PLACING AN AD

Advertisers will furnish FIREARMS NEWS with copy legibly printed or typewritten on one side of the paper only. Please leave a margin of at least 1" on all sides. Classified ad copy can be submitted on disk, e-mailed to firearmsnews@outdoorsg.com, through www.firearmsnews.com, or picked up from your web site.

Contact the Art Director before submitting electronic display advertising.

Due care and diligence is used in checking advertising copy for accuracy, but the Publisher makes no warranty, express or implied. Advertisers and FIREARMS NEWS are not responsible for typographical errors, mistakes or misprints.

All ads received too late for the current issue will be inserted in the following issue, unless you qualify the submission of the ad. Existing ad copy may be substituted if new copy fails to arrive by the specified date.

Advertising is credit card, check or money order in advance. If uncertain as to the cost of your ad, submit it and we will advise the amount to be remitted, and we will refund any overage.

Artwork is kept in our files for 13 months and then destroyed. Reproduction quality is not guaranteed.

FIREARMS NEWS reserves the right to omit any ads that in its opinion are objectionable.

In addition, FIREARMS NEWS will no longer accept ads offering the following items for sale: Plans, videos or books for converting semi-automatic firearms into full-automatic firearms.

Sound suppressor plans, and videos. Plans or formulas for making explosives, booby traps, etc.

Lock picks, Slim-Jims, etc. and lock picking instructions.

Also, items related to the above.

If in doubt about your ad, call us.

YHM RESONATOR SUPPRESSOR

COMPACT, LIGHTWEIGHT, AND CONFIGURABLE

Enter YHM's .30 caliber "K-Can", the Resonator® K. Care, attention to detail, and a love for the industry helped to shape this remarkable piece of engineering. It was designed to provide the shooting enthusiast a quiet, lightweight and cost effective suppressor for the high caliber shooter. With an overall length of 4.8" (5.65" with Q.D.) and weighing in at just 9.6 oz. (12.4 oz. with Q.D.) it is perfect for those looking to shed some weight and reduce their footprint.

The blast chamber is threaded to the popular 1-3/8"-24 thread which allows it to utilize many available mounting options currently on the market. The new end cap design helps greatly reduce flash signature. The Resonator® K can be used on rifle calibers ranging from .17 HMR through 300 RUM.

The Resonator® K uses a tubeless design which consists of heat treated 17-4 stainless steel and a heat treated 718 Inconel blast baffle which allows the suppressor to be full auto rated and designed for rigorous use.

With an MSRP of $589 the Resonator® K comes with the Phantom® Q.D. Adapter, 2 suppressor wrenches, and your choice of a Phantom® Muzzle Brake or Flash Hider.

HIPERFIRE ANNOUNCES THE PHANTOM™ TRIGGER FAMILY

HIPERFIRE's customer base has clamored for an AR drop-in trigger that features the "feel" and hard-hitting hammers its triggers are known for. Most aftermarket drop-ins are notorious for LPS, light primer strikes. To get the pull weight down, designers have compromised their hammer fall. Not so with the new PHANTOM line of triggers. These drop-ins pull at around 2 lbs. and sport HIPERFIRE's unique HIPERSHOE that now mounts onto a curved bow, not just straight. The hammer strikes surpass SAAMI's copper crusher spec and hit harder than MIL-spec M4/16 hammers. Wow! The pull? It's single stage. It's short, sweet, and smooth as butter. That's one reason we call it the PHANTOM, the "feel" is almost transparent to the shooter. To top it all off, no PCC blowback violence can touch it. The four PHANTOM versions feature a hammer collision bumper. Its disconnecter and disconnecter spring are impact and crush protected. Is it just for PCC? No way. It's just an excellent trigger. Anyone can appreciate it shooting slow, fast, short-range, or for long-range precision, and on the move, it surpasses SAAMI's rough handling specification.

THE RIFLE

The Cimarron 1876 Centennial “Tom Horn” Rifle chambered in .45-60 is the ultimate addition to any western gun collection. Cimarron, and their affiliate company Texas Jack (TexasJacks.com), also offer other western-style guns and accessories like this Remington 1890 replica revolver which is the same type that was carried by Tom Horn ($624.48), Tom Horn hat ($514.00), and replica ammunition box ($6.30).

Spoiler alert — You know the deal. You’ve been warned. Tom Horn was Steve McQueen’s penultimate film. Based upon a true story, the movie’s eponymous central character is a brooding loner with a dark past whose sense of frontier morality puts him in conflict with the progressive social ideals of the day. In many ways Tom Horn is actually Steve McQueen and vice versa. The two men experienced tremendous hardship and tragedy but ultimately faced the end at peace.

The film Tom Horn is as much about a rifle as a man. While not necessarily historically accurate, the film narrative orbits around Tom’s unique Winchester. A massive Model 1876 chambered in .45-60, the unusual particulars of this weapon ultimately condemn Horn to death.

Most historians state that the real Tom Horn’s rifle of choice was a .30-30 Winchester, likely a Model 1892. However, many historians claim that Horn did own a Winchester Model 1876 rifle and a recent discovery of a Winchester 1876 rifle, chambered in .45-60, which was acquired from a museum many decades ago, is now believed to have been owned by Tom Horn. Some of the evidence includes a sling with “JC Coble, Bolser, Wyoming” carved on it — John Coble was the employer of Tom Horn. Colbel also paid for Horn’s funeral costs and had a book published about Horn’s life. A cleaning rod found with the rifle was wrapped with an envelope which had the lyrics of Life's Railway to Heaven written on it, a song sung at Tom Horn's funeral. The song was written by Glendolene M. Kimmell, a schoolteacher that Horn was romantically connected with. Did Horn stash the rifle with his girlfriend? Was it used in the murder Horn was convicted of? Did someone else use his rifle? There are still questions unanswered. Adding more confusion to the riddle is the fact that Horn had three rounds of ammunition on him when he was arrested: a .38-40, a .30-40 Government, and a .45-60 (this was in addition to his .30-30 rifle and ammunition). In any case, the Winchester 1876 used in the film has a great deal more character than a Model 1892. Cimarron offers a beautiful spot-on replica of this very rifle chambered in the quirky but powerful .45-60 cartridge.

Tom Horn was Steve McQueen’s next to last movie. Drawn from a true story, this gritty Western drama showed Hollywood’s King of Cool at his most seasoned. (Moviestillsdb.com)

The plot of the movie Tom Horn turns on the character’s Model 1876 Winchester. This unusual rifle and the rare cartridge it fired ultimately tied McQueen’s character to a murder he did not commit.

The Gun

The Model 1876 Winchester was called the Centennial Model as it was released coincident with the American Centennial Exposition. Where the previous Models 1866 and 1873 were chambered for pistol cartridges, the beefed-up Model 1876 was designed to handle the big game rounds of the day. Winchester produced four versions of the 1876 in at least three different chamberings. The Carbine sported a 22-inch barrel, the Express Rifle had a 26-inch tube, and the Sporting Rifle reached out 28 inches. The Musket had a massive 32-inch barrel, before the Model 1886 supplanted it the production run totaled 63,871 copies. Oliver Winchester was a master marketer. His standard rifles had a blued finish, while the deluxe variants were casehardened. Winchester also offered his famous One of One Hundred and One of One Thousand grades, seven of the former and fifty-four of the latter. The Model 1876 chambered for .50-95 Express was the only lever action rifle to see widespread service among buffalo hunters. The Canadian North-West Mounted Police bought 750 Model 1876 guns in .45-75 in 1883. The Texas Rangers used the same rifle. President Theodore Roosevelt used a Model 1876 on some of his hunting forays out West and raved about it. Teddy’s copy sported a pistol-gripped stock, a half-length magazine, and extensive engraving. When the famed Apache chief Geronimo was captured in 1886 he was carrying a Model 1876 Winchester.

The customized Winchester 1876 rifle used in the film may not have been the actual gun used by the historical Tom Horn. However, featuring this unusual weapon in the movie gave the story much more depth. (Moviestillsdb.com)

The Cimarron Tom Horn Rifle

The Model 1876 from Cimarron is a splendid rendition of the gun used in the movie. Featuring a 28-inch octagonal barrel and a 49-inch overall length, this massive lever action tips the scales at just over ten pounds. The steel is blued, and the stocks are a deep stained walnut.

Tom Horn’s name is engraved across the receiver. In addition, a removable Marble tang rear sight affixes behind the action and perfectly replicates the setup in the movie. While the actual hero gun used in the film was an original 1882 vintage Model 1876 firing .45-75 WCF — some sources state that this caliber was chosen by the movie production due to availability of .45-70 blanks which would work in the rifle. The Cimarron rifle runs .45-60 in keeping with the movie’s narrative.

The Cimarron replica is absolutely gorgeous. The fit and finish are flawless, and the action runs like greased glass. At more than four feet long this gun projects authority. For anyone with an interest in period Western firearms the Tom Horn Centennial Model 1876 from Cimarron pegs the awesometer.

How Does She Run?

The Tom Horn Model 1876 Centennial is a monster of a firearm. Just hefting the thing will bounce a guy’s serum testosterone up a few notches. The rounds are as big as your index finger, and the elegant angles exude a near-sensual vibe.

Lifting the rifle to your shoulder settles it in place like an old friend. The graceful curved buttplate locks into the human form, while the gentle drop orients the sights right where they should be. The big action runs smoothly and comfortably. However, it did take a few rounds before the action loosened up, and it must be run authoritatively. Lube the firing pin a bit for optimal reliability.

The rear sight is an adjustable ramp, but that’s not the one you’ll use. The Marble tang sight incorporates an aperture for precision and a vernier adjustment for range. The mechanism folds out of the way when it isn't needed and slides free for storage. The sight adjusts to compensate for the drop of those big fat lead bullets, but there are no graduations. A man running a rifle this awesome knows his iron well enough not to need them.

The rounds are big, but the gun is bigger. That means the shooting experience remains recreational. This portly rifle rocks back under recoil and cycles as fast as the operator's rheumatism might allow. The long heavy barrel keeps those big slugs nicely under control.

Ancillary Iron

Sundry other characters wield Model 1892 Winchester rifles that are period correct for a movie set in 1903. Actor Slim Pickens' character carries a long-barreled side-by-side 12-bore with exposed hammers.

McQueen uses a similar coach gun liberated from a cattle rustler to put paid to another ne'er-do-well.

A variety of rustlers pack the obligatory Colt Single Action Army in several different configurations. Colonel Colt's Peacemaker is the archetypal Western revolver. Cimarron offers a wide array of these iconic wheelguns.

Colt Walker was designed in 1846 as a collaborative effort between Texas Ranger Captain Samuel Hamilton Walker and Sam Colt. There were only 1,100 original guns produced, 1,000 of which went to the military. Sam Walker died wielding a brace of his eponymous revolvers while fighting in the Mexican-American War in 1847.

One of Horn’s adversaries wields a Smith and Wesson Model 3 Schofield revolver. This single action top-break wheelgun debuted in 1870 and was the first cartridge-firing handgun adopted by the US Army.

Bob Ford used a Schofield Model 3 to kill Jesse James in 1882.

There is a pervasive melancholia about Tom Horn. McQueen's character does some bad things, but he has a good heart. The viewer wants him to prevail. However, the Cattleman's Association, a timeless personification of faceless greed, ultimately takes his life unjustly. A special gallows was constructed that was activated by Horn's own weight, no one in attendance being willing to throw the lever.

Tom Horn hit theaters in March of 1980. Steve McQueen died of malignant mesothelioma eight months later at age fifty. The cumulative effects of a terminal disease and McQueen's Hollywood lifestyle were beginning to take a toll during the making of the film. This toxic combination likely contributed to the movie’s gritty edge.

Denouement

The historical Tom Horn, like the character in the movie, was a frontier Renaissance Man. He served as a civilian scout for the US Cavalry, a ranch owner, a Pinkerton detective, a deputy sheriff, and a “Range Detective.” In the latter role he was essentially a paid assassin who meted out frontier justice to cattle rustlers in exchange for a stipend for every dead outlaw he could produce.

Unlike the film’s title character, the real Horn was more morally complex. He likely killed at least seventeen men, the first in a duel over a prostitute. It was his conviction for the murder of a 14-year-old boy named Willie Nickell near Iron Mountain, Wyoming, for which he was hanged the day before his 43d birthday. The film was inspired by his autobiography The Life of Tom Horn: Government Scout and Interpreter as told by Himself that he wrote while in jail while awaiting execution.

Steve McQueen’s Tom Horn is a pragmatic killer with a good heart. His sense of frontier justice drives his actions in the face of greed and villainy. (Moviestillsdb.com)

Steve McQueen was dying of cancer when he made this movie. (Moviestillsdb.com)

Steve McQueen was in his time the highest paid actor in Hollywood, and he carries a gravitas to which other lesser actors still aspire. The tale of Tom Horn has all the elements of ruggedness, passion, and justice ill-served that make for a compelling Western.

STEVE MCQUEEN: THE KING OF COOL

Steve McQueen was a tough unhappy man who arose from an absolutely brutal childhood. He never knew his father and was ultimately remanded to the California Junior Boys Republic, a reform school of sorts, as a teenager. Once he became wealthy and famous he returned to the school on numerous occasions to speak to the boys and present gifts.

McQueen worked as a bouncer in a brothel, a roughneck, a carnival barker, and a lumberjack. In 1947, he joined the Marine Corps but struggled to assimilate. He was demoted seven times for behavior problems and once spent 41 days in the brig. However, he saved the lives of five other Marines when their tank broke through ice during an arctic exercise. He was ultimately assigned to the honor guard on President Truman's Presidential yacht.

Steve McQueen was the most popular actor in the world in his day. (Wikipedia)

Steve McQueen's personal life was the chemical formula for chaos. This is his mug shot after an arrest in Anchorage, Alaska. (Wikipedia)

McQueen starred in twenty-nine feature films as well as a variety of TV roles. He filmed 93 episodes of Wanted: Dead or Alive. His film credits include The Blob, The Magnificent Seven, The Great Escape, Nevada Smith, The Sand Pebbles, The Thomas Crown Affair, Bullitt, Papillon, The Towering Inferno, and The Hunter. He turned down roles in Ocean's 11, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, Apocalypse Now, Dirty Harry, A the likes of Yul Brynner, Isaac Hayes, Sybil Danning, and Chuck Norris. He fought Bruce Lee’s character to the death in Game of Death as “Stick” and lived to tell the tale. He was also a friend and spiritual mentor to Steve McQueen.

Mel’s real calling is to serve those society finds the most unlovely. An ordained minister, Mel has for more than thirty-six years led services in prisons and skid row areas reaching the homeless and the incarcerated for Christ. Starting out with a stint playing professional baseball with the Pittsburgh Pirates, that was cut short by a severe shoulder injury, he has gone on to a long career in movies and along the way reached countless souls for Jesus.

WD: Tell me something memorable about Steve McQueen. What was he really like up close?

MN: Steve was a real down-to-earth kind of guy. One day I was out trap shooting with Stephen Spielberg, Ken Hyman, and John Milius when up walks this guy with really long hair and a full beard. Once I saw those bright blue eyes I realized it was Steve. This was maybe seven months before he died. I had first met Steve McQueen, through his karate instructor Pat Johnson, years before at a birthday party.

A perennial villain in dozens of familiar action movies, martial arts legend Mel Novak has devoted his life to Christian ministry. (Wikipedia)

Coppola and Milius were making Apocalypse Now, and they wanted Steve to play the part of LTC Kilgore. They offered him $2 million on the spot for one week’s work in the Philippines, and he turned him down cold. Steve didn’t have anything else going on at the time, but he just didn’t feel like leaving the country.

WD: Hard to imagine “Charlie don’t surf!” and “I love the smell of napalm in the morning!” coming from anybody but Robert Duvall, but apparently that was almost Steve McQueen. Share with us a memory about making the movie Tom Horn.

MN: The movie was already cast, but Steve fired the director Steve Guercia right after filming began. He got rid of several of the cast members and said he wanted me in the film. I got a call from the producer Fred Weintraub at 3pm telling me I needed to be on a plane for Arizona at six.

The next morning, I went through wardrobe and makeup but still had not seen a script. On the drive out to the set, they told me I was getting a different role with a lot of dialogue, and I still hadn’t seen any of it. As soon as I got there they were ready to shoot.

I said a quick prayer for help, and the new director announced unexpectedly that it was time for a lunch break. I skipped lunch and went back to my trailer to learn my lines. When it was all over Steve was happy with it.

WD: Tell us about Steve’s last months.

MN: He had a horrible cancer, but I know Steve McQueen is in glory with the Lord. Billy Graham went down to Mexico to meet with him. I was once giving him some scriptures and he told me, “Mel, you sound just like my pastor.” We both laughed, and I said, “Well, Steve, we read the same book.” I was blessed to know him and to minister to him. He’s someone that you never forget. FN

Bridge Too far, The Gauntlet, The French Connection, and Close Encounters of the Third Kind. He was even considered for the title role in Rambo.

McQueen was a difficult man. He was married three times and had two children. He was notorious for demanding strange things in bulk like jeans and electric razors in his movie contracts. It was later discovered that he was donating this stuff to the reform school where he had lived as a teen.

Wanted: Dead or Alive cemented McQueen as a star.

Steve McQueen was larger than life. Unlike many famous actors, he actually did the things for real that he was shown doing on screen. (Wikipedia)

McQueen was a competitive racer of both cars and motorcycles as well as an experienced pilot. In his prime he ran five miles a day seven days a week, worked out for two hours daily, and was an accomplished martial artist. He was, however, also a heavy smoker and regular drug abuser.

After a lifetime spent pursuing hedonistic pleasures McQueen found himself empty and quite literally dying. In his final months, McQueen became an evangelical Christian. He was active in his local church and met with the famed evangelist Billy Graham while keeping in touch with his friend, and fellow actor, preacher Mel Novak.

In the high-octane life of Steve McQueen, the King of Cool, we see a tough yet talented man who had simultaneously both everything and nothing. Despite a life wasted in sin and excess McQueen nonetheless finally met Jesus and found peace, purpose, and redemption. His story serves as a timeless cautionary tale. FN

Brownells BRN 1911 Retro was inspired by the first customized 1911 pistols used in Practical Pistol competition.

BROWNELLS

BRN 1911 RETRO CUSTOM GOVERNMENT PISTOL:

Bringing Back the “Good Old Days”

By Paul Scarlata Photos by Becky Scarlata, Ed Brown Products, and Brownells

Ed Brown competing in a USPSA match with a long slide 1911 of his own design. (Courtesy of Ed Brown Products, EdBrown.com)

When I opened the package that the delivery service had dropped off, I was immediately reminded of Yogi Berra’s famous quote “It’s deja vu all over again.”

OK, before we go any further let’s go back to the early 1980s when I first became involved in Action Pistol shooting after watching a match at a local club. In those days, we referred to the sport as “Combat Shooting” and the stages required the shooter to engage a series of humanoid shaped cardboard targets interspaced with reactive steel targets from various distances. Most stages required movement, reloading on the run and shooting over, around, through and under various props such as walls, windows and tunnels. All under the clock.

While the majority of shooters used 1911-style pistols, those persons who choose to use Browning Hi-Powers or revolvers competed “mano y mano” with those who fielded Old Slabsides. I fondly remember those “rule-free” days and all the good times associated with them.

But, as these things tend to happen, the sport became more and more popular and in 1976 an international group of enthusiasts met in Columbia, Missouri and formed the International Practical Shooting Confederation (IPSC) as the governing body of and to standardize rules for competition. One of the first — dare I say politically correct — things they did was to inform us that “Combat Shooting” would now be known as “Practical Shooting.”

Early Practical Pistol matches required the shooters to engage in much more “acrobatics” than they do today. Here a shooter fires at targets from around a “Rhodesian Wall.” (Courtesy of Bill Wilson/Wilson Combat)

In 1984, the United States Practical Shooting Association (USPSA) was incorporated as the U.S. Region of IPSC. From its modest beginnings, today practical shooting is the second most popular international target shooting discipline and the fastest growing. But back to the guns.

When I first started competing, I used a box stock Colt Combat Commander and a S&W Model 25 revolver loaded with full moon clips. Eventually, I ceased competing with “roundguns” and concentrated on self loaders which led me to begin modifying my Commander so as to, hopefully, be more competitive.

First, I had a gunsmith do a trigger job on it. Then, as was popular at that time, I had the slide cut to mount a fully adjustable S&W revolver rear sight. But after seeing what my fellow shooters were doing to “gain an edge” I realized that my Commander was still falling behind the curve.

So, I sold the Commander and bought myself a five inch Gov’t Model and told my gunsmith to install all the “bells & whistles” that, at that time, were considered all but mandatory on a USPSA pistol. After fitting and tightening the slide/frame, he mounted a Bo-Mar fully adjustable rear sight and cut a dovetail in the front of the slide for fitting a higher front sight. Next was a long, lightweight trigger that could be adjusted for overtravel and an extended thumb safety.

After shooting this pistol for a while I realized it still wasn’t up to snuff. Back to the gunsmith who installed a beavertail grip safety, a lightweight hammer and beveled the mouth of the magazine well to smooth out reloads. Now I was all set ... or was I?

The BRN 1911 Retro is built in the style of the pistols early Practical Shooters used. Note the classic lines and the lack of the “bells & whistles” common to today’s competition pistols.

After experiencing a series of jams with a new style bullet, I was using in my match reloads I had Mr. G'smith lower and flare the ejection port and install an extended ejector. And while he was at it I told him to go ahead and checker the front strap so I could get a more secure purchase for improved recoil control.

I was now happy with my 1911, and it served me well for a number of years competing in USPSA matches and for bowling pin shooting at the Second Chance Shoot in Michigan.

But time and technology wait for no one and over the next few years we saw long slide guns, muzzle compensators, electronic dot sights and, eventually, high capacity frames while the .38 Super became the dominate caliber. If you shot a single stack, 1911 you could no longer compete on a level playing field against such technological “wonders.”

The dot sighted, high capacity, compensated, 1911 was the last straw for those shooters who no longer had the desire, or the financial wherewithal, to keep up with the constant changes required to be competitive. Instead of trying to compete against so-called “Race Guns” many simply stopped attending matches. Numbers of them, headed by Bill Wilson, started a new organization, the International Defensive Pistol Association (IDPA) which restricted shooters to using practical, defensive type handguns.

In the face of declining membership, in 1992 USPSA instituted changes the first of which was the creation of Limited Division which “limited” the modifications one could make to their pistols and forbade the use of optical sights, recoil compensators, barrel porting and “limited” the length of extended magazines. Shooters would now only compete against other shooters equipped with similar pistols.

POWER FACTOR

Another feature of USPSA competition is the Power Factor (P.F.). To prevent shooters from gaining an unfair advantage by shooting light recoiling “powder puff” loads, USPSA recognizes two power factors — Major and Minor — with attendant scoring advantages going to Major shooters. The P.F. is determined by multiplying the bullet's weight by its velocity and dividing by 1000: $M \times V \div 1000 = P.F.$ The P.F. must be 165 or greater to be scored as Major and at least 125 for Minor. Except in Open Division, you can only claim Major P.F. with a cartridge of .40 caliber/10mm or larger. FN

As “back in the day” the BRN 1911 Retro only accepts single stack magazines. Each pistol comes with two, seven-round-cartridge containers.

While at first, many Limited shooters used single stack 1911 pistols with extended, 10 round magazines eventually .40 caliber, high capacity 1911 pistols with all the “Bells & Whistles” came to dominate the division. So, to placate fans of the traditional 1911 USPSA introduced Single Stack Division.

Pistols used in this division had to be 1911s that only accepted magazines of the single column persuasion which could not hold more than eight (.40/.45) or nine (9mm/.38 Super) rounds. This meant that a 1980s-style, .45 caliber, single stack 1911 pistol was once again competitive in USPSA! Which gets us back to the object under discussion in this article. Brownells’ BRN-1911.

In the 1960s, gunsmiths such as Armand Swenson, Jim Hoag and Arnold Capone began building “combat custom” 1911 pistols which featured extended, ambidextrous controls, easy to see sights, frame checkering, beveled magazine wells and squared off trigger guards which provided superior ergonomics and improved recoil control. While designed for combat, such pistols soon came to the attention of practical shooters looking for that “edge.” One of these was Ed Brown.

Ed Brown began a part-time gunsmithing business in 1968 under the name “Brown’s Gun Shop.” A trained tool and die maker, CNC programmer, and CAD/CAM designer, Ed began shooting IPSC/USPSA and Bianchi Cup in 1980, eventually attaining the rank of Top 16th in the World.

Frustrated by the second-rate quality of 1911 parts then available, Ed envisioned a full line of quality aftermarket parts that met the needs of the serious practical shooter. On March 1988, he launched his parts business and shortly afterwards, the world’s largest firearm components distributor, Brownells, added Ed Brown’s parts to their catalog.

In 1991, Ed was awarded “Pistolsmith of the Year” by his fellow Guild members. That same year he announced that he was changing his focus from gunsmithing and building guns to parts manufacturing exclusively and 1992 saw the establishment of Ed Brown Products, Inc. (EDBrown.com).

In 1998, along with his sons Travis and Wade — they began designing and manufacturing a complete line of Ed Brown firearms using, naturally, parts of their own manufacture.

Here is Ed Brown competing in an early USPSA match. In this stage the shooter had to knock a can off a table before they could draw their pistol and begin engaging targets. (Courtesy of Ed Brown Products)

In late 2018, I received a news release from Brownells announcing that they were going to market a 1911 pistol under their own name. And the first one is a pistol that will gladden the hearts of those, shall I say, more “experienced” (notice I did not say “older”) Action Pistol shooters who fondly recall those bygone days when “you shot what you brung” and hanging accessories on your pistol did not give you any great advantage over your peers.

Called the BRN-1911 Brownells Retro Custom this pistol has been assembled by Ed Brown Products and features 100% ... well, Ed Brown components.¹ This is a pistol that might cause confusion and consternation among some of the younger competitors out there. Why? Well let’s list the reasons one by one.

The BRN's slide has been cut to mount a Bo-Mar fully adjustable rear sight ... without those dual white dots, thank you! Note the extended thumb safety.

The upper corners of the Bo-Bar sight have been beveled to prevent gouging the shooter's hands.

The Bo-Mar is mated to a square blade front sight, also sans an offending white dot.

An extended beavertail grip safety disperses the recoil pulse for superior control and fast follow up shots.

First of all, it's made from 100% real steel and wood — no alloys, no polymers, no composites and no plastics. The slide is made from 4140 carbon steel while the frame, match grade barrel and bushing are 416 stainless steel. These are matched to a pair of sharply checked Cocobolo grips. You will note that there are no forward grasping grooves or relief cuts on the slide although the ejection port has been lowered and flared to insure that spent cases get out of the way reliably.

A Bo-Mar fully adjustable rear sight — which many feel is still the best sight ever made — is mounted low at the rear of the slide and mated to a black, square blade front mounted in a dovetail. That's right children, no three white dots and no (gasp!) fiber optics! BTW, the corners of the Bo-Mar have been beveled to prevent the shooter from gouging their hand while racking the slide, press checking or clearing a — hopefully rare — malfunction.

Externally the modifications are modest but meaningful. First of all are an extended, single-sided thumb safety and a beavertail grip safety both of which provide positive manipulation while the latter secures the pistol in your hand and disperses recoil pulse for enhanced control.

As for securing the pistol in your hand, the front strap features sharp, precision cut 25 lpi checkering. Between that and the grip checkering I believe you'd have to tear the skin off the palms of my hands before you could take this pistol away from me!

My only real complaint in this area concerns the magazine release. It's the original short length and, as one who does not have large hands, I had to move the pistol around in my hand to manipulate it securely. Sorry John Moses.

While they have fallen out of favor, the pistol has the original 1911A1 style arched mainspring housing which is ribbed and enhanced purchase. I fully approve of this component as I find that I tend to shoot low when I shoot fast with a 1911 with a flat mainspring house and so have fitted the arched style to all of my personal 1911s.

Cartridge ignition is courtesy of a ventilated, aluminum trigger that can be adjusted for overtravel and a skeletonized hammer whose light weight shortens lock time.

Internally we find all Ed Brown components have been hand fitted for reliability and a crisp trigger let off. On the pistol I received the sear tripped with

The front strap features sharp cut 25 lpi (lines per inch) checkering for a secure purchase, even with wet or oily hands.

I would have preferred an extended magazine release but they weren't common "back in the day" that this pistol represents. Perhaps we all had longer thumbs when we were younger?

I believe the arched mainspring housing provides enhanced ergonomics and "pointability."

A sonic boom and enormous muzzle flash hurls the exclusive Armscor 22TCM cartridge downrange at a blistering 2000fps with penetrating impact. Just as obvious is its light recoil and manageability. As if you needed another reason, its 17-round magazine is compatible with the entire TCM line, including rifles. Thrill seekers, rejoice.

A light weight skeletonized hammer not only looked sexy but shortens lock time.

It uses a traditional 1911 style recoil system and hand fitted National Match barrel bushing.

No gaping magazine well funnel here! The mag well opening was just beveled slightly to insure smooth, snag free reloads. The two holes in the magazine base pad are for attaching a bumper pad.

exactly four pounds of pressure and while most of today's competitive shooters would consider that a bit heavy, back in the day it was the norm. Plus, the let off is so short and crisp you'd swear it was lighter.

The recoil system uses the same short guide rod that JMB originally designed for the pistol. And while full length spring guide rods are considered de rigueur by today's shooters the original style has worked just fine for 108 years. So why mess around with success?

While most of the USPSA pistols one sees today are fitted with magazine well funnels that look like the mouth of the Lincoln Tunnel, as befits a retro style pistol, the BRN-1911's mag well opening has only received a modest beveling.

I test fired the BRN-1911 for accuracy from fifty feet with .45 ammo provided by Federal, SIG Sauer and Black Hills. This proved a bit of a trial because no matter how careful I was, almost every group had four rounds in a nice pattern with one darn flyer opening it up. Apparently, I did everything right one time and put five rounds of Federal 220-grain Syntech into a horizontal group measuring an impressive 1.4 inches.

To see how the BRN-1911 handled offhand I ran it through a couple of USPSA-type stages. To keep within the spirit of the times, instead of using a Kydex holster and mag pouches, I belted on a rather elderly Plaxco World Speed Model holster and mag pouch both made from — oh my! — leather. [Cont. to page 32]

In keeping with the retro aspect of my testing, I used a (leather!) Plaxco World Speed Model holster. This type of rig could be worn either strong side or cross draw.

I also made one modification to the pistol. In competition I shoot 1911s with a high thumb grip which does not always depress the grip safety sufficiently. As many of us did back in the “good old days,” I used a strip of bicycle tire inner tube around the grip to hold the safety in. NOTE: I would not do this on a pistol intended for defensive purposes!

As I feel it is an excellent way to judge a pistol’s handling characteristics, I began our field testing by running racks of eight-inch steel plates from ten yards. I ran ten racks of plates while Becky timed me with a Electronics Pocket Pro shot timer (CompetitionElectronics.com). While I will admit the plain black front sight slowed me down the first couple of runs (OK, I guess I did miss a fiber optic out there?), the remainder of my runs averaged under six seconds which is about as good as this child shoots with a pistol he hasn't run many rounds through yet.

We then set up a short field course that had me engaging a number of USPSA targets which required movement between three shooting positions and performing a number of reloads. I ran this course four times and, once again, the BRN-1911 performed beautifully with all my rounds finding their way into the targets' A zones. My only complaint is that I found the magazine release too short which caused me to fumble a few of reloads.

Recoil was very controllable and we did not experience a single malfunction with the 200+ rounds we ran through it that afternoon.

While Brownells' BRN-1911 is styled after those pistols used in the early days of USPSA competition It would still be perfectly suitable for USPSA's Single Stack and (with 10-round magazines) Limited Ten divisions. And like its predecessors, it possesses all of the features of a serious, real-world combat pistol and would be an excellent choice for those law enforcement officers, military types, armed professionals and civilian shooters who still favor JMB's greatest invention for every day service, concealed carry and/or home defense.

I guess you might say it's a "Retro Multi Tasker?" FN

These properly "ventilated" targets show that the BRN-1911 handled the field course with aplomb.

Reloading was a bit of trial due to the short magazine release.

Thanks to its 1911 ergonomics and checkered front strap, recoil was very controllable.

STAR Z-70

SUBMACHINE GUN

By Leroy Thompson

I was considering awhile back my favorite submachine gun (SMG). More specifically, I was considering the SMGs that fire a pistol caliber cartridge, thus eliminating short carbines such as the AKSU. I like some of the more recent designs such as the HK MP5 or the FN P90. However, the Star Z-70 kept nudging its way into my list of favorites. Spain is one of those countries that have issued SMGs for police and military units for decades. This doesn't always mean that the SMG issued in many countries is all that good, but in the case of the Star Z-70, Spanish soldiers and cops were well armed.

The Star Z-70 actually evolved from the Star Z-62. Introduced in 1962 as an improvement on the Z-45 SMG, the Z-62 was designed for ease of handling by placing its pistol grip near the center of gravity. It employs an under-folding skeleton stock that latches into a notch in the heat shield when closed, being released by lifting up on the butt plate. When deployed the stock locks in place. Pulling back on the stock releases it to be folded. The cross-bolt safety in the pistol grip is easily operated with the thumb or edge of the forefinger. When pushed to the left it locks and blocks the sear, whether the bolt is open or closed.

When pushed to the right the Z-62 may be fired. There is also an automatic safety that offers enhanced security if the SMG is dropped. When firing with the stock folded, the butt plate acts as a forward grip. A sling swivel is attached to the receiver's rear that allows the Star Z-70 to be easily carried ready for use, either with stock folded or deployed.

One of the most noteworthy features is the selector system for the Z-62. The trigger has two half-moon shaped depressions. To fire in full auto the finger is placed on the upper half moon and for semi auto on the lower half moon. This system involves the trigger pushing directly back when pressed at the top but pivoting when pressed at the bottom. I've actually found that it works better for control of full auto bursts to place the trigger finger on the bump between the two depressions. I have also read that some Spanish users were trained to put two fingers on the trigger, applying pressure with the one applicable to the mode desired. I tried this method and it does seem to give better control, especially for firing bursts. I have medium-sized hands so had no trouble fitting both fingers into the trigger guard and onto the trigger. I'll have to work on using two fingers more the next time I get a chance to shoot a Z-70.

The cocking handle is located forward near the muzzle on the left side of the Z-62. This is a good position for ease of operation without shifting the shooting hand. The handle does not reciprocate as the bolt moves back and forth. The magazine release is a button to the rear of the magazine well, located to allow ease of operation while gripping a magazine. The standard magazine holds 30 rounds but 20 rounders were also available. Magazines with a 40-round capacity are mentioned, but I've never seen one. It is a double column feed magazine, which enhances reliability and eases loading. Sights are pretty standard for a SMG of the Z-62's generation, consisting of a shrouded blade front sight and shrouded rear flip-up peeps for 100 and 200 meters. The ears (shrouds) are sturdy and large enough to really protect the sights.

Disassembly is readily carried out without the need for tools. The tip of a cartridge may be used to depress the recoil spring stop disc to allow the butt cap to be removed. At this point the spring and buffer may be removed. Pulling back on the cocking handle allows the bolt to slide out. The frame may be removed by using the cartridge tip to depress the retaining pin catch, thus allowing the pin to be withdrawn and the receiver to be removed from the frame. A quarter turn of the barrel allows it to slide out of the receiver.

When the Z-62 was introduced, the standard Spanish pistol and SMG cartridge was the 9x23mm (Largo).

However, for export sales and perhaps in anticipation of NATO-member Spain adopting a 9x19mm pistol, the Z-62 was also produced in 9x19mm caliber. This version was later designated the Z-63.

Once the 9x19mm cartridge became standard with the Spanish armed forces for NATO compatibility, the Z-63 became known as the Z-70, though it was basically the former in 9x19mm caliber. I have seen it designated Z-63/70 or Transitional Z-70 as well. However, an updated version of the Z-70 designated the Z-70/B did away with the trigger containing the selector, replacing it with a more conventional trigger and fire selector switch that also replaced the cross-bolt safety. The magazine release was also changed to a lever type more readily operated with either hand.

I'll talk about why I consider the Star Z-70 such a fine SMG shortly, but I also want to point out that it was used by some very high-speed Spanish military and law enforcement units including the Spanish Legion, Spanish Navy UOE (Combat Swimmers), Spanish Army MOE (Special Operations Command), Guardia Civil UEI and GAR, and National Police GEO, among others. Having said that, these units have now replaced the Z-70 or Z-70/B with the HK MP5.

As good as the Z-70/Z-70/B was and is, it is not a current generation SMG. I don't care about that. It is one of the all-time classic SMGs. If I were armed with a Star Z-70 or a Z-70/A I would still consider myself well-armed (within the parameters of a 9x19mm SMG's effectiveness).

My esteem for the Z-70 is based partially on its reliability. Its magazines are well designed to feed reliably and parts seem to be well machined for smooth operation. I have rarely had a malfunction with the Star Z-70 or Z-70/A. As with the typical SMG of its time, it functions best with full-jacketed ammunition.

I find the Z-70/-70/B one of the handiest SMGs I've fired. I can engage quickly with it and it's controllable on short bursts. I will note, though, that the butt plate is not especially comfortable and does move on the shoulder with longer bursts unless it is pushed back into the shoulder firmly. Having said that, anyone who normally fires SMGs realizes that firing continuous bursts is not sound tactically.

Speaking of controllability, with the stock folded, the ability to use the butt plate as a gripping surface for the support hand does help in controlling the Z-70. This is useful, as it can take some time to pivot the butt plate out of engagement, then unfold the stock and lock it prior to engagement. The determining factor would be the range at which it were necessary to engage. Another aid to controlling the Z-70/70/A on full auto is the magazine well, which extends downward enough to allow a good gripping surface.

I've used the Star Z-70 more than the Z-70/A so I'm used to the cross bolt safety and can work it readily. I do find that the two-position trigger rather than a selector switch takes some time for adjustment if I haven't fired the Z-70 for a while. Likewise, I'm used to using the button magazine release as I withdraw the magazine. I'll admit that I should find the selector switch and lever magazine release on the Z-70/A quicker. Maybe with practice that would be the case, but I've done quite a bit more shooting with the Z-70.

As SMG sights go, those of the Z-70/70/A are about average and are quite usable to 50 yards. That's the furthest I've fired a Star Z-70/70/A.

To re-acquaint myself with the Z-70 for this article I fired 250 rounds through it. Most were fired in 3–5 shot bursts at plates or silhouette targets between 10 and 25 yards. I fired one magazine in short bursts with the stock folded at 15 yards. I also fired some 5-shot groups using the “lower” trigger at 25 yards. At 35 yards, I engaged a silhouette target with 2–4 shot bursts. Note trigger control with the Star Z-70 allows 2-shot bursts readily. At 15 yards firing 3–5 shot bursts, I kept all hits on the silhouette target. At 35 yards with 2–4 shot bursts about half of the magazine impacted within the silhouette. Note, that I had not fired the Star Z-70 for a couple of years. More recent practice would have likely meant that my controlled bursts would have been more effective at the longer distance. The relatively low cyclic rate — 550 RPM — aids in controlling the Z-70 in full auto fire. Throughout the 250 rounds fired — mostly using Sellier & Bellot 115-grain FMJ — I had NO malfunctions.

Shooting the Z-70 for this article reinforced my view that it is one of the truly classic SMGs. Given a choice, in the pre-MP5 era, I would have chosen it. During that period, I worked on some protection jobs where we had the Beretta M-12, which I liked and found controllable because of the vertical fore grip. I also occasionally used the Walther MP-L/MP-K or the Uzi in the day. They were good SMGs, as well. Still, “if I had to go to war” with a Z-70, I’d be ok with that. These days, I’m more likely to go to the range with it. That’s definitely ok, too. FN

The Howdah pistol was so named as it was originally intended to defend a big game hunter, perched atop an elephant, from malevolent tigers. A scant few of these fascinating weapons even saw service during the American Civil War. All of the artifacts shown here alongside the pistol were unearthed in my corner of Mississippi.

THE HOWDAH PISTOL

Serious 19th Century Firepower

By Will Dabbs, MD

Captain Obadiah Sutcliffe crouched low over his horse and stroked the sweaty animal's neck. His mount was both tired and frightened. Truth be known, so was Sutcliffe. In the recent chaos, the man had bloodied his saber but was now separated from his unit. Though the sounds of battle reverberated in the distance, amplified and distorted by the undulating Virginia forest, all seemed momentarily peaceful nearby.

Captain Sutcliffe answered to one General James Ewell Brown Stuart, and his mob of Confederate cavalymen was playing holy hell with Major General George McClellan's blue-coated regulars. However, cavalry combat is a terrifying chaotic thing that ebbed and flowed like some kind of sentient animal. Sutcliffe this moment found himself disoriented, lost, and alone.

Obadiah Sutcliffe was the eldest son of Jeremiah and Edith Sutcliffe, members of old stock Virginia landed gentry who had made their money farming tobacco on their ample plantation outside Abingdon. When the Union had started this war Obadiah had signed on with JEB Stuart and taken a commission, riding off in a resplendent uniform handmade by the same enslaved woman who had raised him from a whelp. Now over the deep breathing of his mount Sutcliffe heard rustling in the nearby brush.

Sutcliffe's heart quickened and he slowly reached for the grip of the heavy pistol that hung from his saddle. His .36-caliber Colt still held three rounds and rode in a flap holster on his right hip, but this sound was close. In a moment the massive Belgian handgun was up and free, its twin hammers cocked and ready.

The pistol had been a gift from his father. The elder Sutcliffe had discovered the gun during a holiday in Europe the year before the war. Sporting twin over-and-under 20-gauge barrels, the pistol's sensual lines belied its raw power. When stoked with buck-and-ball this European hand cannon was a formidable close quarters combat tool.

His horse dutifully eased forward as Sutcliffe strained through sweaty eyes to pierce the foliage. Suddenly the brush thinned and the Rebel captain found himself face to face with four Union Infantrymen, their eyes wide with terror. It seemed he had finally found the eastern end of the line. The Yankee soldiers swung their weapons as one just as Sutcliffe drew a quick bead on the nearest lad. He stroked the front trigger, and the hapless young man caught the charge fully in the face.

His three mates triggered their Springfield muskets as one, and Captain Obadiah Sutcliffe took the trio of heavy .58-caliber lead balls squarely in the chest. The trim young officer rolled backwards off of his horse and fell lifeless to the floor of the Virginia forest that was his home. The three remaining Federals dutifully reported the exchange and appropriated the wealthy Rebel's gear according to their means of portage. Corporal Randolph Robertson, originally of Bedford, Massachusetts, was the ranking man present and got the expensive Belgian pistol as a result.

Robertson survived the war and brought Obadiah Sutcliffe's enormous handgun home as a souvenir. The gun was passed down as various generations grew old and died until finally nobody cared any more. At that point the old gun went to an antiques dealer who ultimately sold it to me where it could once again receive the veneration it deserved.

The Howdah pistol is not something you want to be on the receiving end of. This 20-gauge side-by-side Howdah Hunter model is offered by Pedersoli in kit form.

Many Civil War soldiers, particularly in the South, were expected to help provide their own weapons and kit. Mounted Cavalry troops like these frequently carried a variety of unconventional arms. (Wikipedia)

While this Colt Navy is chambered in .44, most of the revolvers of the day were .36-caliber and packed about as much downrange horsepower as a modern .380 ACP. A Howdah pistol hanging from your saddle would have offered quite an advantage in the close fight.

A Truly Inglorious War

The preceding narrative is pure fiction. However, tragic little dramas of that sort played out all across the American South. The Civil War claimed 620,000 American lives. To put that in perspective, we have as a nation lost 644,000 lives combined in all of the other armed conflicts in which we have been embroiled from 1776 until yesterday. The reason for this disproportionate level of carnage is obviously because all involved were actually Americans.

The Civil War was fought using Napoleonic tactics lightly sprinkled with a dusting of industrialization, and the result was carnage most breathtaking. Citizen soldiers from both North and South mustered by the hundreds of thousands to settle national quarrels most acrimonious, many of which were rendered moot within a generation by technological advances. In many cases, particularly in the South, soldiers augmented their issue kit with privately purchased equipment, uniforms, and weapons.

The Civil War was America's bloodiest conflict by a profound margin. Patriots on both sides died for causes both just and not so much. Evidence of this hemoclysmic conflict litters the Deep South even today. (Wikipedia)

Origin Story

Back in the early 19th century the world was a very different place. Man was still a minor tenant on this warm blue orb, so such stuff as pollution, nature conservation, and environmental stewardship were not germane in a world still governed by tooth and claw. Well-heeled Europeans with means struck out into the wilds to demonstrate their mastery of pretty much everything, imposing their will on both man and beast alike.

One of the more popular pursuits for the rugged individualist with both time and cash was big game hunting. Putting the head of a rhino on your wall or reclining before a rug conjured from a tiger's pelt marked one as a true gentleman of distinction. As a result, a closet industry arose supporting the guns and gear needed to allow Europeans, predominantly the English, to scratch that itch.

Elaborate orchestrated affairs characterized the tiger hunts of the British Raj that succeeded the Mughals. Large hunting parties would sally forth atop dozens of elephants and slaughter the big cats wholesale. Hunters and guides would ride on palanquin platforms called howdahs mounted upon Indian elephants and shoot the animals using the sundry sporting arms of the day.

The word howdah spawns from the Arabic “hawdaj.” There is a similar Hindi term “houdah.” Both words mean something akin to “a bed carried by a camel.”

A Bengal tiger is indeed an impressive specimen with an adult male topping out at nearly five hundred pounds. Sharing the top of an elephant with one would be a disconcerting prospect indeed. As a result, period gunmakers like Holland and Holland, Lancaster, and Braendlin Armoury produced large bore multi-barrel handguns that were, in the verbiage of the day, “Good for scraping an irate tiger from the trunk of one’s riding elephant.”

The Howdah in Film

The 1996 thriller The Ghost and the Darkness prominently features a Howdah pistol. The movie stars Val Kilmer and Michael Douglas and depicts a real life tale of carnage and mayhem that occurred in 1898 in modern-day Kenya. An English military engineer named John Henry Patterson was trying to complete a rail line that spanned the continent only to have his efforts thwarted by a pair of maneless male African lions with a taste for human flesh.

These two animals ultimately claimed between 28 and 135 lives before being shot and killed by Patterson. While the movie certainly takes liberties with

Government Melts Over
270 Million Silver Dollars

But collectors get an unexpected second chance

It's a crime.

Most Americans living today have never held a hefty, gleaming U.S. silver dollar in their hands.

Where did they go? Well, in 1918, to provide aid to the British during WWI, the U.S. government melted down nearly half of the entire mintage—over 270 million silver dollars. If all those missing silver dollars could be stacked, they would tower over 400 miles into the sky! If laid in a chain, they would span 6,400 miles—enough to stretch from New York to Los Angeles more than 2½ times!

These vanished coins were not just any silver dollar—they were America's largest circulated coin, the beloved Morgan Silver Dollar. Each Morgan Dollar is struck from nearly an ounce of 90% fine silver and measures a massive 38.1mm in diameter. Morgan Silver Dollars were the engine of the American dream for decades. Created by famed American coin designer, George T. Morgan, they feature Lady Liberty's radiant profile and a majestic eagle, symbols of American strength and prosperity. Since their inception in 1878, they jingled in the pockets of famous and infamous Americans like John D. Rockefeller and Teddy Roosevelt, and desperadoes Jesse James and Al Capone. Today, Morgan Silver Dollars are one of the most collected coins in America.

Lady Liberty takes a Final Bow

Just three years after the massive meltdown, the government gave the Morgan Silver Dollar a final chance to shine. In 1921, facing a serious shortage, the mint struck Morgan Silver Dollars for one more brief, historic year. Today, the last-ever 1921 Morgan Silver Dollar belongs in the hands of collectors, history buffs, or anyone who values the artistry and legacy of this American classic.

A Never-Ending Hunt for Collector Quality

Millions more silver dollars were melted over the past ninety years and today, private hoards account for virtually all the surviving Morgan Silver Dollars. We should know—we're constantly on the hunt for these historic Silver Dollars, and jump at the chance to secure coins in collector-worthy condition. And what luck—we've managed to locate more than a thousand 1921 Morgan Silver Dollars, all in fantastic Extremely Fine (XF) condition. These coins actually circulated in American commerce nearly 100 years ago!

Saved from Destruction, but Bound for Extinction

It's been estimated that as few as 15% of all the Morgan Dollars ever minted have survived to the present day. And the number grows smaller with each passing year. The 1921 Morgan Silver Dollar is the last of its kind. But you can get one now before they're only a memory. Your chance to own this legend won't last long, so get yours today—and at a fantastic value!

My Belgian-made 20-gauge Howdah pistol is a classic example of the 19th century gun maker's art.

The Gun

According to the dealer from whom I got my gun it dates back to the 1850's. Similar examples I have found online were all made in Belgium. The smooth-bore barrels are formed from Damascus steel. The finish is a delightful worn patina, and the wood is tired but intact.

The two nipples are plumbed to feed the disparate barrels, and the left-sided ramrod is secured in place with a small stop. The sole sighting aid is a modest front bead. The lock and trigger guard sport some attractive scrollwork.

The stocks were once checkered, but the vagaries of time and countless sweaty palms have taken their toll. There is a faint LG Crown proof mark, and the

Each nipple is obviously plumbed to a different barrel.

The stocks were once ornately checkered, but time and hard use have worn them smooth.

No telling what this little shield means, but it looks neat.

The compact compartment in the butt likely carried percussion caps.

The business end of this big bore Howdah still looks plenty serious.

I'm a sucker for an antique smoke pole. Discovering a Howdah pistol with an established connection to the Civil War inspired this article. (Wikipedia — Memecry2) serial number is likely an artificially inflated five digits. There is a brass lanyard ring on the butt along with a neat little compartment that I suppose was intended to carry percussion caps. When I took this bit completely apart the remnants of some nearly 200-year-old wadding fell out.

As near as I can tell the gun used in The Ghost and the Darkness is the same as mine with a little gratuitous window dressing added. This additional appendage looks almost like a bayonet lug. The definitive source for all things movie gun-related, the Internet Movie Firearms Database (imfdb.org), reports a persistent rumor that the movie armorer did indeed customize the weapon used in the film to make it more distinctive.

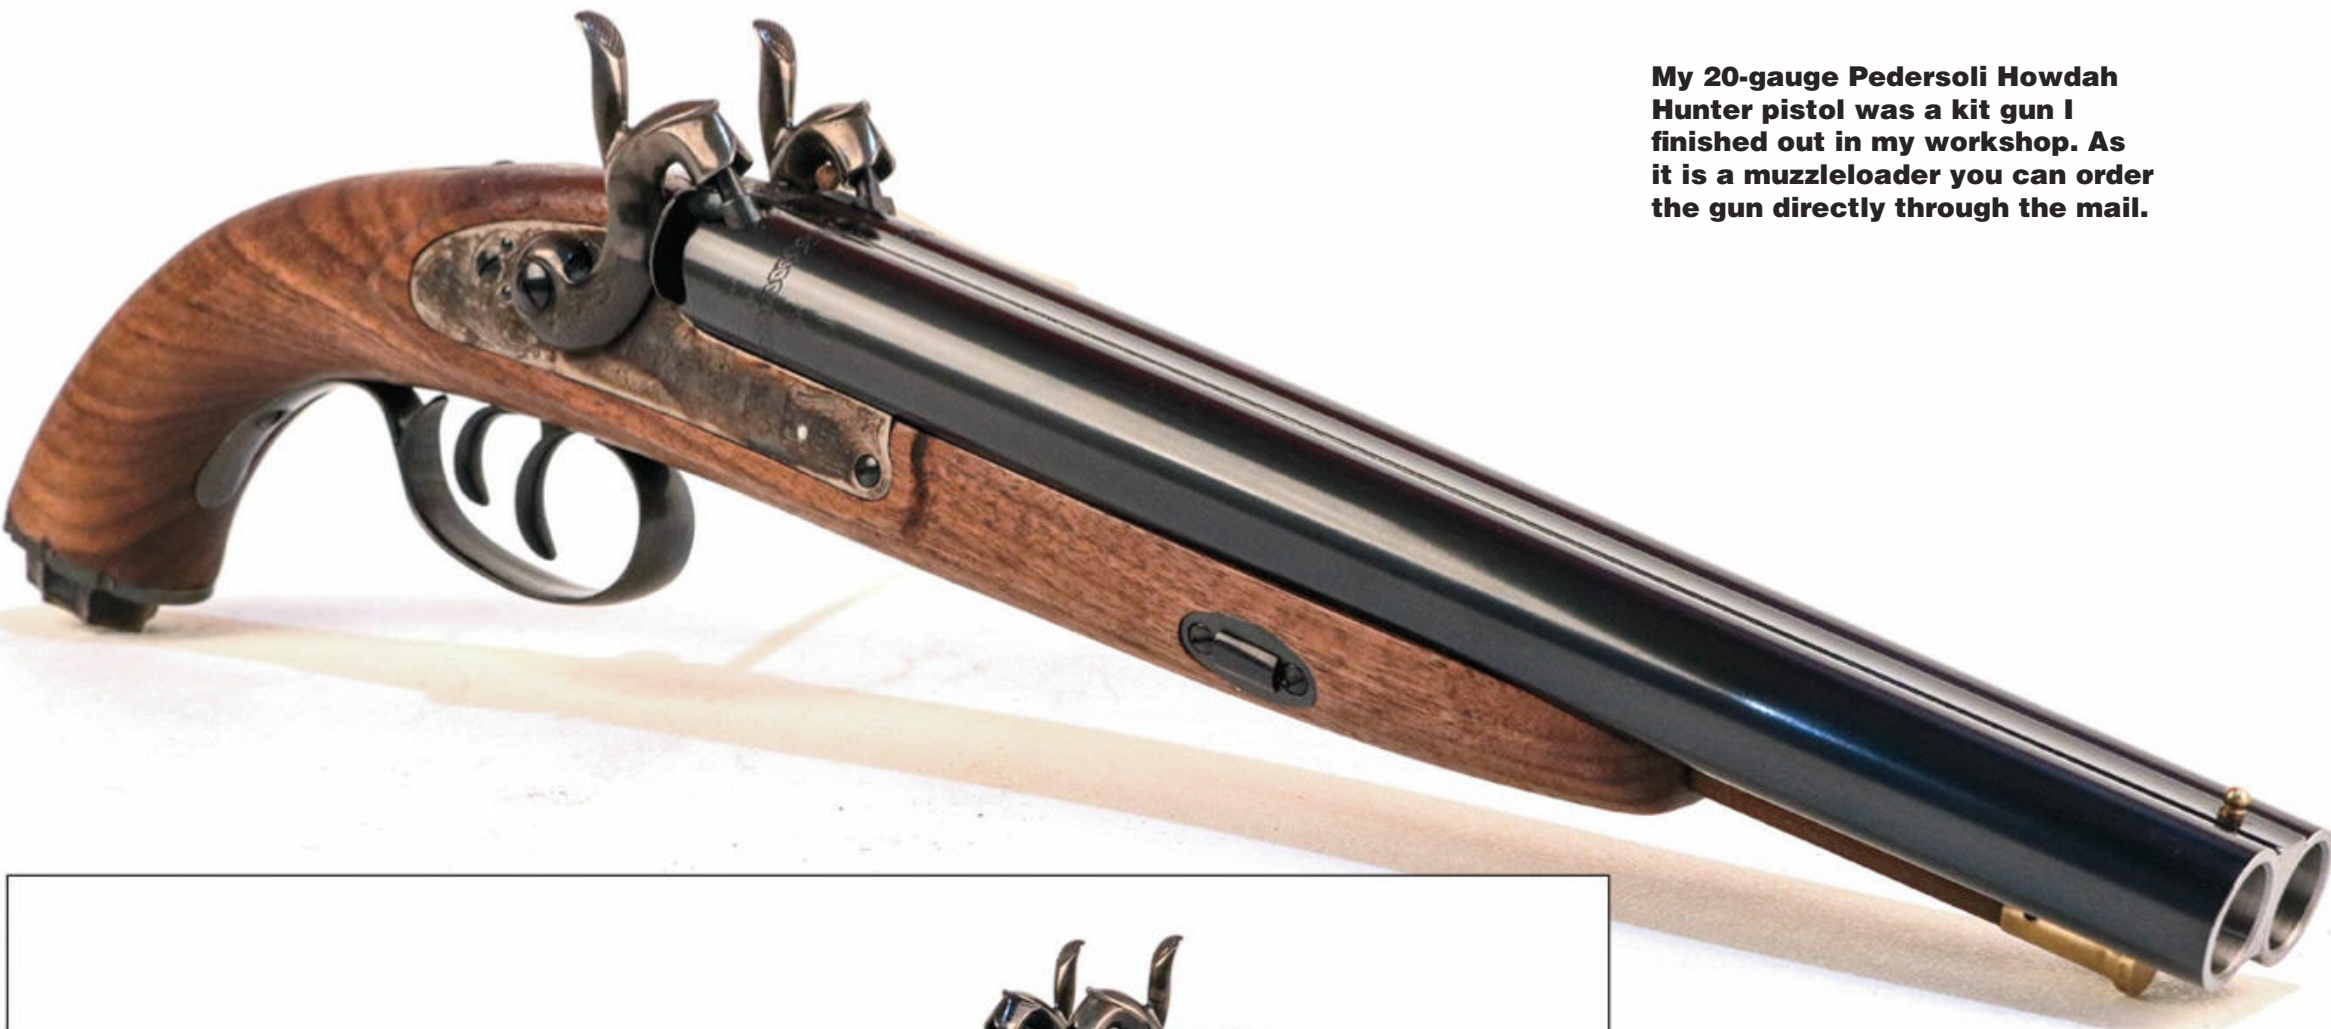

Impetus

In 1998, I was picking through a Vicksburg, Mississippi, antique store and happened upon a side-by-side Howdah pistol among a collection of muzzle-loading weapons with known Civil War provenance. This unique gun was marked $400 and was purportedly used operationally by the forebear of a local Southern family. Despite my willingness to trade my spare kidney for the weapon I was unable to strike a deal, but I have pondered potential Civil War applications for such arms ever since. That encounter was the inspiration for the spot of fiction that launched this project.

The Howdah concept transcended the development of the metallic cartridge. Most of the post-Civil War designs operated like giant derringers with the barrel assemblies pivoting open for loading. In size and weight these late-19th century cannons were comparable to a modern big bore magnum revolver or Desert Eagle.

Modern Treatment

It took me fully two decades to finally land a Howdah pistol of my own, and this one an example I cannot safely fire. Should you wish to get into the Howdah game without investing twenty years for a

My 20-gauge Pedersoli Howdah Hunter pistol was a kit gun I finished out in my workshop. As it is a muzzleloader you can order the gun directly through the mail.

A Dremel tool makes the project much easier, but it could yet still be undertaken by hand.

Finishing out the Pedersoli Howdah Hunter requires nothing more than a little sanding and polishing as well as the application of a final finish.

wall hanger then Pedersoli has your iron. These top-quality Italian-made hand howitzers are exquisitely well executed and markedly cheaper than the originals. If life went sideways you could even pack one of these bad boys for close-in counter-tiger work as well.

These nifty guns are marketed on this side of the pond by the Italian Firearms Group. They are available as either fully finished weapons or easy-to-complete DIY kits. I built mine from a kit. These Pedersoli guns can be had as Title 1 firearms chambered in .410/.45LC requiring transfer through an FFL dealer. As these versions sport rifled barrels they do not require NFA registration. Muzzle-loading variants come in .50 and .58-caliber chamberings as well as a massive smoothbore 20-gauge. The muzzle-loading sorts can be shipped, in the free states at least, straight to your door.

The stocks are left oversized so they can be sanded to suit.

The Pedersoli Howdah Hunter is completely shootable. The gun is a delight on the range.

The fit and finish on my kit were great. The barrel assembly comes blued. It is a fairly straightforward thing to sand and stain the furniture. Mark the limits of the pommel and locks with a pen, remove the stock, and carefully sand the wood down until it matches. Some walnut stain and the liberal application of Tung oil bring out the awesome.

There are animal scenes engraved on the locks. Pedersoli even includes a spare set of blued screws, so you need not run the risk of nicking or deforming them. Polish the raw steel bits carefully with a Dremel tool and finish them out with cold blue, and you have an end result that is functional while simply dripping with character.

Trigger Time

There’s no way I would try to shoot my antique Howdah pistol. However, the new-made Pedersoli version is built for the range. Some idiot on YouTube packed one of these puppies with four times as much powder as the manufacturer recommends and failed to die (From that at least. Given his degree of stupidity he has likely succumbed to something unrelated by now.)

Pyrodex available at most any gun shop works just fine. However, for maximum cool points you need good old-fashioned black powder. Goex is the only show in town. My Pedersoli Howdah runs best with ffg and is rated for up to 50 grains.

The 20-gauge Pedersoli Howdah will accept a .59-caliber patched ball should rampaging rhinos really be a problem in your neighborhood. The enterprising whitetail hunter looking for a challenge could have some fun with that. However, I invested in a sack of plastic 20-gauge shotgun wads and can now shoot pretty much anything I can shove down this gun’s gullet.

Birdshot, buckshot, or even flechettes run like a champ. However, I prefer good, old-fashioned plated BBs. They’re cheap and would dispatch a venomous Mississippi serpent straight to hell before Satan even knew he was coming. I have found that you do need to pack each barrel tightly with scrap

Playing with the Pedersoli Howdah Hunter lets you nourish your inner Teddy Roosevelt without driving your tree-hugging neighbor with the “Fur is Murder” bumper sticker into his safe space.

The bores of the Howdah Hunter are chrome plated for durability, but proper cleaning and maintenance are still critical.

Anybody even reasonably handy with tools can produce a beautiful gun out of the Pedersoli kit so long as you’re fairly meticulous and patient.

A Howdah Hunter pistol by Pedersoli is a great range toy with a little real-world practicality for the seasoned gun nerd with a yearning for adventure.

The Howdah pistol is a throwback to a time when there weren't so many rules.

The “Diablo” 12-gauge double-barreled pistols, available from American Gun Craft (AmericanGunCraft.com), are very robust and Howdah-like black-powder firearms which do not require an FFL to purchase (in most states).

t-shirt material, paper wadding, or something similar lest the recoil of one barrel dislodge the charge in the other.

If you do want to try your hand hunting with this gun keep in mind that the half cock position is the weapon's sole safety. Trust me, this is not the pistol you want going off unexpectedly. Triple K does make a nice leather carry rig specifically designed for this firearm.

The bores are chrome-plated, which is a nice touch, but all black powder guns demand meticulous cleaning lest they rust to uselessness. Open everything up once you get home, remove the nipples, and flush the bores out with warm soapy water. Mop everything out vigorously until it's dry and store it underneath a thin sheen of gun oil.

My period Civil War Howdah is the culmination of a lifelong dream. The Pedersoli version is more fun than a barrel of monkeys on the range. For the gun nerd serious about his craft adding a Howdah reliably amps up the awesome. FN

Free Book Reveals the 37 Items a Former CIA Officer Uses to Survive a Crisis

In the next few days, I am (with your permission) going to send you a brand-new copy of my book, The Escape Bag Blueprint: 37 Items You Must Have to Survive a Crisis. And, not only am I going to rush it to your doorstep, I'm going to send it to you for FREE!

Inside the book (which normally sells for $29) I reveal the gear used by intelligence operatives, spec-ops, and even the “Hard Targets” unit to survive in some of the deadliest environments on earth. However, before I tell you the reason why I’m sending you this book and why I’m going to send it you to you for free...

Let me quickly tell you who I am and why you may wish to listen to what I have to say. My name is Jason Hanson. I'm a former CIA Officer and a New York Times bestselling author. I've been blessed to share my strategies on dozens of television shows including Shark Tank, Fox News, and the NBC Today Show.

Because of my background, I've had to survive in some pretty rough environments. And now I use what I've learned to teach people, just like you, how to protect themselves and their families during times of crisis.

In my free book I want to send you, I've condensed my years of intelligence training and decades of gun knowledge into the most in-depth guide to packing the ultimate bug out bag. I strongly encourage you to claim your book today at the website below.

If you're like others I've spoken with, you're probably wondering why I'm willing to give my book away for free. Well, the answer is simple. God has blessed me with a wonderful life and I feel a strong obligation to share these spy and survival secrets with others. Giving this book away for free is one way of doing that.

But, to be totally upfront, this offer is only good until I run out of books in our warehouse and I am giving away this book on a first come, first served basis. So, I hope you'll drop everything and visit my website to claim your free book today. The website you want to visit immediately is www.FreeBook37.com

RIFLE

Fusil Automatique Léger
de la Fabrique Nationale

PART II

“THE STRONG ARM OF THE FREE WORLD”

By Paul Scarlata

In Part I of this series, we discussed the development of what is probably Fabrique Nationale's most famous product, the Fusil Automatique Léger (FN-FAL or simply FAL). Development between 1937 and the early 1950s by FN's chief engineer Dieudonné Saive (1888–1970).

It was introduced on the market at a time when most armies were seeking a replacement for their WWII era semiauto (e.g. M1 Garand) and bolt action (e.g. No. 4 Lee-Enfield) rifles. The FAL was a gas operated, selective fire rifle that was fed from a detachable 20-round magazine and was chambered for the, then new, 7.62mm NATO cartridge.

It was first adopted by Canada in 1954 as the Rifle, 7.62mm, FN (C1) followed in quick succession by Belgium, West Germany, Austria and Israel. The U.S. Army considered it but eventually chose the Springfield Armory designed M14 rifle.

Austria's post-war army, the Bundesheer, purchased 20,000 FAL from FN in 1955 known as the Sturmgewehr 58 (StG 58). Three years later they obtained a license to manufacture it at Steyr-Daimler-Puch. It was similar to the West German G1 but used a synthetic buttstock and carrying handle, did not accept a bayonet and the design of the flash hider allowed firing rifle grenades without a separate launching tube.

Latin American armies had been long time customers of FN and the FAL attracted a lot of attention south of the Rio Grande where it was generally referred to as the Fusil Automático Livano.

Venezuela was first off the mark in 1954 with an FAL, but in a proprietary caliber — the Cartucho 7mm Livano. Based upon a rimless, bottle necked case 49mm in length topped with a 140-grain Spitzer bullet traveling at 2,700 fps, Venezuela purchased 5,000 FALs in this caliber which were later re-barreled when they began production of a licensed copy chambered for the 7.62mm NATO.

The following year Argentina purchased FALs from the Belgian makers and in 1960 negotiated a license to produce them locally at the state arsenal, Dirección General Fabricaciones Militares (DGFM).

DGFM produced the standard FAL, the heavy barrel Fusil Automático Pesado (FALO) and two versions of the Para, one with a standard length 20.9-inch barrel and another with a 17.2-inch barrel. The Saive's most famous design was the Fusil Automatique Léger, the legendary FN-FAL.

Argentines marketed their rifles throughout Latin America with Bolivia, Uruguay, Peru, Honduras and Columbia all purchasing large numbers of them while others showed up in Croatia during the fighting following the breakup of Yugoslavia and, reportedly, in Nigeria during the Biafran Civil War.

The next Latin American nation to enter the burgeoning market for FALs was Brazil. Between 1958 and 1962 they purchased a number of them from FN for trials and limited issue and in 1964 adopted it as standard. Two years later they obtained a license to produce the Fuzil 7,62 M964 (fixed stock), the Fuzil M964A1 (Para) and FAP (Fuzil Automático Pesado — FALO) at Fábrica de Armas Itajubá (also known as IMBEL).

IMBEL has also sold large numbers of the M964s to other Latin American armies. IMBEL-made receivers became known for their quality and they have been used by a number of American gunmakers to produce semiautomatic versions of the FAL for sale in the U.S.¹ In the late 1970s, by some roundabout means, a number of IMBEL M964s showed up in Rhodesia whose army was waging a violent bush war against Marxist guerillas.²

In 2009, IMBEL introduced an updated, folding stock carbine, the Fuzil 7,62mm M964 A1 MD1 — PARAFAL which featured a shorter barrel, a redesigned buffer spring and number of aluminum and polymer components. Numbers have been issued to Brazilian police and army units.

Mexico also adopted the FAL and assembled standard and Para rifles with FN supplied parts at the government arsenal in Mexico City, Dirección General de Industria Militar del Ejército.

In 1958, India began a series of trials to find a replacement for the long-serving No. 1 Mk III* Lee-Enfield rifle. Included in the trials were both Inch and Metric-Pattern FALs and the Indian Army decided the latter was what they wanted. When they approached FN about a license they ran into a German-like situation when FN demanded that India purchase the necessary machinery to manufacture the rifle from them, hire Belgian technicians to oversee production and insisted upon high royalties.

With national pride offended, the Indians set the engineers at the Ordnance Factory Tiruchirappalli

A Mexican police officer armed with a locally made FAL.

(OFT) to, in effect, reverse engineer the FAL incorporating features of both Inch and Metric-pattern FAL which they felt best suited their needs. The resulting Rifle 7,62mm 1A and 1A1 was a semiauto rifle, most of whose parts will not interchange with either Inch or Metric-pattern FALs and use wooden furniture with several different styles of half and full-length handguards.

Much to the irritation of FN, unlicensed production began in 1960 resulting in FN threatening a lawsuit. To placate the Belgians the Indians placed orders with FN for a number of FALs, FALOs and GPMGs (General Purpose Machine Guns).

The Jewish state of Israel adopted the FAL and FALO in 1955. Known as the Rov've Mittan (Rifle, Self-loading) or Romat for short, and the Makleon for use as an SAW. Israel obtained a license to manufacture both weapons at Israeli Military Industries (IMI).

Romats were originally capable of selective fire but were later converted to semiauto only. They are recognizable by their distinctive handguard with a forward perforated sheet metal section while the rear wood section has a very distinctive shape and they do not have any type of muzzle brake or flash hider.

After testing the FAL against the Heckler & Koch G3A3 and the American AR-10, the South African Defense Force (SADF) adopted the FAL and the FALO. They placed orders with FN and arranged for licensed production at Lyttelton Engineering Works (now Denel Land Systems) in 1960. They are known in South African service as the R1 (selective fire), R2 (Para), R1 HB (FALO) and R3 (semiauto only).

The SADF used all models during their anti-terrorist campaigns on the borders with Angola, Mozambique and Namibia.

In August 1963, the UN Security Council established a voluntary arms embargo against South Africa because of its apartheid policies. Two years later the embargo was extended to cover arms sales to Rhodesia. With their usual suppliers in Belgium and the UK cut off, the Rhodesians obtained 30,000 R1s from South Africa, in addition to numbers of L1A1s and ex-German G1s, the latter reportedly from Portugal.³

FALs proved one of FN’s most popular products and it, along with the L1A1, has been adopted by the armies and police forces of over ninety nations.⁴ Because of its prevalence and widespread usage among the armies of many NATO and first world countries during the Cold War, it was earned the title “The Right Arm of the Free World”.

The FALs only real competition on the world market was the Heckler & Koch G3A3. It was cheaper and easier to manufacture than the FAL which resulted in a number of countries obtaining licenses to produce it locally.⁵ In general it could we said that any non-Soviet Bloc army that did not use the FAL used the G3A3 with many of them using both rifles.

The FAL first saw combat service during the so-called Malaysian Emergency (1948–1960) when British forces, along with Commonwealth troops from Australia, New Zealand, Rhodesia and Fiji, fought Communist insurgents, supported by Red China, who were attempting to take over the strategic Straights region. Later in the conflict the FAL was replaced by British and Australian-made L1A1 rifles.

In 1956, British, French and Israeli units invaded Egypt and captured the Suez canal which the Egyptians, under Gamal Abdel Nasser, had nationalized threatening international trade. Israel invaded Egypt first, sending their armies into Sinai in October 1956. The French and British followed shortly after, concerned that lack of control over the Suez Canal would lead to severe international financial repercussions. British units used limited numbers of L1A1 and the Israeli Defense Forces (IDF) first used the Romat and Makleon rifles in combat.

During the fighting in Suez both the British and Israelis experienced problems with their rifles being fouled by desert sand. The British solution to this was to machine “sand cuts” or “scraper recesses” on the breech block carrier, breech block and the receiver body in the shape of WWW which removed sand from the action during firing. The Israeli solution was to replace the folding cocking handle with a fixed one that could be used as a bolt assist allowing the shooter to manually push the bolt into battery in case of a failure to feed or chamber a round, a solution similar to that used on the U.S. M16A1 rifle.

Between 1957–1967 British SAS troopers used the L1A1 fighting guerilla movements backed by Saudi Arabia, Egypt, and the USSR in Aden and the Persian Gulf sheikdoms of Muscat and Oman.

That July, Moise Tshombe proclaimed the province of Katanga, whose mineral output accounted for nearly 50% of all Congolese revenues, an independent nation. To train his Gendarmerie, Tshombe hired white mercenaries from Europe, South Africa, and Rhodesia who temporarily fought off UN attempts to reintegrate Katanga with the Congo. The FAL was one of the most common rifles used during the fighting in the Congo.

Mercenaries of Col. Mike Hoare's 5 Commando armed with FAL and FALO rifles.

To prevent the Communist inspired Simba rebels from taking over the country, Tshombe was recalled and made president. He once again used white mercenaries, under such legendary commanders as Colonel "Mad Mike" Hoare, who quickly put down the Russian and Cuban supported Simba rebellion.

The primary weapons of the mercenaries and government troops was the FAL and FALO. Colonel Hoare was particularly impressed with FAL's selective fire capability saying "Every man with an FN rifle was now the equivalent of a light machine gunner With this firepower, four men with FN rifles were a potent force." With the overwhelming firepower the FAL provided, he felt it was the perfect weapon for the mobile tactics 5 Commando used to repeatedly defeat the numerically superior Simba rebels.⁶

The Portuguese army also used various models of the FAL, along with G3A3s and AR10s, during their long running campaigns (1961–1974) against nationalist, black guerillas in their African colonies of Mozambique, Guinea-Bissau and Angola.

As was mentioned above, after Rhodesia declared its independence from Great Britain it became involved in a brutal, fifteen-year bush war against communist backed black nationalist guerillas.

The primary rifle of such famous Rhodesian units as the Selous Scouts, Rhodesian Light Infantry, Rhodesia African Rifles and Rhodesian SAS were various models of the FAL.⁷ While some were bought before independence from Belgium and Britain, after the UN Arms Embargo was imposed additional FALs were obtained from South Africa, Portugal and various "unofficial" sources.⁸

The FAL was widely distributed throughout Africa especially in former British and Belgian colonies. Both the L1A1 and FAL saw service with both sides during the bloody Biafran/Nigerian Civil War (1967–1970) and limited numbers of L1A1s were manufactured at Nigeria's Kaduna Arsenal as the NR1 Model 7.62.

Grenada, 1983. Soldiers of the Caribbean Defense Force, armed with L1A1 rifles, assisting U.S. forces during the Invasion of Grenada.

1957. Soldiers of the IDF, armed with Romats and Makleons during the Six Day War.

Lebanese Christian militiamen — and women — armed with FALs.

1965. Indian troops, armed with FAL rifles, during the 1971 border war with Pakistan.

Since the Suez Crisis Israel continued to be involved in two major wars with its Arab neighbors — the Six Day War (1967) and the Yom Kippur War (1973) — in addition to ongoing anti-guerilla operations against the PLO, Hezbollah, Black September, Hamas and other Arab terrorist organizations. Until replaced with the 5.56mm Galil and M16A1 rifles in the mid-1970s, the Romat and Makleon continued as the primary long arms of the IDF.

Since gaining their independence in 1947, Hindu dominated India and Muslim Pakistan have been at odds resulting in wars in 1947, 1965, 1971 and 1999 in addition to ongoing border skirmishes down to the present day. During this time the Rifle 7,62mm 1A1, supplemented with FALs, was the primary arm of the Indian army while the Pakistanis fielded a mixture of G3A3 and AK-type weapons.

When the U.S. became involved in South Vietnam in 1962 and 1964 respectively, Australia and New Zealand as members of SEATO, contributed troops to the fight against the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese. They were originally military advisors but eventually the former provided 61,000 combat troops while New Zealand sent approximately 4,000.

The primary personal weapons of the Aussies and Kiwis was the Lithgow-made L1A1 which was much admired for its reliability and the 7.62mm cartridge's lethality and penetration in the jungle bush. They were supplemented with light weight M16A1s provided by the U.S. Under increasing pressure from anti-war organizations in both countries withdrew their forces in 1972.

In Latin America, the FAL saw periodic use in the "internal political readjustments" (e.g. military coups, revolutions, etc.) common to our Southern neighbors. Prior to Castro’s takeover of Cuba (1973) the U.S. government had cut off military aid to the Cuban dictator Batista whose government then ordered a quantity of FALs from FN while rebel forces were supplied with some FALs from the, then, leftist government of Venezuela.

After they had overthrown Batista, Castro’s government purchased in excess of 20,000 FAL and FALOs from FN. Many of the Cuban FALs were “sanitized” by removing the Cuban crest which left a circular cut in the magazine housing. When the Cuban armed forces were reequipped with Soviet-pattern weapons the FALs were handed down to the militia and some saw use during the ill-fated Bay of Pigs Invasion (1961) when U.S. supported anti-Castro Cubans invaded the island. Cuban supplied FALs were also used by “national liberation” forces in El Salvador, Nicaragua, Chile and Venezuela.

During the Nicaraguan civil war (1979–1990), FALs were used by both forces of the dictator Somoza, the communist Sandinistas who overthrew him and the Uruguayan soldiers armed with FAL and FAL Para rifles.

Bolivian soldiers armed with FAL Para rifles.

Falkland Islands, 1982. Argentine troops, armed with FAL rifles, occupy the British Falkland Islands.

1982. Smiling Royal Marine Commandos celebrating the surrender of Argentine forces on the Falklands.

Falkland Islands, 1983. L1A1 armed British forces engaging Argentine troops. Note the soldier in the center has a 30-round Bren Gun magazine in his rifle.

Some of the thousands of FAL rifles the Argentines surrendered to the British in the Falkland Islands.

Libya, 2014. A Libyan rebel in Tripoli armed with an FAL.

U.S. supported Contras who opposed the Sandinistas. In 1981, the CIA secretly purchased several thousand Argentine FALs which were supplied to the Contras and these rifles have since appeared throughout Central America in use with other organizations.⁹

FALs saw service with both sides during the short-lived Cenepa War between Ecuador and Peru (1995), and have been, and are still being, used against the increasing communist inspired revolutionary groups in Central and South America.

One of the most notable Latin American conflicts was the three month long Falklands War in which both sides' primary personal weapons were the L1A1 rifle and the Fusil Automático Livano.

On April 2, 1982, Argentine troops occupied the British colony of the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic. The two nations had a long simmering dispute over the ownership of the islands and Argentina's military junta felt the move would be popular with their citizens. They also believed that Great Britain would never respond militarily. They were wrong!

Britain dispatched a naval task force and land forces, including the SAS, Royal Marines, Gurkhas, Royal Commandos and Paratroopers landed on the islands on May 21. Overcoming initially stiff Argentine resistance the British forced the invaders to surrender on June 14th.

The British captured in excess of 10,000 Argentine FALs and machine guns and while some of the FALs were apparently deactivated and used for training purposes, most were disposed of by dumping them in the South Atlantic Ocean.¹⁰

While the FAL has been replaced in most armies that used it by 5.56mm weapons, they are still standard issue in a number of Latin American, African and Middle Eastern countries. During the First Gulf War (1990–1991) some British units, who were reportedly dissatisfied with the 5.56mm L85A1, continued to use the L1A1.

Today FALs and L1A1s — like the German Karabiner 98k Mauser in the post 1945 period — are likely to turn up anywhere contending groups are firing rounds at each other ... for decades to come.

Myanmar (Burma). A female Karen guerilla armed with an FAL.

Rebels (terrorists?) in some African country armed with an L1A1 and a Soviet rocket launcher.

A child soldier somewhere in Africa poses with an FAL.

MICHAEL BLOOMBERG: THE MOST DANGEROUS PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE EVER

By Mark Chesnut

With the horrible group of gun-hating and gun owner-hating politicians running for the Democrat presidential nomination, there's no doubt the Second Amendment is in peril. Even with the recent departing of Cory Booker — who had so much disdain for liberty, guns and gun owners that it was hard to even fathom — a little research shows the rest of the candidates are just as bad.

Joe (stick your shotgun out the door and fire two blasts) Biden was a huge fan of the failed Clinton “assault weapon” ban of the 1980s. And Elizabeth Warren, when she's not trying to make herself into something she isn't, speaks out in favor of nearly every anti-2A scheme imaginable.

In fact, every Democrat candidate fighting to get on the ballot is on record to be in support of banning many common semi-automatic firearms owned by millions of law-abiding Americans, passing dangerous “red flag” laws that imperil both citizens and law enforcement, forcing so-called “universal” background checks that can never be universal since criminals don't follow laws, and repealing the Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act (which shields legal gun manufacturers from lawsuits when criminals illegally use their lawfully-produced products to commit crimes).

In my opinion, however, former New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg — a man who thinks he knows what's best for every man, woman and child in America and wants to bend them all to his whims — is the most dangerous of all.

“Wait a minute,” you might say. “What about Hillary Clinton? Is Bloomberg worse than even her?”

I believe he is. Bloomberg is smarter, shrewder and more presentable than Clinton was before the 2016 elections, when nearly every public appearance she made turned into some kind of train wreck. More importantly, despite all of her questionable contributions, Bloomberg has way more money — he has a net worth of nearly $56 billion — to pursue the office than she did.

While he's not in the so-called front-runners of the Democrat pack right now, Bloomberg is willing to spend billions of dollars of his own money to buy his way to the White House. In fact, Bloomberg has said he'll spend up to $1 billion of his own money to see a Democrat elected president this fall — even if he's not the one who wins the nomination.

Once there, the amount of destruction he could do to our country is unthinkable. That's easy to know by the way he talks about freedom, liberty and the concept of citizen's rights.

"I do think there are certain times we should infringe on your freedom," Bloomberg once said during an interview with NBC.

prejudice — indeed racial prejudice — shown in his support of such policies as stop-and-frisk throws his ability to govern fairly even more into question.

In 2015 during a speech at the Aspen Institute, Bloomberg indicated his support for racially-targeted gun control, a move that gun owners didn't take well, regardless of race.

"It's controversial but, first thing is all of your, 95 percent, 95 percent of your murders and murderers and murder victims fit one M.O.," Bloomberg said. "You can just take the description and Xerox it and pass it out to all the cops. They are male minorities

Nevada residents were warned by the NRA and other pro-gun groups that the measure would do much to criminalize otherwise lawful activities by gun owners who do not understand the new restrictions, and there was no indication that it would stop criminals from acquiring guns — especially since arms traffickers tend to rely heavily on straw purchases.

Despite efforts by gun-rights supporters and more than half of the county sheriffs in the state opposing the initiative, the ballot question narrowly passed. Later, it was struck down by a court for being unenforceable, which was a victory for gun owners. But it

...every Democrat candidate fighting to get on the ballot is on record to be in support of banning many common semi-automatic firearms owned by millions of law-abiding Americans...

Does Bloomberg completely misunderstand that the Bill of Rights, which includes the Second Amendment, was created solely to limit government, not give government the power to control citizens in whatever way it wishes? That just might be the case. Or, perhaps he just doesn't care about such old-fashioned concepts as liberty and inalienable rights. Such archaic notions just don't seem to belong in a possible Bloomberg-run United States of America.

Bloomberg The Mayor

In fact, Bloomberg's know-it-all attitude was certainly on display during his NYC reign. Nearly everyone likely remembers his attempt to ban large soft drinks with lots of sugar. In fact, it was more than an attempt as he actually managed to make such drinks illegal. Eventually, however, that nanny-state regulation was overturned by the courts.

While that has nothing to do with guns, it shows how Bloomberg will pursue any legislation he personally considers good, whether or not it is constitutional or not. And his anti-gun advocacy during his mayoral terms cannot be overstated.

While in office, Bloomberg was instrumental in creating Mayors Against Illegal Guns, a misleadingly named cabal of anti-gun mayors dedicated to the same gun-control schemes he advances. With the help of a friendly so-called "mainstream" media, mayors from the group were given a bully pulpit to attack gun rights in a much more public manner. Ironically, many of the members later faced criminal charges of their own.

As mayor, Bloomberg also sued out-of-state gun dealers, accusing them of illegally selling handguns that were later used to commit crimes in NYC. Of course, the vast majority of gun dealers are law-abiding folks. Yet Bloomberg didn't mind dragging them all through the mud in this excellent example of the "death by a thousand cuts" scheme. Innocent gun dealers were still required to spend thousands upon thousands of dollars defending themselves against such allegations.

Disdain for 2A rights is just one aspect of Bloomberg's character as far as liberty is concerned. His 15 to 25. That's true in New York, it's true in virtually every city in America. And that's where the real crime is. You've got to get the guns out of the hands of the people that are getting killed."

Such a statement brings up an interesting question: Once Bloomberg has disarmed minority males under 25 (an impossibility, obviously), what group might he target next? Will it be non-minority males under 25? Or perhaps white males over 50? Once the precedent is set of infringing on a constitutional right based on age and race, what liberties can't be trampled with no recourse?

Taking It National

Aside from the heartbreak he brought to New York City's law-abiding gun owners, Bloomberg's extravagant spending to try to put other states under New York City-style restrictions is even more maddening. Imagine a rich former NYC mayor thinking he knows what's best for citizens of states where he doesn't even live and likely hasn't even visited.

Yet that's where Bloomberg has put much of his emphasis over the past several years. For example, look what Bloomberg did in Nevada and Maine in the November 2016 election.

was a short-lived victory, indeed. In 2019, the Nevada legislature passed a similar measure, with much of the anti-gun funding coming from Bloomberg and his affiliated groups.

Much the same situation occurred in Maine, where Bloomberg dumped more than $3 million into anti-gun coffers to try to pass unconstitutional restrictions. Question 3 was similar to Nevada's Question 1 and would have basically ended common firearms transfers through so-called "universal" background checks. (Never mind that they can't be "universal" since criminals don't buy their guns through legal means and wouldn't follow the law anyway, but that's another story.)

Of course, it was already illegal in Maine to knowingly sell a firearm to someone who is a prohibited person, as well as for a prohibited person to buy, own or possess a firearm. So, in effect, the proposed law would only affect law-abiding gun owners — just as such laws have always done in other places they were instituted.

At the time, state Rep. Beth O'Connor, summed up the proposal best: "The proponents of this legislation try to make you think you will be safer if there are more laws on the books regarding guns. This is absolute Disdain for 2A rights is just one aspect of Bloomberg's character as far as liberty is concerned.

In Nevada, Bloomberg heavily funded a ballot initiative that would punish law-abiding gun owners but have no effect on criminals or violent crime. Question 1 was designed to outlaw private gun sales and even loans by requiring all firearm transfers to take place through the agency of a licensed dealer, with both parties present and a background check conducted. Note that it applied to all transfers, not just sales — meaning a Nevada resident wouldn't be able to gift a treasured heirloom gun to a child without getting an FFL holder involved.

rubish. What these individuals really want is ultimate control, and the only way they can have that control is to disarm the American people. But no one should be subservient to any government entity."

Chris Cox, then-executive director of NRA-ILA, described Bloomberg's high-dollar participation in Maine perfectly: "[Michael Bloomberg] believes he should decide everything from how big a soda you can buy to how much salt you're allowed to have in your food to what colors are acceptable for the new roof you want to put on your home. Now Bloomberg's pouring millions into trying to make the state of Maine just like New York City when it comes to gun control."

In the end, Mainers narrowly defeated the measure with just under 52 percent of the vote. Yet they aren't out of the woods yet, as Bloomberg-funded anti-gun politicians continue to push for background checks through legislative means. Also, Maine's law-abiding gun owners are continuing to fight other Bloomberg-backed restrictions. Already this year, the legislature is considering bans on certain types of firearms and expanding arbitrary zones where law-abiding citizens are left defenseless.

responsible for violent criminals illegally using their products. With an agenda like that, Watts should consider running for the Democrat presidential nomination! She'd fit right in.

Of course, when you got to Everytown's website, the first thing that pops up on your screen is the opportunity to donate to "help save lives." Even with a billionaire cash-daddy like Bloomberg, the group still tries to get donations from gullible Americans to use to fight against those same Americans' freedom!

Further, consider Bloomberg's "gun news" website The Trace. On the day of this writing, the lead story

Following the high-profile shooting at a high school in Parkland, Florida, where sheriff's deputies waited outside until the massacre was over, U.S. District Judge Beth Bloom ruled that sheriff's deputies were not constitutionally obligated to protect the students.

"The claim arises from the actions of [the shooter], a third party, and not a state actor," Bloom, a Barack Obama appointee, stated in her ruling on the case. "Thus, the critical question the Court analyzes is whether defendants had a constitutional duty to protect plaintiffs from the actions of [the shooter]."

That's not the first time such a ruling has been made. The 1981 case Warren v. District of Columbia

In the end, the main reason Bloomberg — and any other anti-2A politicians, for that matter — must be kept out of the Oval Office is deep-seated disdain for gun owners and their well-being.

Most recently, Bloomberg has been instrumental in the anti-freedom fiasco taking place in Virginia. With his seemingly endless funds and rabble-rousing associates, Bloomberg is, in large part, responsible for much of the chaos in the Commonwealth, where the situation is teetering on the brink. One can only hope and pray that 2A supporters there win the battle, as a victory by the other side would not only greatly curtail freedom there, but would embolden Bloomberg-funded politicians in other states to press harder to infringe our right to keep and bear arms.

Building A Movement

While Bloomberg has managed to do irreparable damage to Second Amendment rights over the years, he hasn't done it alone. The network he has built, through sheer amounts of money spent, has helped him find success he could never have experienced as just one rich, loudmouth politician who hates gun owners.

Consider the Bloomberg-created and Bloomberg-funded anti-gun group that calls itself Everytown for Gun Safety. While the group doesn't represent every town and doesn't care a whit about gun safety, the name, and Bloomberg's bucks, made it the darling of anti-gun media outlets who can't wait to rush to leader Shannon Watts for quote nearly every time a criminal uses a firearm to commit a crime.

Watts, in fact, has become a huge celebrity because of her Bloomberg-funded elevation. Now near the top of the so-called "gun safety" movement (read as: gun-ban movement), she can parade around and spread her myths about gun owners and push her agenda to further curtail the rights of average Americans without ever receiving hard questions from the adoring media.

Don't believe Watts and her group aren't really about "gun safety"? A quick look at the group's website proves my point. Among other freedom-crushing proposals, Everytown supports bans on semi-automatic firearms, "universal" background checks, "red flag" laws that disarm Americans without due process, even laws making lawful gun manufacturers on the website was about Second Amendment sanctuary cities. And while the author tried to pretend to be unbiased throughout much of the story, she ended it with a quote from Brady Campaign Vice President Christian Heyne. Consequently, the final thought left in readers' minds was: "We're not talking about a grassroots movement. This is coming from this gun industry that, frankly, can feel the fact that the public no longer finds them relevant."

Other headlines that day included "Virginia Democrats, Undeterred, Continue to Advance Gun Bills," "Shootings Across the Country Left Dozens Injured This Weekend," "Suspected Neo-Nazi Had Built Functioning Machine Gun," and "Millions of Guns for Sale: Few Questions Asked." And, of course, there was a plea for funding as if the founder, Bloomberg, is too broke to foot the bill.

Stories from The Trace often make their way into so-called "mainstream" media without readers knowing they are getting their news from a decidedly anti-gun source. Those media outlets will happily trot out the same bogus statistics The Trace uses — many of which, incredibly, came from "research" by foundations also funded by Bloomberg and charged with finding a "link" between gun ownership and crime!

Note that The Trace isn't always wrong about guns and related matters. But the few times it does get something right, few in the "mainstream" media bother to report it since it doesn't fit their agenda.

White House Bound?

In the end, the main reason Bloomberg — and any other anti-2A politicians, for that matter — must be kept out of the Oval Office is deep-seated disdain for gun owners and their well-being. They say the police will protect us, so we don't need to own or carry a gun to defend ourselves and our families. They tell us that's what police are for, and that we don't have enough training or savvy to use a gun when the chips are down. And they say all that despite the fact that courts have ruled multiple times that law enforcement officers have absolutely no obligation at all to protect us.

actually set the precedent that has been upheld multiple times. In that case, two attackers repeatedly raped and brutalized three women in a Washington, D.C., rooming house. The police were called by two women on the third floor hearing an attack downstairs, and they responded but didn't enter the building.

The two women called police a second time, but no officers were dispatched. Thinking they heard police downstairs, they came out of hiding and were discovered by the attackers, who spent several hours raping all three women.

Ultimately, the court ruled against the plaintiffs based on, "the fundamental principle that a government and its agents are under no general duty to provide public services, such as police protection, to any particular individual citizen."

That ruling is just one of many reasons gun owners can't let Bloomberg or any other anti-gun politician — which includes every current Democrat presidential candidate — deny us our God-given rights to self-defense as protected by the Second Amendment. Encourage any Democrat friends you might have to vote against Bloomberg in the primaries. While the other candidates are just as bad on 2A issues, Bloomberg's billions make him extremely dangerous heading into November's general election.

A Bloomberg presidency could spell the end of Second Amendment freedom as we know it. We owe it to our children and grandchildren to not let that happen on our watch.

BRAND NEW M1 GARAND BARRELS

Currently produced in USA by a 30 Year Top Line Barrel MFG

.30-06 barrels in stock!

Newly manufactured barrels ready to install on your M1 Garand Receiver. Made by one of the premier barrel manufacturers in the USA, these .30-06 caliber barrels are manufactured from 4140 steel with 4 groove rifling and a 1 in 10 twist. Beautiful high quality parkerized replacement barrels. Because they are made here in the US, they do not have the ungainly import barrel markings. A great chance to get rid of that 'Blue Sky' or other import marked barrel and also restore accuracy! Barrels should always be installed by a qualified gunsmith. .30 06..... $149.95 GRD157

BM59 MUZZLE BREAK FOR THE M1 GARAND RIFLE

Italian Army designed military muzzle break/flash hider coveted for its sleek sporty profile, made the BM59 and M1
Garand perform better and channel 'blast gases' away from the front sight view. This was one of the first major improvements the Italians made to the M1 Garand. Attaches to the Garand by taking off the gas cylinder lock, attaching the muzzle break and lock ing in with the gas cylinder screw. Simple conversion and you can sell off your gas cylinder lock to cover all of the cost! Watch your rapid fire accuracy increase!

SERIOUS ABOUT COMBAT SHOOTING? ROTO 4M

COMPENSATED BARREL

DOD contractors have been buying up our Roto 4M barrels because they work! MODEL 1911 COMPENSATED BARRELS in 3 calibers will reduce recoil and speed your target acquisition especially during multiple shots. Takes a minute to install our barrel that comes with Barrel Bushing and permanently attached and ported Compensator. Also there is less weight on the muzzle end than with conventional screw on muzzle compensators. Most people comment on the change of performance, but also that it looks great too! OUTSTANDING ASSORTMENT OF QUALITY 1911 BARRELS

ROTO 4M HAMMER FORGED

.45 ACP, 9MM & .38 SUPER

Built to precise tolerance by a special hammer forging process, these barrels are the best you can buy! The hammer forging forms the barrel around a precision mandrel and holds the tolerance to .0001". This is much better than the typical broached barrels found elsewhere Note: 5" & 6" .45 barrels are L.H. twist all others are R.H. twisted

COMPARE THE ROTO-4M BARREL FOR ROUNDNESS AGAINST A STANDARD BROACHED BARREL FROM A WELL KNOWN MANUFACTURER. ALL ROTO-4M BARRELS ARE MADE IN THE USA. Brand new extra length barrels for all Colt/1911/Government Model type automatic pistols. These barrels are made by the Special Roto 4M Hammer forge process which produces the most precise and consistent barrels for the best accuracy. Minor hand fitting may be necessary for some guns.

Barrels do not include link & pin. Link & pin available w/barrel purchase for additional $5.00 C45281 Available in:

WORLD WAR I PATTERN .45 1911 MAGS WITH LANYARD LOOP C45295

- 1911 mag with lanyard loop..... $11.95
Buy 3 mags for $34.95 and get a free pistol lanyard for the mags. These are rarely seen now a days. Best way to participate in fast combat shooting where you must drop and load mags quickly. Avoids damage to your dropped magazines. WWI Cavalry and vehicle crews would keep 2 or 3 mags on a lanyard for combat purposes! Original mags came with hemp twine so you could tie them to the lanyards individually. These magazines are made on the same automated machinery as our famous magazines shown above. This is the mag to have if you want to be serious about CQB firing and reloading quickly. Very popular for modern combat pistol tournaments.

SPECIAL OFFER! 2 lanyard loop mags w/lanyard and U.S. military double mag pouch $23.50 C45318

BACK IN STOCK !!! Sarco has obtained some original #7 small parts in bulk and has had the bayonet blade newly manufactured so we can finally offer this very rare bayonet originally issued in 1945. While it fits the #4 rifle, it was chiefly made for the Sten Mk5 SMG. The blade has been manufactured with tempered steel with edge and the original classic 'Tufnel' fiber reinforced grips have been added. The grip is superior and more comfortable than probably any bayonet made up till 1945. Makes a very formidable fighting knife too! While it was exceptionally made, it suffered from finicky swivel catches and a muzzle ring that seemed out of place when used on Sten Guns. Nevertheless, these bayonets have never made it onto the world market place in suitable numbers and the originals command extremely high prices. Ours is first class, although like the original manufacturers like BSA, Elkington, R.O.F. Poole/ Newport, we too have not overcome the finicky catch system, but have improved the blade with an edge. Extremely Limited. New. Bayonet with steel scabbard.....$125.00 BAY349

GERMAN MODEL 1898 / 05 SAWBACK BAYONET & SCABBARD
Commonly referred to in the family of German Butcher Blades, this was a second variation to the non-sawback butcher blade bayonet that chiefly became to the mainstay of WW1 German bayonets. The 'sawback' blade makes it quite intimidating and was far stronger than the 1898 sawback. Our new made bayonet comes with markings on the ricasso and is complete with steel scabbard $69.95 BAY302

These are truly Scarce as Hens Teeth! For whatever reason there are very few of these remaining on the collectors market so we have thoughtfully had them made from an original utilizing strong leather, brass cover and correct fasteners, and markings. This was used by Cavalry, on motorcycles, jeeps, half-tracks etc. Originally made for the full stock M-1 Carbine, it also fits similar sized firearms like the Ruger® 10/22® with the Sarco stock. Originals can fetch $400-$700. Sarco brings this quality leather item to you at the fabulous price of

US Krag & Springfield Kerr Rifle Sling

Original pattern Kerr Sling as used on the Krag and 1903 Springfield rifles complete with the 'Nobuckl' sling hardware, correct weave, and khaki color. This was also originally used on the 1921 & 1928 Thompson SMG before they shortened it during the war. This is the best of the canvas wartime slings and original 'Kerr Rifle' slings are extremely hard to come by today! Long length of sling is @45", and short length is @14.5". New..... $22.00 SLNG104

BRAND NEW!! Springfield 1903A3 Barrels

Yes we just received a shipment of high quality 4140, 4-groove barrels with shallow chamber, extractor cut, front sight cut out for base, with a 1 in 10 twist. We had these made with a shallow chamber (.044") to accommodate for receiver variations. In the white and unmarked! $110.00 SPF387 (Very Limited Availability)
Can be converted to an '03 barrel by adding an '03 rear sight sleeve!

Springfield Rifle Leather Kerr Sling

This was the most popular sling a 'sportsman' could get in the early part of the last century. Expensive to make, this leather sling sported the best brass latch and adjustment system of the day and even the military contracted for the brass Kerr 'NOBUCKL' system for their canvas slings from WW1 thru WW2. Fits loads of rifles and will last a lifetime of use. High quality and a classic! New..... $24.00 SLNG115

AVAILABLE AGAIN!! SWEDISH MAUSER HIGH FRONT SIGHTS

Specially made tall front sights so you can zero your rifle at 100 yards. Most of these rifles shoot very high at short range as their minimum sight setting is 300 meters. Use of our high sight blade will allow you to get accurate sightings at 100 yards. Made to look like the original sights. These sights install in the existing dovetail. Made in U.S.A.. Blued steel, Milspec quality. Swedish M96 and M38 Tall Front Sight. Now back in stock $13.95 MSR283

PRECISION SWISS MILITARY CLEANING KIT

The 'Swiss Watch' of Rifle Cleaning Kits! Precision Swiss military cleaning kit is far above the quality of typical Military or Commercial cleaning kits. Probably will never see another kit of such quality combining steel and brass parts carefully machined and assembled with everything needed to care for the chamber, bore, and exterior of a firearm. 5 rods combine to handle barrels up to 31" in length. 2 bakelite containers of lubricant, 2 different style bore brushes, 1 chamber brush, bore mirror, cleaning jag, short style chamber cleaning handle and rod handle are packed conveniently in a water resistant rollup. Great for calibers .30 Cal. thru 8mm $14.95 CLN167

ABOUT HIGH CAPACITY MAGAZINES: Although we try to stay abreast of current State gun laws, it is a herculean task with over 20,000 laws on the books. By ordering, you are stating that you are complying with your Local & State laws. Most States allow large capacity magazines. Some do not. If you are unsure on this issue, contact your Local or State law enforcement to confirm what is allowed. This is a partial list of States with some hi capacity restrictions: NJ, NY, MA, MD, HI, KS, CO, CT, IL and various county laws therein including Chicago, D.C. CA residents check your laws as they are changing.

SKS RIFLE PARTS & ACCESSORIES

SKS PHENOLIC STOCK W/ FOREND

China's military machine under Mao, ramped up production of Phenolic or synthetic stocks during the late 60s when it became clear that the tensions along the Sino Soviet border were intensifying toward 'all-out war'. Wood was too precious to strip for the manufacture of millions of Chinese SKS rifles so synthetics were applied to AKs and SKSs alike. Good stocks are getting hard to find. We have a few dozen original SKS stocks w/forend. Some minor color blemishes, but overall very good $89.95 SKS100

FRENCH
FOREIGN LEGION
BERET OF THE FAMED 2E REP
PARATROOPER

Sarco has a very limited 'run' of wool Green Berets with the famed French Foreign Legion
2e REP badge.

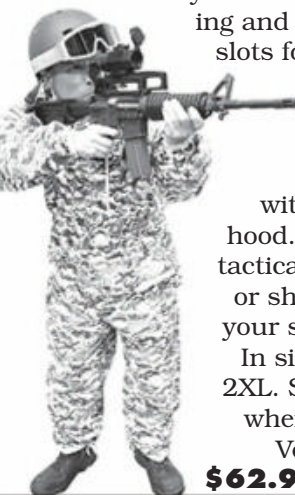

A unit famed for fierce fighting, especially in Indochina and Algeria, but also a familiar sight on the frontiers where Mercenaries are operating. Three sizes available.
Beret with Badge$29.95 HAT10
(U.S. sizes 7-1/4, 7-1/2, 7-3/4)

CONVERTIBLE DIGITAL SNOW JUMP SUIT

Sarco has a really effective snow camouflage jump suit that has removable arm & leg segments and can be worn over existing clothing. Capacious pockets and a double zip front make this a great 'wilderness', 'hunting', or 'garage work' suit. Remarkably effective camouflage pattern as used by current military contractors. Sizes LG, XL, 2XL. Specify size when ordering.. $115.00 MISC796

HINDUKUSH SNOW
CAMOUFLAGE SET

New contemporary snowsuit in digital pattern is so good, we had to photograph it against a dark background! Pixelated to the point that it blurs wonderfully against a white or speckled winter forest background, this set is worn over your existing clothing and has access slots for reaching your hip or cargo pockets.
Complete with pull over hood. Perfect for tactical, hunting, or shredding on your snowboard!
In sizes XL and
2XL. Specify size

"That the people have a right to keep and bear arms;...." Virginia's request for a Bill of Rights, 1788.

"The right of the people to keep & bear arms has been recognized by the General Government; but the best security of that right after all is, the military spirit, that taste for martial exercises, which has always distinguished the free citizens of these States;.... Such men form the best barrier to the liberties of America." Gazette of the United States, October 14, 1789, 211, col. 2.
