disciplines?

"I'd love to win a premiership, I'd love to win a boxing world title," she says, adding in her typically understated way: "But I'm confident something will come up that's even greater that I didn't expect or couldn't even imagine." ▶

Mel Jones & Hannah Hollis

FOX CRICKET commentator

FOX LEAGUE presenter

When Hannah Hollis was being bullied at school due to her Indigenous heritage, she had someone to help her.

"My mum had a similar experience when she was going through school, so she was always there for me," says the FOX LEAGUE identity.

For Test cricketer-turned-FOX CRICKET commentator Mel Jones, her mother has also been a lifelong inspiration.

Born in the UK in 1972 to a Trinidadian father and an Australian mother, Jones was brought back to Melbourne as a baby by her mum.

"To come back with an illegitimate black child, in those days, to be brave enough... She's just a very strong, independent woman," Jones says.

Her father, whom she didn't meet until she was 16, would send her tickets to West Indies cricket matches in Australia. But it was her mother who drove her to Little Athletics and, later, cricket grounds.

"She's not a sportsperson, but she just knew that I loved it."

Hollis made her name at NITV covering Indigenous issues and says moving to FOX SPORTS was the hardest decision of her career, and yet the easiest.

"I actually think sport is a more powerful vehicle to break down barriers and combat racism than what I was doing before," she reflects.

Visiting with Indigenous communities, Hollis has seen firsthand how important sport is.

"These little kids are running around with their jerseys on, pretending to be superstars like Greg Inglis, doing the 'goanna' in the dirt," she recalls with a smile. "They don't have much, but what they have is footy."

As for Jones, she's broken down all kinds of barriers. Last year, she was appointed to the board of Cricket Australia and also provided commentary for the men's 50-over World Cup, including the Afghanistan-Pakistan match, alongside Alison Mitchell and Wasim Akram.

"Just before we went on air, Ali and I gave each other a high five in acknowledgement that it's not just about cricket," says Jones, who is cheering on the Australian team at the current ICC Women's T20 World Cup for more than one reason.

"I've been off alcohol for 12 months," she reveals. "My first drink will be on March 8 at the final. So I'm hoping that will be a celebratory moment!"

> "[Mum is] a very strong, independent woman"
>
> — Mel Jones

> "[We're] incredibly supportive of each other"
> — Lara Pitt

Yvonne Sampson & Lara Pitt

FOX LEAGUE presenters

The Real Husbands of Rugby League. That's what the men married to FOX LEAGUE presenters Yvonne Sampson, Lara Pitt, Jess Yates and Hannah Hollis call themselves.

"They love it!" Pitt assures us.

Sampson explains that the men are "left to their own devices" through the sporting winter when the women are at their busiest on camera, "so they've formed their own little friendship and support group".

The men are: Sampson's husband, Nine Network reporter Chris O'Keefe; Yates's husband, former pro surfer Luke Egan; Hollis's husband Tom Lee, who works in agriculture; and Pitt's husband, fashion designer Anthony Pitt.

Already parents to sons Lachlan and Cooper, the Pitts are expecting a new addition to the family in May.

"I'm having my third baby mid-season, so not the best timing," Pitt says with a laugh. "It's the first time we haven't timed it well. But it's very exciting because we always wanted to have a third."

Sampson says she's "so excited" for Pitt, confirming that she and O'Keefe "definitely" want to have kids of their own.

"I think Lara and Jess are great role models," she adds of her co-host mums.

The four presenters are a tight group, not just personally but professionally.

"I have not had, in the past, other women to learn from," Pitt admits. "But we've all been incredibly supportive of each other."

Sampson herself remembers a time early in her career when she wasn't getting much support at work.

"I was working in regional journalism and I was told, 'Yep, not suitable for TV,'" she reveals. "You can choose to follow that advice or you can say, 'You know what? I think I've actually got a little bit more to give here.'"

But there is one career Sampson knows she's not right for: playing rugby league.

"I tried to take up rugby league at the grand old age of 27 and I was terrible at it," she admits. "It's really hard! Love the game, was a terrible player."

Looking ahead to the pointy end of 2020's NRL season, Pitt wouldn't put it past the Sydney Roosters to go back-to-back-to-back: "They've lost Cooper Cronk but he's going to be in the coaching staff."

Sampson believes Parramatta will be "vastly improved" and is also keen to see the Raiders with new English import George Williams. ▶

Ellyse Perry

Cricket

Independent, hardworking, determined – the three words that cricketer Ellyse Perry uses to describe the kind of strong, inspirational women she most admires could easily be describing herself.

Despite the worldwide admiration and accolades heaped upon her in the last year alone, the 2019 ICC Women's Cricketer of the Year and ODI Cricketer of the Year also couldn't be more unassuming.

Summing up the past 12 months, the 29-year-old household name, whose face is plastered on billboards around the country, makes it clear that any success she's had is shared.

"We had a really nice year as a team, especially [retaining] the Ashes, then coming home and having a pretty successful summer," she says simply. "It's always enjoyable when it goes well, but it's been a great year for Australian sport in general, I think."

Another star who doesn't have to look further than home when it comes to the woman who has inspired her the most, Perry doesn't miss a beat as she declares it's her mum Kathy.

"Without a doubt it's Mum," she states. "Her influence across my childhood but also now as well, she is just very much someone who has always cracked on and done things, is incredibly hardworking and diligent, and she's always had an amazing amount of time and care and love for her family. She's amazing."

So how does Perry feel about being an inspiration herself to many aspiring young athletes these days?

"I think undoubtedly for all of us, the biggest thrill is at the end of a game, when the young kids line up around the fence to meet the team and collect autographs," she says warmly. "They take a lot of delight in what we do so, from a personal perspective, it's really lovely to have that kind of influence. It's really cool and certainly something we really value."

With a campaign underway to break the current record of 90,185 in attendance for a female sports event during the 2020 ICC Women's T20 World Cup final at the MCG on March 8 – International Women's Day – Perry is excited and proud to be a part of the action.

> "It's been a great year for Australian sport in general"
> — Ellyse Perry

"It's a really ambitious and exciting opportunity," she says. "I think it speaks volumes for where we want to take the sport, but not just cricket – all women's sports. Being able to play cricket in such an amazing era for the sport is something I feel very fortunate to have been a part of."

With last year heralding another step towards pay parity in Australian women's cricket, Perry is thrilled to already be seeing the far-reaching ramifications – for athletes and fans alike.

"It's really important," she agrees. "Cricket's led the way in terms of professionalising the sport for women and I think it's then translated very strongly into how the game's being played and how entertaining and exciting it is, and the fans its brought to the game. It's really nice to be in an organisation that values female participation in their game."

Of course, there was a time when the name Ellyse Perry was synonymous not only with cricket, but also with football.

The first Australian athlete to have played in World Cups in two sports, she ultimately turned her focus to cricket. The rest, as they say, is history.

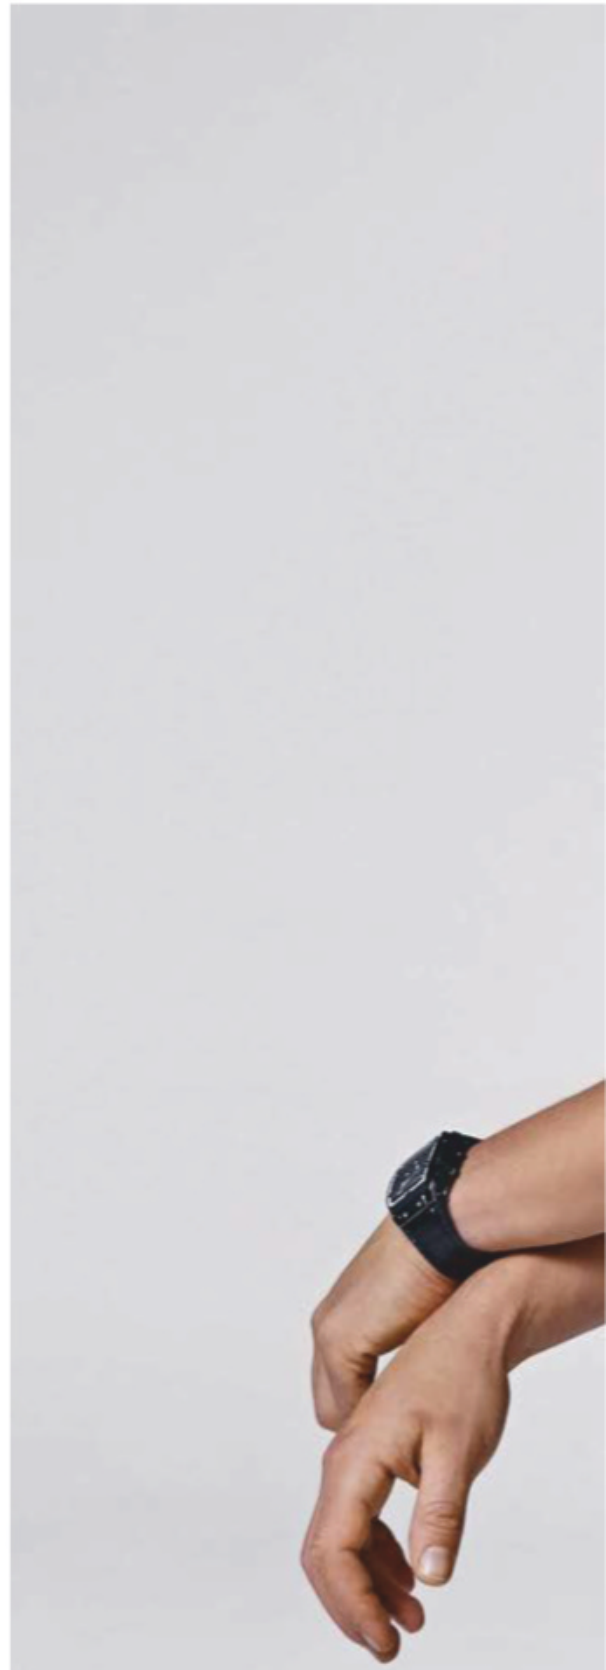

"I had a really amazing run and was very, very fortunate to do both and I'm very appreciative to have had those experiences, but I think it just ran its natural course," Perry reflects. "I look back on that time and think of the incredible support from some amazing people who let me have those opportunities."

Also the youngest person to have represented Australia in cricket, at just 16, Perry admits the feat still surprises her.

"It kind of shocked me at the time and I still think I probably had rocks in my head," she says with a laugh, "but I'm really glad I was able to make the most of that initial opportunity. I don't think I've ever worked a day in my life, 'cause what I get to do is so cool."

Perry, who recently celebrated four years of marriage to rugby union player Matt Toomua, can't identify just one defining moment in her career. Perhaps that's because there have been so many – or perhaps because the best is yet to come.

"The opportunity to constantly chip away at something and work with some amazing people has been what I've enjoyed," she recalls. "I've really loved that process. To be able to learn lots from different people, I'll hold on to that for the rest of my life, regardless of what I'm doing." ▶

Liz Cambage

Basketball

If she ever decided to throw in the towel on her sporting career, Liz Cambage could easily go down the route of modelling or even singing. Despite battling a chest cold when she flew into Sydney for our Women in Sport shoot, the basketballer's vocal prowess was evident as she sang along to her current obsession: Ariana Grande.

Not that she plans on quitting basketball anytime soon.

The WNBA's current record holder for the highest single-game score, the 28-year-old is a hot commodity both in the US women's basketball league and China's WCBA, while she also proudly represents Australia as an integral part of our national team.

Her rise to the top has been nothing short of meteoric. In fact, she's still pinching herself when it comes to just how much she's accomplished over the past decade.

"I never imagined any of this," she insists as she sits down with Foxtel magazine after dazzling us all during her photo shoot. "When I started playing basketball, it was as a social thing – a way to make friends. The next thing I know, I'm living in Canberra at the Australian Institute of Sport and from that I made the Australian Opals. Then, at 19 years old, I was drafted and living in America playing in the WNBA. It's been pretty quick. The past 10 years have been insane. I'm very lucky."

Exuding confidence as she steps in front of the camera, much of her statuesque 203cm frame on display in barely there shorts and a crop top, Cambage has clearly grown to not only accept but love every inch of her body. Though that wasn't always the case.

"I've always been fine with [baring] my body; I grew up in a house where naked bodies weren't sexualised. I remember growing up at the pool and going to the beach and just being a nudie rudie, and it kind of stuck with me for life," she recalls fondly. "But growing up here in Australia, I didn't really feel beautiful until I moved to America when I was 19.

"I always thought that, to be beautiful, I had to be white with blue eyes and blonde hair and skinny. It wasn't till I moved over there, where women with curves were celebrated and embraced, that I really got to love my little bit of booty and my stomach and my boobs."

> "The past 10 years have been insane. I'm very lucky"
> — Liz Cambage

Cambage has been criticised in the past by those in the industry for being "too much" – too loud, too aggressive, too opinionated – but spend the day with her and you'll quickly agree she's just enough. Fun, energetic, affable, intelligent, self-assured, she's not only a great role model but she's someone you want to be best friends with. Receiving such negative feedback, she admits, was a tough pill to swallow.

"I tried to be a fragment of me when I was being told I was too loud or too opinionated and I needed to rein it back, but at the end of the day that's not me; I'm turbo all the time," she says. "I tend to forget I'm a role model; I don't think of myself like that. I'm just someone living their life, being me. And if me being me is getting other people to be themselves, well, that's pretty cool."

The athlete has a leg-up on the other stars of our shoot, with women's basketball having long established itself as a force to be reckoned with both in this country and abroad. Citing the likes of Lauren Jackson, Penny Taylor and Michele Timms as the sportswomen she looked up to early in her career, she acknowledges the role they played in helping pave the way for her.

She also praises her mum and grandmother for the sacrifices they made that allowed her to pursue her dreams in the first place.

"I was raised by a single mother and she's a CEO. She's always been a big inspiration to me; she will always be my number one," she says with a smile. "If it wasn't for my mum working her butt off in every job and my nana getting up at 5.30 in the morning to take me to practice, then to do it again after school, there's no way I would be here. They're my rocks – I'm very lucky to have them."

As for the defining moment in her career, Cambage has a few. There's the aforementioned highest-scoring game in the WNBA and being the first woman to dunk at the Olympics in 2012. Then there's being ejected in the gold-medal game at the Commonwealth Games in 2018 for talking back to the ref.

"That's pretty me," she says with a laugh. "It's iconic!" ▶

Jess Yates & Tara Rushton

FOX SPORTS presenters

When Jess Yates was a little girl, her mum would tell her she could do anything she wanted.

"But that actually wasn't true, because when you looked out in the workplace, there weren't women everywhere," the FOX SPORTS personality points out.

With Yates the first woman to host V8 Supercars coverage in Australia, the situation is very different for her six-year-old daughter, Isabella.

"Her whole life, it's been really normal to see Mummy at the car racing," Yates reflects. "She can see women front and centre in sport."

FOX SPORTS football host Tara Rushton is also thrilled with how far women have come, especially with the Matildas recently securing pay parity.

"Girls growing up, they can now think, 'Hey, I can actually go and do this and I'll be able to support myself,'" she says.

Like many working parents, both seasoned presenters must juggle family with their professional lives, which often require them to travel around Australia. For Yates, finding the balance between family and her hosting commitments is the hardest part of the job.

Covering the Supercars, NRL, surfing and cricket, she's been guilty of pushing herself too hard – as she discovered when she came down with pneumonia last year and had to take two weeks off.

"That was forced leave!" she says with a laugh. "I love what I do so I'm not going to slow down. I just have to take better care of myself."

Rushton also believes in working hard, having learnt to do so from her parents, who have collectively served 62 years in the Royal Australian Navy. When she received negative feedback in her first year at FOX SPORTS – with

> — Tara Rushton

"It actually made me hungrier," she explains.

With the Tokyo Olympics looming, Rushton predicts a big year for the Matildas as they vie for a medal. In Supercars, Yates says 2020 is all about who can beat Scott McLaughlin, with Erebus Motorsports' David Reynolds her dark horse: "We saw flashes of brilliance from him through the [2019] season. [The team] just couldn't quite find the consistency in the end."

Kelli Underwood & Sarah Jones

FOX FOOTY presenters

Pioneers in their industry, they paved the way for female sports commentators on television and proudly continue to dominate in their profession.

> "Sport was in my family so it feels like it's in my blood"
> — Kelli Underwood

But if you'd told them even 10 years ago they would one day be covering women's sport on TV, they wouldn't have believed you.

"It's amazing," Underwood enthuses. "I never really got into the industry thinking I would ever cover women's sport. I remember, in 2012, one of the newspapers named [race horse] Black Caviar Sportswoman of the Year! Now we all recognise Sam Kerr, we all recognise Ellyse Perry, we all recognise Tayla Harris – it really is unbelievable."

Though herself an inspiration to many as the first woman to commentate the AFL on radio and TV, Underwood credits her late grandmother with inspiring and nurturing her love of sport.

"She devoured sport!" the mum-of-one reflects, a smile spreading across her face. "She'd sit up watching the French Open at three o'clock in the morning. The family get-togethers – the barbies, the roasts at her house – always revolved around Pat Cash playing a tennis match or a football game, or the [Adelaide] Crows playing. Sport was in my family so it feels like it's in my blood."

It's a similar story for Jones, whose upbringing in country Victoria instilled in her a passion for all things sport.

"My grandfather [AFL legend Jack Jones] played football for Essendon and my uncles and my father all played a lot of football, my brothers played football, I played netball and tennis," she recalls. "Playing it, watching it, being involved in community sport is really where that love came from."

Having tragically lost her mother when she was just eight, Jones – the eldest of five – was forced to grow up faster than most. However, she is quick to heap praise on her father, who stepped up to care for his young family.

"He was an amazing role model – to handle that at such a young age is something I certainly appreciated at the time, but I appreciate it so much more now as a parent," the mum-of-two says. "I talk to Dad 100 times a day. He's had a central role in fostering my love of sport and just being a supportive part of my journey."

With women's sport gaining popularity and pay parity finally coming into play, Underwood and Jones have high hopes for its continued momentum.

"Any help we can give the girls out there being trailblazers is fantastic," says Jones. "We're heading in the right direction and that's a good thing." ▶

Charlotte Caslick

Rugby sevens

Too pretty. Too tanned. Too many ribbons in her hair. When one of Australia's champion athletes, Charlotte Caslick, first made her mark playing rugby union for Australia in 2013, she copped it.

Apparently, she didn't fit the stereotypical mould of a professional female football player, whatever that was – and sometimes she still doesn't.

"People didn't really accept that girls could wear ribbons and be tanned, quite girly like I was," admits the soon-to-be 25-year-old, who has been described as the best rugby sevens player on the planet.

"I copped a bit of flak for the way I looked when I first started. [Some] people think that we should look and act a certain way just because we play a contact sport. And some people still don't believe we play rugby when we tell them. But you don't have to fit an old stereotype of what toughness should look like."

This wasn't the sports star's first rodeo when it came to shaking off nasty remarks and bullying. The former Brisbane State High School student – who excelled in sprinting, hockey, athletics and touch football – often ran and trained with the boys, marking her as a target for some of her peers in the schoolyard.

"I had a lot of friends who were boys at school, but a lot of the girls didn't take it very well – they weren't nice at times," she admits. "It was tough in a way. The rugby added to it, but it wasn't the reason for a lot of the stuff. It is what it is and we have such a great group of girls playing rugby to influence [others] to play now. It's really cool to see that, while they might not have accepted it when I was playing back then, things have changed so much."

Meeting Caslick, she strikes you as a glass-half-full kind of girl, shrugging off any past negativity surrounding women in her sport and zeroing in on the future – a trait no doubt inherited from her stoic nana, Beryl Caslick.

"My grandad passed away when I was seven, but even before that, she was one of the strongest people I knew," Caslick says. "She's a hard woman who worked hard and tells it how it is; she doesn't leave anything to the imagination. She's always told us to speak our truth and do whatever we wanted to do – to bugger whatever everyone else thinks."

> "We have such a great group of girls playing rugby"
> — Charlotte Caslick

While Caslick unleashes her competitive side on the footy field, off it she is a quietly spoken high achiever who remains modest about her accomplishments, including her proudest triumph: gold at the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Olympics.

"A lot of people that I find inspiring are always nice people," she reveals, listing teammate Emilee Cherry and iconic Aussie athlete Cathy Freeman as sportswomen she admires. "I am definitely competitive, but I do try to be humble with our successes because, in sevens, it's very easy to go from feeling on top of the world to not in just a couple of minutes, so it does teach you not to get too far ahead of yourself."

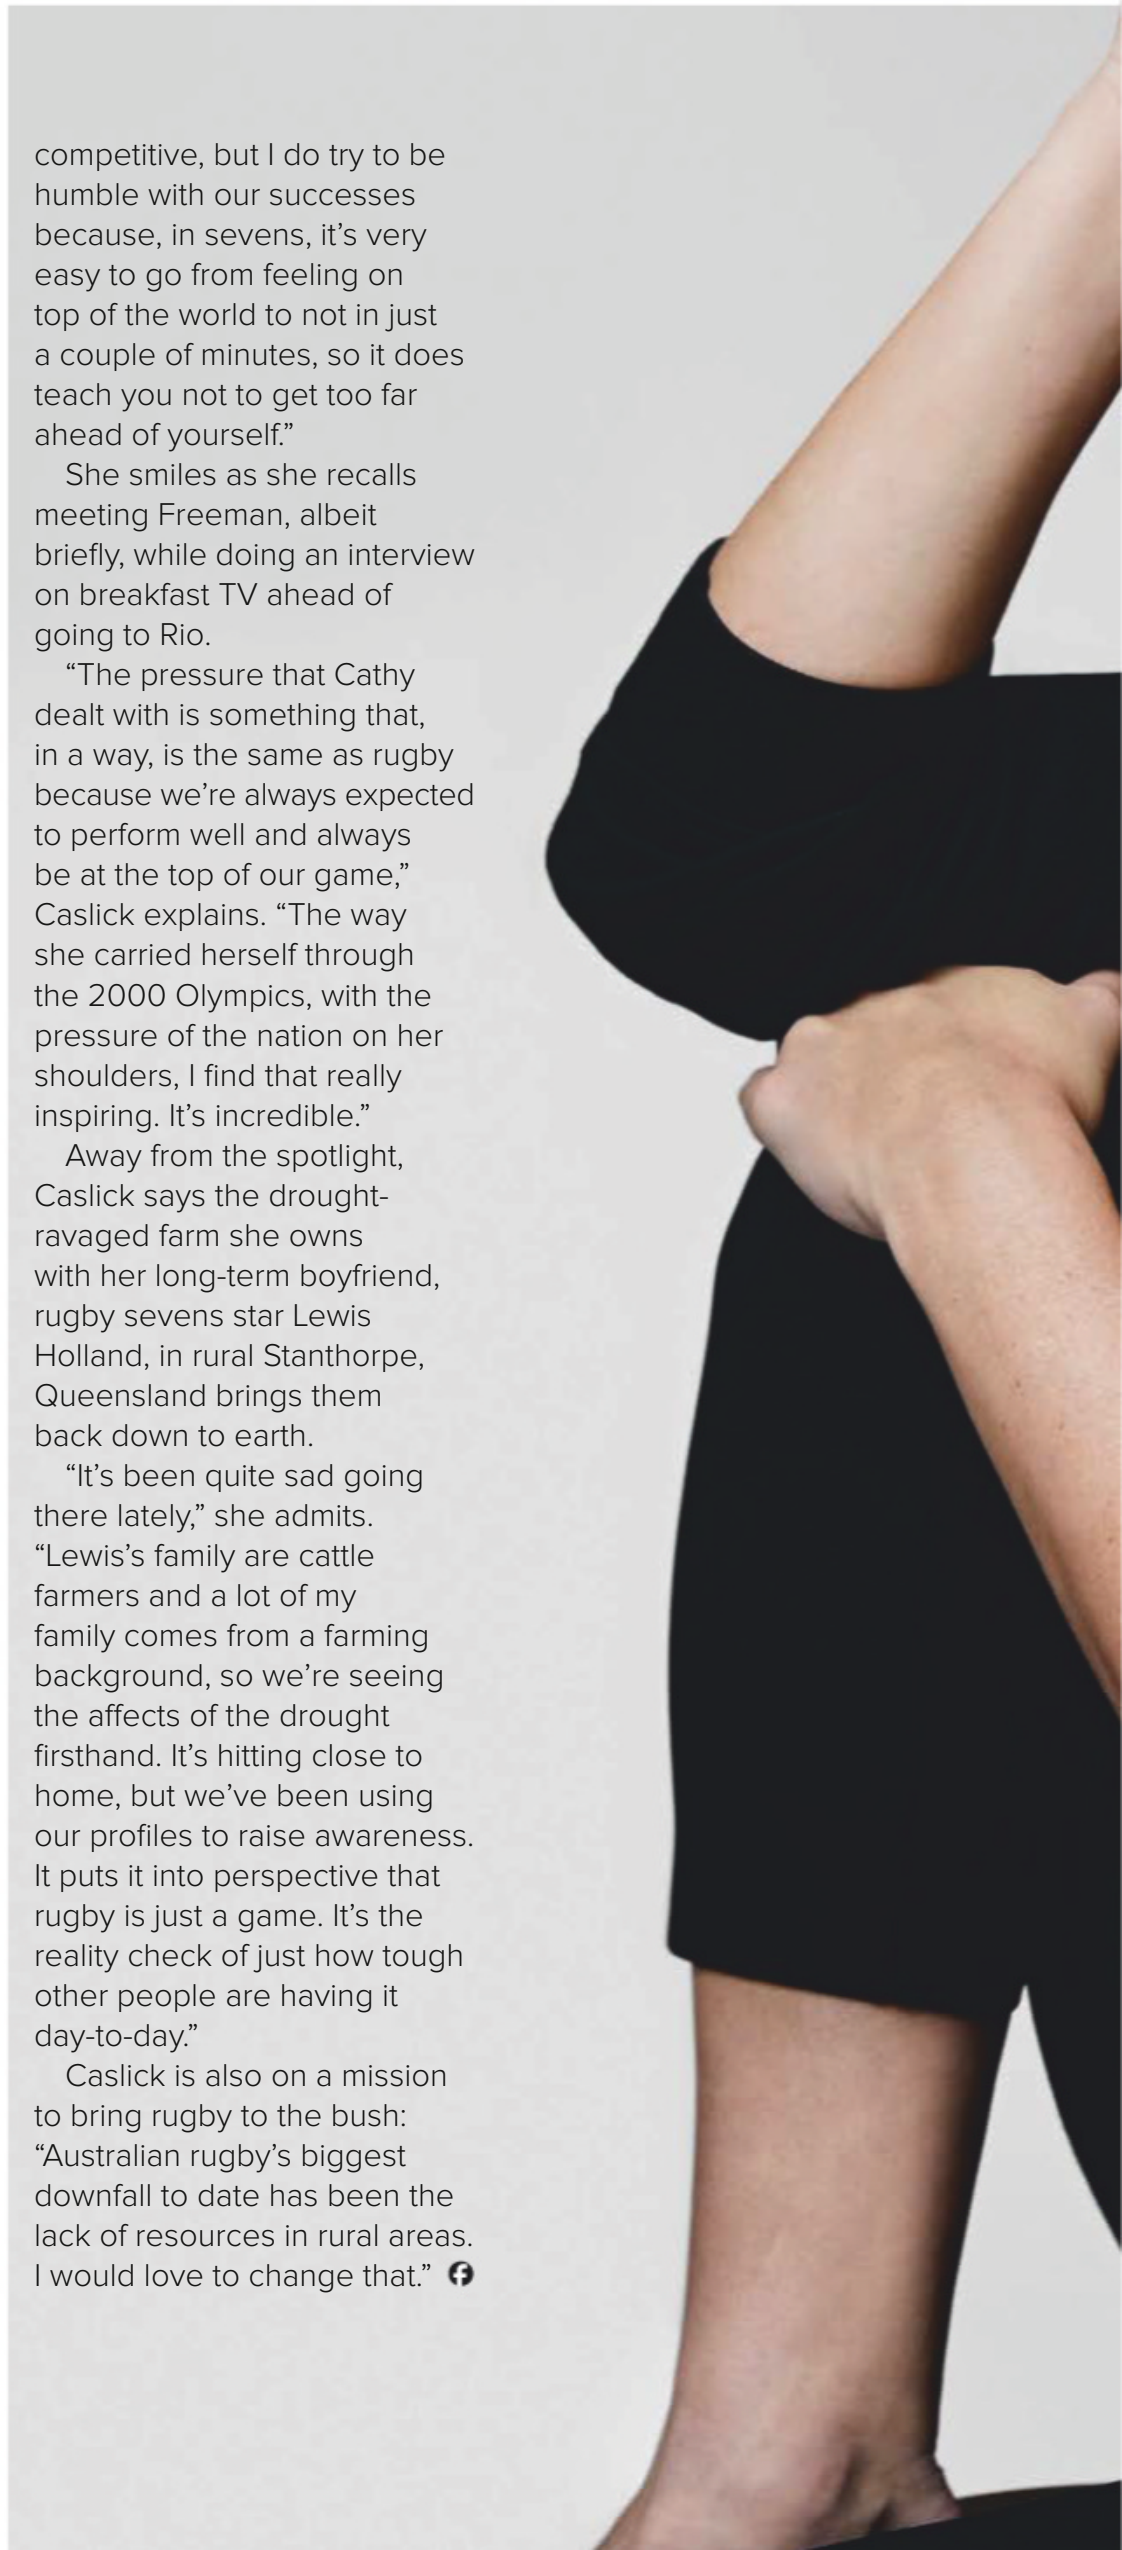

She smiles as she recalls meeting Freeman, albeit briefly, while doing an interview on breakfast TV ahead of going to Rio.

"The pressure that Cathy dealt with is something that, in a way, is the same as rugby because we're always expected to perform well and always be at the top of our game," Caslick explains. "The way she carried herself through the 2000 Olympics, with the pressure of the nation on her shoulders, I find that really inspiring. It's incredible."

Away from the spotlight, Caslick says the drought-ravaged farm she owns with her long-term boyfriend, rugby sevens star Lewis Holland, in rural Stanthorpe, Queensland brings them back down to earth.

"It's been quite sad going there lately," she admits. "Lewis's family are cattle farmers and a lot of my family comes from a farming background, so we're seeing the affects of the drought firsthand. It's hitting close to home, but we've been using our profiles to raise awareness. It puts it into perspective that rugby is just a game. It's the reality check of just how tough other people are having it day-to-day."

Caslick is also on a mission to bring rugby to the bush: "Australian rugby's biggest downfall to date has been the lack of resources in rural areas. I would love to change that."

EXPRESS FROM THE US

A WORLD of possibility

A lot has changed since we last entered Westworld. From the new locations to the new faces with new objectives, we lift the lid on the latest instalment in this must-see fantasy series

WESTWORLD (s3) Stream or watch from March 16, Mondays at 12pm, ENCORE at 8.30pm on FOX SHOWCASE [115]

Just shy of two years since the second season of Westworld hit screens, the fantasy drama returns to FOX SHOWCASE this month for its highly anticipated third outing. The wait has indeed been long but, boy, has it been worth it.

One of the biggest HBO offerings since the juggernaut that was Game of Thrones, Westworld burst into life in 2016 and quickly captured the attention and interest of audiences all over the world.

The captivating premise (based on Michael Crichton's 1973 film of the same name) centred on the android 'hosts' of a Wild West theme park – Westworld – who were used for the entertainment and depravity of human guests. However, when the hosts started having memories of their past incarnations, developing consciousness, they soon began to revolt against their oppressors.

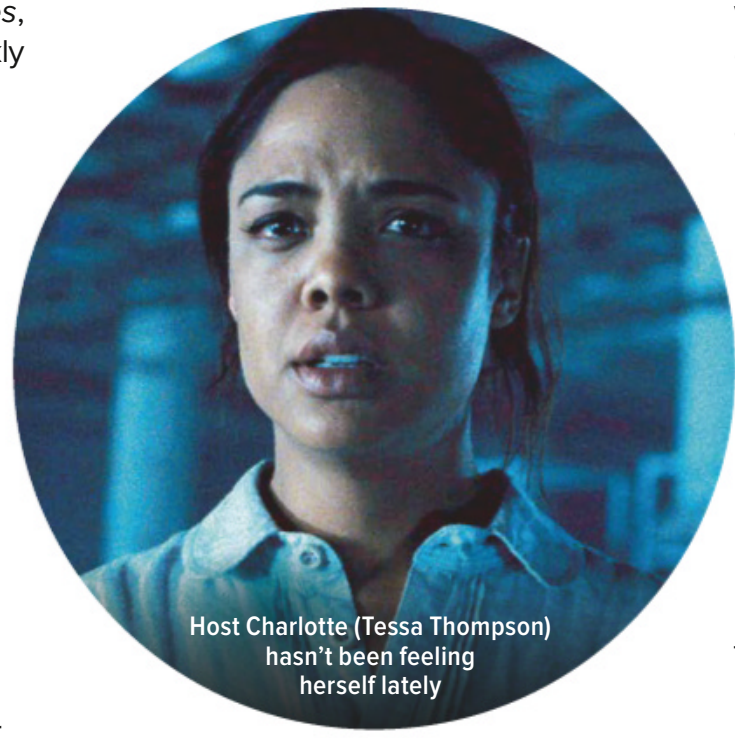

With so much still to digest from the season two finale that sets the scene for what's to come, we break down everything you need to know about your favourite returning US series of 2020.

Where we left off

Okay, bear with us – this is complicated. The final episode, titled The Passenger, found Dolores (Evan Rachel Wood, pictured main) finally leading her flock to the long-talked-about Valley Beyond.

But sadly not everyone made it, after Clementine (Angela Sarafyan) – whose code had been altered to enable her to turn her fellow hosts against one another – rendered the scene a bloody battlefield.

Hosts Maeve (Thandie Newton), Hector (Rodrigo Santoro) and Armistice (Ingrid Bolsø Berdal) all died valiant deaths, going out in a blaze of glory, while Lee (Simon Quarterman) and Elsie (Shannon Woodward) were among the human casualties.

Host Charlotte (Tessa Thompson) hasn't been feeling herself lately

But Dolores – dubbed 'Halores', as she was inhabiting the body of Charlotte Hale (Tessa Thompson) at the time – did manage to survive, as did Bernard (Jeffrey Wright) and security officer Stubbs (Luke Hemsworth), who it was hinted is actually a host himself.

Fortunately, Dolores was in possession of a number of hosts' core control units – called 'pearls' – when we caught up with her in a not-too-distant future at a house created by Ford (Anthony Hopkins), meaning she can resurrect a number of her friends and allies at her whim, as she did herself.

What we can expect next

"We are the authors of our stories now," Dolores declared in the closing moments of season two, as the newly rebuilt host parted ways with Bernard in what appeared to be the "real world".

She also didn't hold back, telling her companion in no uncertain terms that they were fighting on opposing teams, uttering the ominous words: "You'll try to stop me. Both of us will probably die. But our kind will have endured."

So what exactly does that mean for this latest season? Well, one thing is certain: we're not in Sweetwater anymore.

Teaser trailers have revealed snippets of Dolores in a futuristic Los Angeles, as well as Maeve and Hector battling the Nazis in a WWII setting, but that doesn't rule out the possibility of finding other familiar faces in additional 'worlds' down the track. ▶

"I feel like I'm a little kid again, playing cops and robbers on the biggest scale possible"

– Aaron Paul

Previews Wright: "I'm excited to explore the idea of hosts as guests, as Bernard and Dolores are guests now. The mirror reflection seems that it's turned on this new [incarnation of] Westworld, and that is the human world. I think the exploration now of [pretending to be] human inside this world as hosts could be rich territory."

Showrunner Jonathan Nolan divulges that since the characters have infinite lifespans, the thought of that weighs heavily on their minds.

"I think it's a radical shift," Nolan says. "What's compelling and appealing about these characters is that they're not human. As we said in the show, humans are bound by the same loops the hosts are – in some ways even smaller. You couldn't expect human characters to withstand and survive the kind of story that we're telling. The hosts have a different version of mortality, a different outlook. I think, clearly with Dolores as she's laid out, there is a longer view here, a larger set of goals. They're existential. They span aeons."

The new faces

The most notable addition to the cast this season is former Breaking Bad star Aaron Paul (pictured main) as construction worker Caleb, whose story will be closely intertwined with Dolores's.

According to Entertainment Weekly, "[Caleb] has a strong impact on Dolores who, along with other hosts, experiences major 'culture shock' now that she's in the real world."

Interestingly, Paul was initially sought out to join the cast in season one, but the in-demand actor unfortunately couldn't make it work logistically. When he was approached again, he simply couldn't turn down the opportunity a second time, despite being similarly tied down.

"I was stressing out because I had to turn Westworld down the first time around," he explains. "I just watched it and thought to myself, 'My god, this is the perfect show.' I couldn't miss out on this second opportunity.

"This show is so unbelievably ambitious and I walk onto these sets and my jaw is on the floor," he continues. "I feel like I'm a little kid again, playing cops and robbers on the biggest scale possible."

He adds that his character provides a new voice for the series: "[Caleb] has a point of view outside of the park. He takes the audience outside of Westworld and what it's like to live amongst the people who created [it], and sort of where we're at as a society."

Triple Emmy-winner Aaron Paul portrays blue-collar worker Caleb

Adds Nolan: "Aaron's character will challenge Dolores's notions about the nature of humanity. He's the type of person who doesn't get to go to Westworld."

Also joining the cast is Scott Mescudi, aka rapper Kid Cudi, who appears as Francis – seen donning a fetching orange prison jumpsuit in the trailer – alongside Vincent Cassel (Jason Bourne) as an unnamed villain, as well as Lena Waithe (Ready Player One) and former NFL star Marshawn Lynch (Brooklyn Nine-Nine), both of whom seem to be robbing a bank with Caleb in early teasers.

Though not an entirely new face, another character we will be reintroduced to in season three is Charlotte Hale. Given Dolores is now back in her original host body – having killed the real Charlotte and assumed her identity in order to leave Westworld undetected – who exactly is this new Charlotte?

"We have a very diabolical arc for her planned out," hints co-creator Lisa Joy. "Part of the fun for the character will be self-realisation. She will be realising the things we know about who she is."

The beginning of the end?

With season three being the shortest instalment to date – just eight episodes compared to the usual 10 – could the show be nearing its conclusion?

Absolutely not. While the series has not yet been renewed, Nolan and Joy have deals in place for potential fourth and fifth seasons. They've also disclosed that they've known since day one how the story will eventually end.

"We have an ending in mind; we've had it from the pilot [episode]," Joy says. "It's very emotional, I think. I can't tell you exactly when that ending will come... but I think, for every season, what we try to do is tell a chapter of the story that gives you closure and then opens a door to a new chapter... The overarching question of the series is: what will become of this new life form? So I feel it would be irresponsible to not have an end goal in mind."

A self-professed fan of the series, Paul adds that he was let in on the secret of how the rest of the series will play out.

"I sat down with [Nolan and Joy] and they pitched me this character and they pitched me the broad strokes of the arc of the rest of the series," he explains. "It is insane."

UNIVERSAL TRUTHS

Neil deGrasse Tyson invites you on a magical journey through space and time in the new 13-part science docuseries Cosmos: Possible Worlds

COSMOS: POSSIBLE WORLDS Stream or watch from March 9, Mondays at 8.30pm on National Geographic [613]

Astrophysicist Neil deGrasse Tyson is about to disclose a nugget of insider information to Foxtel magazine about Cosmos: Possible Words, an illuminating factual series that transports viewers to uncharted territories.

It concerns the fact that he hosts the program from a space-age chair aboard the Ship of the Imagination, a virtual spacecraft that takes us to far-flung galaxies and across 13.8 billion years.

"I'll tell you a little secret," he whispers. "That chair is completely uncomfortable. It looks great, sort of like a captain's chair or a throne, but it's very smooth and slippery. I have to constantly press my feet against the ground to keep myself sitting up straight in the chair, otherwise I would just slither off."

Ann Druyan has been a part of the Cosmos legacy for 40 years

Flawed furnishings aside, he says there are fortunately no acting skills required as, after decades in the field, Tyson has a profound understanding of the cosmos.

"It was fun imagining the Big Bang and exploding stars and planets, and these journeys through exotic places, because I already know what they look like," he muses. "I don't have to respond to a director's cue when they say, 'Look surprised.' I picture it in my head and you get the right reaction."

Cosmos: Possible Worlds uses special effects, animation and re-enactments to draw an interstellar picture of some of the boldest events in the universe.

An instant phenomenon when it burst onto screens in 1980, its genesis Cosmos: A Personal Voyage – originally aired in the US on PBS (Public Broadcasting Service) – deciphered science in layman's terms in a way that hadn't been done before, reaching a global audience of 500 million.

Presented by astronomer Carl Sagan, who co-wrote the Emmy-winning show with his future wife Ann Druyan and astrophysicist Steven Soter, it covered a huge landscape, journeying through constellations, planets and galaxies – with Sagan's illuminating words offering a human perspective.

Tyson recalls how Sagan graced the cover of Time magazine – billed as the "Showman of Science" – and gave scientists a place in the limelight.

While Sagan died in 1996, a sequel – Cosmos: A Spacetime Odyssey – aired in 2014, thanks in part to its executive producer, Family Guy creator Seth MacFarlane, who was greatly influenced by the original series as a child.

Co-writer of all three incarnations, Druyan says the show combines curiosity and wonder in equal measure.

"Cosmos is the campfire experience that we have been having for hundreds of thousands of years, but with better special effects," she explains.

"There's a shamanistic aspect to it: let's all sit together and hear the stories of the ancestors, of where we have been and where we might go. The only difference is that it's the generations of scientific searchers who have provided the narrative and the great dreams of what's to come."

Sagan's insight lives on in Possible Worlds through quotes – poignant, prophetic statements about the future of humanity and our effect on the environment.

Prepare to be awed by this visual-effects extravaganza

"He saw what was coming and he knew what we needed to survive," marvels Druyan. "He is woven throughout Cosmos because his wisdom and example are what we need."

One of the messages of Cosmos is that it's not too late to change the future.

"Now is a moment of awakening," reflects Druyan. "Our species is facing the urgent need to adapt. Can we learn to cherish the things we need to survive – air, water, climate, our environment – more than we love money? Are we capable of such radical change in the midst of an emergency?

"It has to matter what's true. And the people of the world have to demonstrate they will settle for no less."

Tyson agrees that the series presents a call to action to ensure the future of humanity, declaring: "It's a celebration of curiosity, a celebration of what it is to be human, a celebration of what is best in us, and an attempt to summon that to empower us to be better shepherds of the civilisation that is at risk from our own greed, our own science illiteracy, where science is fundamental to our survival.

"Cosmos has been and continues to be a call to your intellect, a call to your emotion, in the interest of your survival and in the interest of what it is to thrive."

Neil deGrasse Tyson takes us to places we never dared to venture

Andrew Winter knows how to get the best price for a renovated home

Home sweet home?

Real estate guru Andrew Winter takes us through one of the most challenging and unusual renovations to date as Selling Houses Australia returns

"We have some really funky, unusual [houses] this time around"

– Andrew Winter

They say that 13 is an unlucky number – but that's fortunately not the case when it comes to Selling Houses Australia.

Returning to screens this month for its 13th outing, the series is riding high. A perennial favourite with audiences and critics, it's not only the worthy families, astounding renovations and nailbiting outcomes that keep us coming back for more, but the trio at the helm: real estate agent Andrew Winter, designer Shaynna Blaze and landscaper Charlie Albone.

With the machine well and truly oiled after more than a decade on air, the three experts are able to really enjoy themselves – and with a great mix of the usual weird, wonderful and 'Whoa, seriously?!' homes vying for their touch this time around, it's just as well.

One such abode in desperate need of a makeover this season is a property in Crows Nest, on Sydney's North Shore. Situated on the corner of a busy street and formerly operating as a lifestyle and health food store, the building provided more than a few challenges for all involved.

Winter took Foxtel magazine on a guided tour of the home on reveal day, filling us in on the intricacies of the renovation along the way.

Tell us a bit about this house and the state it was in when the team arrived...

For Selling Houses Australia, this was not a normal house – because it's not a house. When it was originally built in the late 1800s it was clearly designed to be a corner shop, with the classic flat above it. When our family bought it, they ran their business from the shopfront and lived in the alternative parts of the house. But then that evolved to wanting to run a cafe as well, so the whole ground floor was going to become commercial premises. When they tried to sell it, the building was primed to be a cafe in an area where there isn't really much demand.

So the biggest challenge was converting it back into a house?

Exactly. There's nothing you can do to stop the facade looking like what it was designed for – you'll either have a buyer embrace that or you won't. When you renovate a building like this you always have a plethora of complications with planning and zoning and DAs [development applications], so that's another big issue that had been putting buyers off before. You see, that's why people don't want it – there's a lady staring through the window right now! She's having a good old look because she thinks it's a shop. I mean, it wasn't even a subtle look through the window; it was a proper gawk! [Laughs]

Is there anything you would have done differently?

Layout-wise, no. We've done absolutely everything to maximise value. There was unused space that's become an ensuite/second bathroom and there was an unnecessarily huge bedroom that has now become two. We've opened up the space at the rear, we've included a proper internal laundry and the double garage that was partly single garage, partly storage, is now one big open two-car space, which in an area like this is absolutely prime.

What are some of your highlights from this season?

We have, architecturally, one of the most hideous-looking houses north of Brisbane – god it's ugly! Whether it sells or not, you'll have to wait and see. And we have a property in Western Australia which is in the middle of the Perth hills, really rural, and yet you can walk to the local pub and the local shop – how unique is that! So we have some really funky, unusual ones this time around.

Does it feel like you've been doing this show for 13 seasons?

You have to remember that Shaynna had teenage school children at home. Charlie, well, I think he was living in the back of his ute as a single man with a dog! And I had screaming babies, so it was a very long time ago that we started. Yes, it does feel like a long time ago.

Are you still loving the show as much as when you began?

I don't want a proper job is the answer, so please may it continue! I reckon season 20 would be okay; I'd probably be happy to knock it on the head then.

Why isn't season 13 unlucky for Selling Houses Australia?

It will only be unlucky if we don't have a 14!

FANNING THE FLAMES

When a house fire kills a mother and her daughters, the ‘perfect’ husband falls under suspicion

DEADWATER FELL Stream or watch from March 12, Thursdays at 8.30pm on BBC First [116]

There’s a distinct Broadchurch feel to the intriguing four-part drama Deadwater Fell, which, like the popular crime series, is set in a small fictional British village.

At the heart of the tight-knit community of Kirkdarroch in Scotland is a likeable and respected couple – GP Tom Kendrick (David Tennant) and his primary-school teacher wife, Kate (Anna Madeley).

With a nice house and car, as well as three pretty young daughters, they appear to have it all, particularly to their friends – Kate’s teaching-assistant colleague, Jess (Cush Jumbo), and her policeman partner, Steve (Matthew McNulty).

However, when a fire ravages the Kendricks’ home one night, Kate and the children perish and Tom is rushed to hospital. He survives, but the police investigation suggests something is not right and suspicion falls on Tom. Is he really the respectable man everyone thought he was?

Revelations about others in the community also emerge as facades are peeled away and intrigue mounts.

“It’s a really hard show to talk about or even define,” says Tennant, who has gone from playing a detective in Broadchurch to being a suspect in Deadwater Fell. “It has all the trappings of a crime thriller, but it’s not really that. It’s a psychological drama but it’s more complex.”

The prolific actor adds that creator Daisy Coulam has written the limited series in such a way that “it keeps pulling the rug out from under you”, heightening the sense of mystery.

“Just when you think you’ve figured out who the characters are and what they’re doing to each other, there’s another set of left turns that confound you once again,” he explains. “It’s so compelling and ambiguous... Tom and Kate are like a power couple. But not every marriage is that straightforward and they have some serious fractures in theirs, which are revealed piece by piece. But all the characters are so full of contradictions and secrets.”

The drama will play out in a series of telling flashbacks, gradually giving viewers insight into the characters’ lives before the devastating fire.

“You’ll revisit scenes in episode four that you saw briefly in episode one, but you’ll see an extra five seconds, which suddenly makes things seem very different,” Tennant reveals.

The charismatic Scotsman has made a career out of diversity in his choice of roles, from his quirky take on Doctor Who’s titular character to his recent turn as the outrageous fallen angel Crowley in Good Omens, Neil Gaiman’s TV adaptation of the fantasy book he co-wrote with Terry Pratchett.

“I’ve always been quite promiscuous with genres and types of parts. I like variety and there’s something appealing about characters that are complicated and unknowable from an acting point of view,” Tennant reflects, adding: “But there’s no real tactical thought process to that... If you get a nice script and it connects with you, then you just want to be part of it.”

That allure was definitely there for Deadwater Fell.

“I read the first episode and was intrigued and compelled by these characters,” he says. “I didn’t feel like I quite knew what everyone’s story was and that of course makes you want to know what happens next. Each of these characters has so much going on subtextually. In episode one, we can only imagine what that might be and then all the secrets they are living with are slowly revealed to us through the four episodes. Whatever you think the story is, [after the first episode] it will confound, compel and surprise you.”

MURDER, MYSTERY & MAYHEM

Delve into some of the most shocking and intriguing true-crime cases of recent times with a wealth of investigations taking centrestage this month

Truth is often stranger than fiction. But when it comes to crime, it's scarier, too. This month, Foxtel's Investigation Discovery (ID) and Crime + Investigation channels take viewers deep inside some of the world's most notorious cases.

MADELEINE McCANN: AN ID MURDER MYSTERY

Stream* or watch from Tuesday March 31 at 8.30pm on Investigation Discovery (ID) [616]

▶ A dream beach holiday in Portugal became a nightmare for the McCann family and created a mystery that continues to confound police in two countries. On May 3, 2007, British doctors Gerry and Kate McCann left their three children sleeping in their resort apartment in Praia da Luz to dine with friends at a restaurant just 50m away. They checked on the kids several times, but when Kate returned at 10pm, Madeleine was gone. It was just nine days before her fourth birthday and Maddie has not been seen since.

What to expect: This well-crafted documentary is a mix of re-enactments, archival footage and interviews with investigators.

Why you'll be intrigued: Just like the 2014 case of toddler William Tyrrell, who vanished from his foster grandmother's frontyard in Kendall, NSW, Maddie's disappearance has gripped – and terrified – the world.

Our final verdict: Did a stranger whisk a sleeping Maddie from her bed to sell her to child sex traffickers? Maddie's disappearance reminds parents that little ones can be snatched in the blink of an eye.

ROBERT DURST: AN ID MURDER MYSTERY

Stream* or watch from March 10, Tuesdays at 8.30pm on Investigation Discovery (ID) [616]

▶ In 1982, real estate heir Robert Durst reported his wife, Kathleen, missing. Decades later Durst admitted to killing his neighbour, Morris Black, but, after claiming it was self-defence, he was convicted of a lesser charge for disposing of Black's body. Now he's currently facing trial for the shooting death of his friend and confidant, Susan Berman. Prosecutors claim he murdered Berman to prevent her from revealing the truth about his wife.

What to expect: When a man's wife goes missing, a close female friend is shot dead and a neighbour's body parts turn up in the sea, you'd have to ask: is he desperately unlucky – or a cold-blooded killer?

Why you'll be intrigued: Durst's family was part of New York's social elite and he was in a position to have it all.

Jackie Malton inspired DCI Tennison in Prime Suspect

Homicide's Elite focuses on the cases of two Atlanta detectives

Our final verdict: Witnessing his mother's suicide when he was seven would have caused lasting psychological scars.

HOMICIDE'S ELITE

Stream* or watch from March 5, Thursdays at 9.30pm on Crime + Investigation [609]

▶ What to expect: Insights from retired Atlanta detectives David Quinn and Vince Velazquez, who worked on hundreds of cases during their 15-year partnership.

The clues to look out for: When a single mother's body is found in the woods, a Nike tennis shoe footprint could prove key to solving the mystery.

HOMICIDE CITY

Stream* or watch from March 20, Fridays at 9.30pm on Investigation Discovery (ID) [616]

▶ What to expect: This series takes a deep dive into various murders that took place in Philadelphia. The first episode features the execution-style shooting of jewellers Richard and Patricia Zimmerman inside their heavily secured townhouse.

Why you'll be intrigued: The murder of this husband and wife in the upper-crust neighbourhood of Society Hill was troubling from the beginning, as there were no signs of forced entry and expensive jewellery in plain sight had been left behind.

The clues to look out for: Written in chalk outside the slain couple's daughter's house was: "I'm sorry please forgive me".

Our final verdict: It can take years of hard work, but police perseverance pays off.

THE REAL PRIME SUSPECT

Stream* or watch from March 17, Tuesdays at 9.30pm on Crime + Investigation [609]

▶ What to expect: Meet Jackie Malton – the real-life inspiration for Helen Mirren's Detective Chief Inspector Jane Tennison in BAFTA-winning TV series Prime Suspect. Malton rose through the ranks to become a Scotland Yard detective, resigning from the force in 1997 to pursue a career in script consultancy.

Why you'll be intrigued: Malton brings unique insight to each crime.

The clues to look out for: The former Metropolitan Police detective examines high-profile cases, interviewing the officers at the heart of each investigation.

Our final verdict: How these cases were solved without the benefits of today's technology is truly remarkable.

Winona Ryder

She grew up in the spotlight, battling anxiety and headlines that dubbed her crazy and weird. Now The Plot Against America actress sets the record straight on a few matters

THE PLOT AGAINST AMERICA Stream or watch EXPRESS from March 17, Tuesdays at 8.30pm on FOX SHOWCASE [115]

I was raised to believe that religion is a beautiful thing, but it's fiction. I've read the Bible. I think the Bible's a great book, but it's a novel. It's beautifully written and la-di-da, but people really took it the wrong way. My parents were great in the sense that they treated me like a human being when I was growing up. They showed me how beautiful things can be and how ugly they can be.

Everything that's been written about [me living in a commune growing up] has been wrong. I grew up in San Francisco. We shared 300 acres of land with other families, but it wasn't a commune. We had our own house and we went to school and it was normal.

We didn't have a lot of money, but the love compensation was amazing. My dad would make little things exciting, like bringing home Rolos. There's that saying: 'You find your family.' But I would have chosen them even if they weren't my parents. They're my best friends. They are madly in love, they're like teenagers. It's embarrassing sometimes. I've had relationships that haven't worked out. But when you have that as your gold [standard], and you know that's the way it should be... Oh man.

My parents were not hippies; they were writers. They were very active politically, but on the intellectual side, not on the 'taking drugs in a field and listening to the Grateful Dead' side. How I was raised was there were no rules – nothing like that. If I wanted to take a drug because I was in school and everybody was doing it, I could go to my parents and say, 'I really want to try this.' And they'd say, 'If you do this, okay, but this is what can happen to you.' They'd say, 'Don't get it in the streets because it could be really bad and make you freak out. Don't take it in a crowded place, because you'll panic.' They would tell me the effect of a drug and I'd end up not wanting to do it.

"There is a perception of me that I'm super-sensitive and fragile"

I definitely believe in legalising drugs. It does take the mystery away. It takes the money away, so suddenly there are no drug wars. If you're a junkie, you can get help easier. I'm not a drug user myself. I'm too little to take drugs – my body can't take it.

What I related to about Charlotte [in Mermaids] is that she's inconsistent. One day she'll be obsessed with Catholicism, but the next day she'll be obsessed with Joe the gardener. And the next day she'll want to be an American Indian. I had really been going through stuff like that. I would think, 'I'm going crazy! I don't know what I want! I don't know who I am!'

I wish I could unknow this, but there is a perception of me that I'm super-sensitive and fragile. And I am super-sensitive, and I don't think that that's a bad thing. To do what I do, I have to remain open. Even that word, anxious. It's a bad word. And so like all of these words – it's kind of what I tried to do with Girl, Interrupted and why I was so invested in that book and trying to get it made [into a movie]. My whole point was this happens to every girl, almost.

I'm so sick of people shaming women for being sensitive or vulnerable. It's so bizarre to me. [While promoting Stranger Things I was] getting asked a lot, 'You don't have kids, so how do you know how to act like a mother?' I know nothing could compare and I haven't had that experience, but when my niece was born, I felt like I would jump in front of a car and die for this little person I didn't even know yet.

There are definitely times when it feels like there's a real drought [for acting work]. It's like that line in The First Wives Club: 'There are only three ages for women in Hollywood: babe, district attorney and Driving Miss Daisy.' Or mother, which I am now [playing in Stranger Things]. But it's also hard to complain. You think about what's going on in the world right now. There are women who are facing much harder things all over the globe.

NICKELODEON KIDS' CHOICE AWARDS 2020 Stream or watch EXPRESS from Tuesday March 24 at 5.30pm on Nickelodeon [701]

Tom Cruise, Hugh Jackman and Sandra Bullock are just a few of the A-list celebrities who discovered Kermit the Frog was right when he sang, "It's not easy being green." The trio is among the long list of stars who have put vanity aside to be treated to a coating of green goo at the Nickelodeon Kids' Choice Awards.

Back when the inaugural show – hosted by Who's the Boss? actor Tony Danza, pop star Debbie Gibson and producers Brian Robbins and Dan Schneider – took place on a Los Angeles TV soundstage in 1988, kids voted for their favourite stars by mail.

Needless to say, much has changed since those humble beginnings. These days, votes are cast online, with millions of people tuning in from all over the world as a who's who of TV, music and cinema walk the orange carpet, claim their blimp trophies and risk being showered with that famously undiscerning green slime.

Ahead of this year's star-studded event, we look at some of the most surprising facts about the awards ceremony where the kids run the show.

That's how many Kids' Choice Awards the hugely popular cartoon SpongeBob SquarePants has won to date – more than any other TV series.

Top-secret

The recipe for Nickelodeon's signature green slime remains a closely guarded secret, but it's rumoured to contain a mixture of baby shampoo, milled wheat and jelly.

6000

The size of the audience in 1997 when Jim Carrey vowed "to adopt each and every one" of the excited kids as he delivered his hilarious acceptance speech.

Did you know?

Unlike traditional awards shows, the Nickelodeon event doesn't deliver the winners' names in boring old envelopes. Balloons, T-shirts, giant letters and even stickers stuck to people's backs have been used to announce the victors.

ONE

FOUR

The people – Leonardo DiCaprio, Michelle Obama, Justin Timberlake and Taylor Swift (pictured) – who have been honoured with The Big Help Award for services to the community and the environment.

Aussie girl

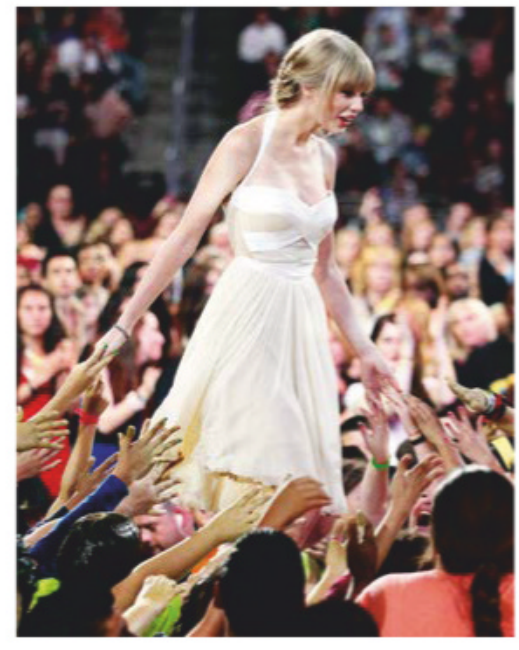

In 2017, Ellen DeGeneres enlisted young Australian surfing and skateboarding sensation Sabre Norris to cover the orange carpet for her talk show. Sabre interviewed Gwen Stefani, John Cena and Kevin Hart, offering them Tic Tacs, Vegemite and doughnuts.

$38

The tiny price tag on the rust-coloured slip dress – from her own fashion line – that Euphoria star Zendaya turned heads with in 2017, coordinating with the carpet.

Three

MARGARET'S TOP PICK

FROZEN II (PG)

AVAILABLE FROM MARCH 4

This sequel to the 2013 original reunites intrepid sisters Elsa (voiced by Idina Menzel) and Anna (Kristen Bell), along with Anna's trusty snowman companion Olaf (Josh Gad), ice harvester Kristoff (Jonathan Groff) – who, while in love with Anna, has trouble actually proposing to her – and Kristoff's loyal reindeer Sven (also Groff).

When Frozen II kicks off, three years have passed since the end of the first instalment. Still the queen of Arendelle, Elsa is troubled by siren calls that seem to come from the Enchanted Forest, a mysterious mist-enshrouded area that is entwined with the girls' family history. No-one enters the forest – which is ruled by the elemental spirits of Earth, fire, water and air – and no-one gets out.

When Arendelle is threatened by those spirits, Elsa is forced to confront them, accompanied by her sister, Kristoff, Olaf and Sven. She will need all her powers to combat the elements that are trying to destroy them.

With no magical powers of her own save for her indomitable spirit, Anna will play her part in resolving the long-simmering feud between the inhabitants of the forest, the Northuldra tribe, and their Arendelle neighbours.

Inspired by Hans Christian Andersen's The Snow Queen, this sequel is once again written by Jennifer Lee, who also returns to co-direct with Chris Buck. The songs of husband-and-wife team Robert Lopez and Kristen Anderson-Lopez add immeasurably to the enjoyment of this musical fantasy adventure.

I saw this at a screening with young children who took enormous delight in the slapstick antics of Olaf, but it's not just the little ones who are enamoured with this release. As the highest-grossing animated film of all time, audiences of all ages have embraced its spirit of loyalty, family and doing the right thing.

The evolution of a LEGEND

As a 10-day pop-up event celebrates his body of work, we take a look at the genius of director extraordinaire Steven Spielberg

50 YEARS OF SPIELBERG MOVIE MAGIC

Stream* or watch from Friday March 13 from 6am on Foxtel Movies Hits [409]

The compelling case for bestowing the title of 'world's greatest filmmaker' upon Steven Spielberg begins with a dodgy mechanical shark.

Jaws (1975) changed the face of modern cinema. Once the giant predator was done mauling the box office, studios shifted their focus to high-concept, big-budget films that were expected to reap serious profits, and the summer blockbuster was born.

But the then-27-year-old director was so badly scarred by Jaws' nightmare shoot that he suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder for several years afterwards.

Indeed, while the Orca boat from the film was docked at the Universal Studios backlot in Hollywood, Spielberg would go there regularly in search of solace.

"I would just sit in that boat alone for hours, just working through [my trauma], and I would shake. My hands would shake," he told Entertainment Weekly in 2016.

Spielberg's biggest problem was the erratic behaviour of his outsized star.

Although the mechanical great white shark performed relatively well on land, saltwater corroded its parts and the foam 'skin' would become sodden, giving the faux fish an unfortunate tendency to sink.

"Everything that could go wrong with the shark went wrong," said producer David Brown in documentary The Making of Jaws.

The film's schedule blew out to more than three months and the US$3.5 million budget doubled – at one point, the studio even threatened to shut down production.

Spielberg was forced to employ alternative techniques, such as composer John Williams' ominous, two-note theme, to suggest the creature's menacing presence – an approach that ultimately proved to his advantage.

"The film went from a Japanese Saturday matinee horror flick to more of [an Alfred] Hitchcock, the-less-you-see-the-more-you-get thriller," the director noted in 2008.

Made for US$7 million, Jaws went on to gross more than US$470 million worldwide.

A man who can turn a "great white turd" – as the crew dubbed the film – into box-office magic can do almost anything.

"The experience gave me complete freedom for the rest of my career," Spielberg acknowledges. "The amount of success the film enjoyed just gave me final cut, gave me the chance to tell my own stories."

He responded to that opportunity with Close Encounters of the Third Kind (1977), one of the greatest sci-fi movies of all time and one of the few projects he wrote as well as directed.

"[It] hits every note in an epic way," producer-director JJ Abrams (Star Trek, Star Wars: The Force Awakens) told Empire magazine for its Spielberg Takeover tribute issue. "It's funny, it's scary, it's romantic, it's thrilling. There's incredible spectacle and beautiful intimacy."

Spielberg's next film 1941, a big-budget WWII farce starring Dan Aykroyd and John Belushi, was a disappointment that tanked at the box office and was savaged by critics.

However, as a new decade dawned, he delivered a one-two knockout punch with Raiders of the Lost Ark (1981) and ET: The Extra-Terrestrial (1982).

While the success of those films – and their imitators – is often cited as the reason American film culture took a dive in the 1980s, Spielberg has since switched seamlessly back and forth between summer blockbusters and more serious fare, such as his 1985 adaptation of Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel The Color Purple, starring Whoopi Goldberg in her first lead role.

Likewise, his acclaimed holocaust movie Schindler's List (1993), which won seven Oscars, including Best Picture and Best Director, appeared in multiplexes the same year as his groundbreaking creature feature Jurassic Park.

More recently, the prolific filmmaker turned out the gripping Cold War drama Bridge of Spies (2015) and a sweet CGI adaptation of Roald Dahl's The BFG (2016).

Spielberg also helmed The Post (2017), a nuanced thriller based on true events of the '70s involving government secrets and freedom of the press, while he was orchestrating the visual effects for Ready Player One (2018) – a pleasantly nostalgic virtual thrill ride.

Of course, the 73-year-old's towering reputation is founded as much on the depth and breadth of his extraordinary body of work as it is on his almost uncanny ability to connect with his audience.

The visceral, realistic depiction of the D-day landings in Saving Private Ryan (1998), for which he won his second directing Academy Award, set a new benchmark for war movies, while his most controversial film Munich (2005) – starring Eric Bana – explored the 1972 massacre of Israeli Olympic athletes with similarly graphic intensity.

As for Hitchcock, upon seeing Jaws, he praised "the young Spielberg" as "the first one of us who doesn't see the proscenium arch [the structural border of a theatre stage]".

In other words, by freeing himself of the conventions that may have limited his predecessors, one might argue that Spielberg liberated modern cinema.

1 X-MEN: DARK PHOENIX

Stream* from Saturday March 7 or watch at 8.30pm on Movies Premiere [401]

When an accident during a space mission sees Jean Grey (Sophie Turner, pictured top) exposed to a dark, mysterious force, the telepathic superhero finds herself at odds with her fellow X-Men – all of whom are afraid of what she's now capable of.

As she struggles to contain her new powers while coming to terms with the blocked memories of her childhood that have now been unlocked, Jean finds herself in the firing line. After she goes to him seeking help, Erik Lehnsherr (Michael Fassbender) rallies the mutant refugees to hunt her down and exterminate her before more lives are lost.

Will Jean's salvation come in the form of Scott (Tye Sheridan), whose feelings for his friend have been escalating?

"Scott is the one person who sticks by her through Jean falling apart," Turner weighs in. "It's an amazing storyline for Scott."

After almost a decade portraying Sansa Stark in Game of Thrones, Turner – who first portrayed Jean Grey in 2016's X-Men: Apocalypse – reveals she felt "a lot of pressure" taking on such an established Marvel character, least of all in Dark Phoenix, which is one of the most iconic storylines in the X-Men universe.

"It's such an honour," she says. "For Simon [Kinberg, the writer and director] to trust me enough to take on that responsibility, I wanted to do the fans of the comics justice."

A new year, a new decade and magic milestones – the Formula 1 Australian Grand Prix is set to be a thriller

FORMULA 1 ROLEX AUSTRALIAN GRAND PRIX LIVE from Thursday March 12 at 12.30pm on FOX SPORTS 506

WORDS: STEWART BELL. PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES; DAIMLER AG; XPB/JAMES MOY PHOTOGRAPHY LTD

There's no shortage of special milestones for motor racing fans in 2020, with Formula 1's 70th-anniversary year marking the sport's 25th jaunt to Melbourne for the Australian Grand Prix. Albert Park – which has hosted the event since 1996, having proudly stolen it from Adelaide – will certainly be turning it on for the titanic celebrations as an exciting calendar of racing gets underway.

All eyes will be on Mercedes' Lewis Hamilton this season, with the British driver gunning for his seventh World Championship – an achievement that would see him equal the great Michael Schumacher's record. The momentum gained from a win in the opening round will be crucial if he is to dominate what will be the longest season in Formula 1 history, spanning 22 rounds.

Hamilton will have to fight for it, though; his Mercedes teammate Valtteri Bottas – who won the Australian Grand Prix last year – and rivals at Ferrari and Red Bull Racing are hell-bent on ending his reign at the top, having come out of pre-season testing in Barcelona with plenty to prove.

Of course, for passionate Australian fans, Perth-born top gun Daniel Ricciardo – who's entering his second year racing with French team Renault – will be the man to watch. The homegrown hero expects at least one podium finish with the marque in 2020, a goal he considers realistic despite the squad finishing fifth overall last year.

"We've still got a lot of work to do," concedes Ricciardo, who is joined this season by new Renault teammate, French driver Esteban Ocon. "But I definitely don't think it's impossible. And I see what McLaren's done [in 2019]. They made a big jump in performance from where they were [in 2018] and they gained... I don't know how much lap time, but it's quite a lot. I believe we've got all the tools in place to make a step like that."

The 2020 Formula 1 season roars into action in Melbourne

Daniel Ricciardo is keen to avoid distraction at his home Grand Prix

"It was the objective, when I signed with [Renault], that by 2020 we want to be hopefully spraying a bottle of Champagne," he says with his trademark smile.

"I don't want to set the expectation high, but I want to set the target high – and I don't want to back away from that because I think it's important to keep the guys motivated."

Motivation won't be a problem for Ricciardo, who signals that he will be upping the ante when he returns to home turf for the season opener.

"Even in myself I know I'll get better, so that's one variable that I know is going to change for the better," he says of the upcoming season.

To ensure every chance of success, Ricciardo intends to focus on his racing in Melbourne, rather than spreading himself too thin with media requests and other commitments that typically come with being the local drawcard, as the tight scheduling can make navigating the event overwhelming.

"I want to change it," he explains. "Your home Grand Prix should be your favourite one of the year, so that's what I want it to be. It's good that the attention is there, it's positive, but I'm there to race, not to be on the front page or the back page of the newspaper.

"I think that would happen if I get a good result, so let's take it for that."

IN A LEAGUE of their own

As the new NRL and AFL seasons get underway, we shine a spotlight on two of the codes' most promising new talents

NRL

EMRY PERE, 21
North Queensland Cowboys rookie, prop

What do you think your emotions will be leading into your first-grade debut?
They would obviously be through the roof if I was to get chosen in round one. Every debutant's emotions are next-level.

How has the preseason been?
I have come back in better shape compared to previous preseasons. I have understood my body more, which has helped me a lot. I did more work in the off-season before returning to training than in the past. That gave me a massive boost when I came in.

Tell us about the day you signed to play for the Cowboys – how did it feel?
All of my mates dreamed of becoming NRL players. For me to get that contract, it was a big honour. It was a step in the right direction. I was stoked.

Who are you most looking forward to going up against this season and why?
I grew up watching the Gold Coast Titans, so to come up against them will probably be a dream come true. They were my favourite team.

Do you have any heroes on the field?
Jared Waerea-Hargreaves from the Roosters. What he brings to the table is aggressiveness and I like to think I base my game around being aggressive.

What will be your biggest challenge?
The number-one thing for me will be to stay healthy and fit, so I am up for selection week in and week out, and to put my best foot forward each week.

You emerged from the Cowboys' feeder system. How has the squad prepared you for the big league?
I've learnt a lot from past and present players who have contributed so much to my game. Just learning from them how to prepare, what it takes – that's helped me heaps with what I'm trying to do myself.

Do you have any game-day rituals?
I do like eggs Benedict for breakfast on game day, and a little lunch.

Who are your biggest supporters?
My partner Lauren – she does everything at home. My teammates John Asiata and Jason Taumalolo – to hang around them is healthy for my off-field life. My family at home in New Zealand – every time I go back they make me understand why I'm doing this.

What's the best career advice you've been given?
'Head down, arse up.' Work your backside off every time you get the opportunity.

DYLAN STEPHENS, 19

Sydney Swans, number-five pick in the 2019 national draft, midfielder

How do you think your emotions will be leading up to your first senior game?
It will be a roller-coaster of a week. To be playing alongside [Lance] 'Buddy' Franklin and Josh Kennedy and the like will be very exciting but nerve-racking. Playing in the SANFL [South Australian National Football League] definitely has helped.

How has the preseason been?
Chilled-out. We were eased into it to manage our workload before Christmas, not thrown in the deep end – that's how you can get injuries. But we have got into it more since Christmas with contact work.

Tell us about the night you were drafted by the Swans.
I was in shock. For the first few days, it didn't sink in. Nothing had really changed, as I went back to Adelaide for a few days. But when I got to Sydney, that's when it all sank in and I came to the realisation that this is my job and this is me now.

Who are you most looking forward to going up against?
Josh Kelly [from Greater Western Sydney]. I can't say I'm necessarily looking forward to going up against him, but he is someone I've modelled my game on over the past five years. I've watched him really closely and been absolutely obsessed with him.

Do you have any heroes on the field?
My idol was Chris Judd. I was a Carlton supporter and he was someone who I just loved. He was Carlton's best player. I watched him over at West Coast as well. He comes across as a great bloke. He is obviously a superstar.

What will be your biggest challenge in your first season?
Getting to know people. It's just going to that next level and spending more time with people at the club. But it's also something that I am reasonably good at – making new friends.

How did playing in the SANFL prepare you for the AFL?
It helped with the speed and physicality of the game. [AFL] is obviously going to be another massive step up, but I was able to adapt from under-18 level to reserves and [SANFL] league level last year, so I guess I could say, 'Why can't I go up another notch this year?'

Do you have any game-day rituals?
I like getting changed late into my footy gear. I like being in a rush at the end to put my stuff on in the last 10 minutes before warm-up. That's when I start to switch on.

Who has been your biggest support?
Family is obviously number one. They sacrificed a lot for me to attend St Peter's College [in Adelaide] from year nine to year 12. I wasn't on a full scholarship. Mum and Dad were huge [supporters] – they always turned up to games.

What's the best piece of advice you have been given in your career?
Ned McHenry from the Crows spoke to me after the under-18 championships and told me to enjoy the rest of the year with Norwood [in the SANFL]. That's when I started to find my feet at that level – just enjoying what we were doing. You never know when [your career] might finish.

ONE-DAY INTERNATIONAL SERIES: SOUTH AFRICA vs AUSTRALIA LIVE from Wednesday March 4 at 9.50pm

GILLETTE ONE-DAY INTERNATIONAL SERIES: AUSTRALIA vs NEW ZEALAND LIVE from Friday March 13 at 1.30pm, both on FOX CRICKET [501]

Australia's Qantas Tour of South Africa concludes this month with games two and three in the ODI series – the first of which is played on March 4 in Bloemfontein, while the final fixture takes place on March 7 in Potchefstroom. These one-day games come off the back of a trio of T20s between the two nations that opened the whistlestop tour in late February.

Once that's out of the way, Australia return home to close the international season with a three-game ODI series against New Zealand. Having been outplayed in the Test tour that wrapped in January, the Black Caps are making their way back across the Tasman seeking an improved performance in the 50-over format. Games one and two are played at the SCG in Sydney on March 13 and 15, with game three bringing the action to Hobart's Blundstone Arena on March 20.

For the Aussies, David Warner (pictured) and Marnus Labuschagne are looking to finish their golden summer by plundering more runs against the Kiwis. A newcomer to the ODI team, Labuschagne is relishing the opportunity to head back to the SCG, which was the scene of his maiden Test double-century back in January. Warner hit a ton in the same game and is also set for a happy return to the Harbour City.

Behind the scenes...

celebrating women in sport

You wouldn't blame FOX CRICKET commentator Mel Jones for being a bit strung-out upon arriving at our exclusive Women in Sport photo shoot. But not even a red-eye flight from Perth to Sydney could dampen her spirit. In fact, her infectious, cheeky banter had all on set in stitches.

"Look at that face – I need to send that one to my mum!" she joked as she scrolled through the images captured.

The upbeat vibe on set continued at our Sydney and Melbourne shoots with FOX SPORTS presenters Kelli Underwood, Sarah Jones, Lara Pitt, Yvonne Sampson, Tara Rushton, Jess Yates and Hannah Hollis (who was celebrating a birthday). All seven oozed positive energy as they did their thing in front of the camera to help promote International Women's Day on March 8 and upcoming sports seasons.

Then there were Australia's top sporting heroes – rugby player Charlotte Caslick, basketballer Liz Cambage, AFLW star Tayla Harris and cricketer Ellyse Perry – who left the entire crew in awe of their talent and passion.

Coming up NEXT MONTH

Wentworth (s8)

There's a new top dog in town and she's not one to be messed with. After an emotional and explosive season seven finale, Wentworth returns to a prison that's in utter turmoil. At the centre of the action is the usually sweet-natured Allie Novak (Kate Jenkinson, pictured). She's loved, she's lost – and now she's killed. When we next meet the former addict, gone is the easygoing girl of the past and in her place is a woman set to take control.

"It was an intense end," Jenkinson says of last season's epic siege and the revelation that The Freak (Pamela Rabe) is alive.

"The genius of bringing back The Freak is that it agitates everyone – Jake (Bernard Curry), Vera (Kate Atkinson) and Will (Robbie Magasiva), in particular."

As fans can certainly attest to, the ante is upped with each new season of Wentworth, the cast and crew bringing nothing but their A-game, time and again.

"You have to hit the ground running on a show like this," Jenkinson explains. "There's something magical about Wentworth because it's not just about the characters; it's about the prison and whatever happens within those walls. That's why Wentworth has been able to maintain high stakes... Any character can disrupt the equilibrium."
