

A family of three (a man in a red and black plaid shirt, a woman in a green vest, and a child) are walking through a rocky desert landscape. A white dog is running in the foreground. In the background, a large motorhome is parked on a dirt path. The landscape is filled with large, rounded boulders and a winding river in the distance.

glisten up

On the surface, spring cleaning is an endless list of chores to complete, problems to tackle, and items to dust, polish, and organize. But look a little deeper at what makes a home and appreciate that it's the essence of you reflected in every corner. Try these tips to ensure you both shine brighter than before.

1/SHELVE IT
After giving the fireplace mantel and bookcases the refreshing wipe down they need with Pledge® Multisurface Cleaner, think outside the boxiness and break up the monotony with unexpected flair. Trend alert: Use hooks on the outside of shelves to hang a mirror or artwork.

2/CLEAR IT
A minimalist vibe makes smaller spaces feel cleaner and more expansive. Be smarter about storage and keep only what you frequently use in nearby cabinets. Reveal the natural beauty of stainless appliances, sealed granite counters, and glass windows with Pledge® Multisurface Cleaner.

3/SWAP IT
Instead of splurging on new furniture, consider mixing up what you already have. Bring outdoor chairs indoors for a fun contrast with an existing dining table. Repurpose that tufted bedside bench into a living room coffee table. Tired of that vintage chandelier in the entryway? Give it a new home over the bathtub.

COUNT ON IT

Multitalented, multiuse, and ready to clean just about everything, Pledge® Multisurface Cleaner is designed to be tough on messes but gentle and safe on your favorite household surfaces.

7 things that I'm excited about this month

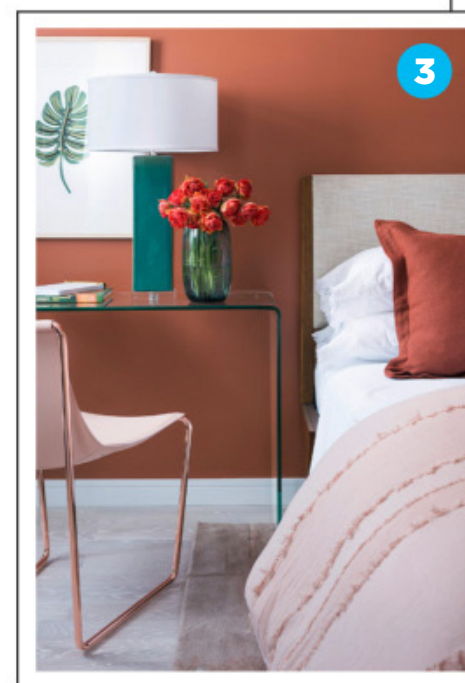

1 A hanging light this quirky and cool? Yes please!

1 This pendant looks like it's made of metal, but it's plastic—lightweight and easy to hang, espesh if you're a DIYer. PAGE 21

2 A vase that doubles as a utensil crock feels like the thing my kitchen is missing. PAGE 106

3 Got a smallish bedroom? Try a glass desk instead of a nightstand; it does double duty and looks so sleek. PAGE 15

4 Photo shoots are even more fun with a dog around. Rosie the goldendoodle arrived camera-ready with pink bows. PAGE 67

5 Bull's-eyes are everywhere—love our on-target clock project (page 43) and the vintage vibe of this print in a Washington, D.C., home. PAGE 80

6 Most farmhouse-style houses are all white. That's why this one in Seattle, painted Academy Gray by Valspar, is awesome. PAGE 92

7 Designer chair? Nope! It's handmade with terrazzo decals. Since they're repositionable, you just can't mess up. PAGE 43

This pattern is taking over social media.

all the answers

at last!

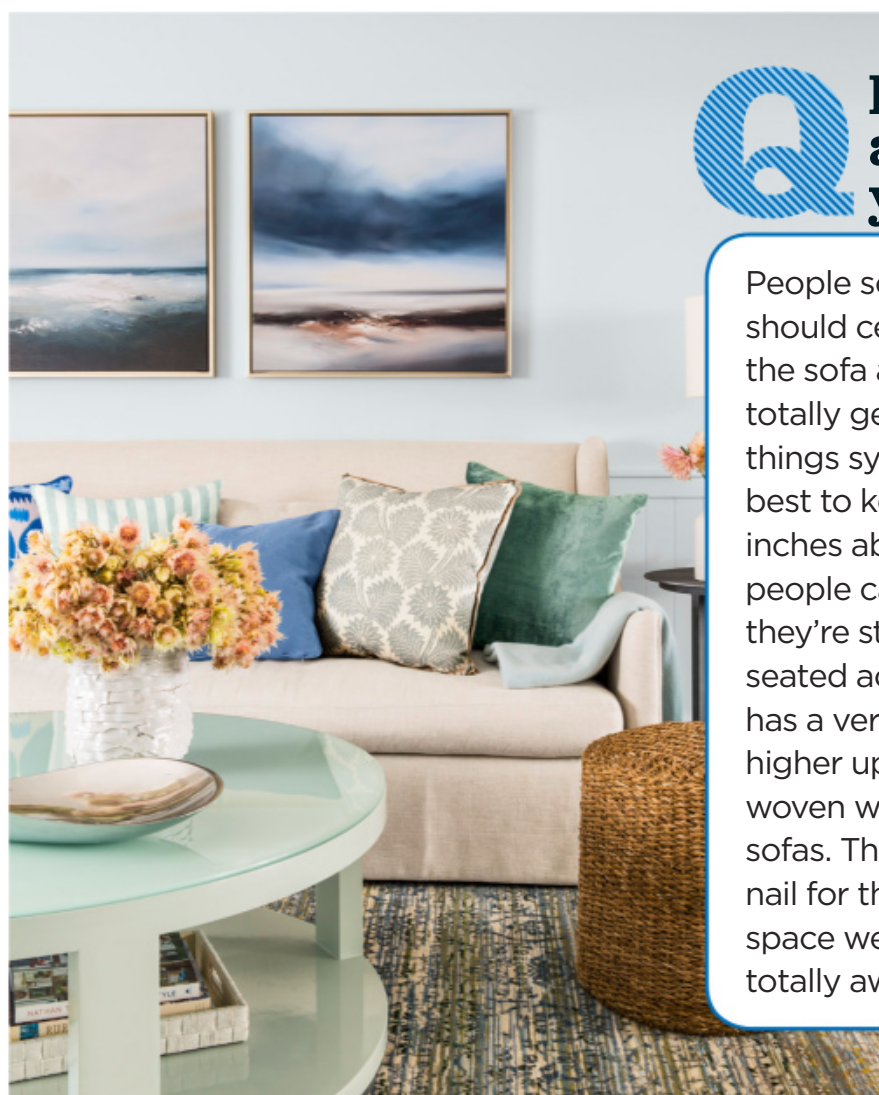

Decorating may be a whole lot of fun, but some decisions can make your head hurt. HGTV pros tackle the biggies.

Q Roman shades or curtains—how do you choose?!

I love the look of curtains in pretty much any room for the finishing touch they add. However, if I want to show off a room's window trim, I tend to prefer Roman shades. I'll also go with them if I already have a tall piece in a room, like a big ornate hutch—curtain rods draw the eye upward and might steal the limelight.

Tiffany Brooks,
HGTV Smart Home 2020

Q How high above a sofa should you hang art?

People sometimes think they should center art between the sofa and the ceiling, and I totally get the impulse to make things symmetrical. But it's best to keep artwork about 8 inches above the sofa. That way, people can enjoy it whether they're standing in front of it or seated across from it. If the sofa has a very low back, go a little higher up. I'm really into putting woven wall hangings above sofas. They require only a single nail for the hook, fill the space well, and look totally awesome.

Jasmine Roth,
Hidden Potential

Q What's the best paint finish for a bathroom?

Every element in a bathroom comes down to how it interacts with water. For paint, you want a finish that acts as a moisture barrier while providing a surface that's easy to wipe down—helpful if you notice water streaks or dust. I do! Semigloss is slightly shinier and optimal for water protection, but satin paints can work best in an older bathroom—they don't show imperfections in the wall as much as a paint with more sheen does.

Jonathan Scott,
Property Brothers: Forever Home

[fun decorating]

Q When is it good to do an accent wall?

I like it when accent walls call attention to an architectural detail, like a slanted ceiling. They can also delineate a special area in a house, such as an entry. Even an awkward jut-out, with a little paint, can be turned into a design feature. My favorite accent walls right now are dynamic ones with thick stripes; a graphic mural done with paint; or a big, colorful decal. You actually don't even need a wall; you can paint or wallpaper the back panels of built-ins.

Orlando Soria,
Unspouse My House

Q How do you know which size rug is right for a room?

A rug should be large enough that it goes under the main pieces of furniture in the room, typically the sofa in a living room and the bed in a bedroom. Any smaller and it'll look awkward. That said, a rug should not be so gigantic that it looks like wall-to-wall carpeting. It's why I leave at least 6 inches of floor on each side between the rug and the wall. Don't worry if a rug doesn't hit the smaller pieces in a room, like the TV credenza, because the sofa has already grounded the space.

Q Is it OK to use faux flowers and plants?

It's more than OK, it's great! Faux flowers and plants look so real these days, my eye has been tricked more than once. I use them all the time in my projects and in my own house, especially orchids, since live ones can be an expensive habit. The best kinds look like and feel like the real deal—some are even potted in fake dirt. I've found beautiful fake ferns and greenery at Target and succulents at Pottery Barn. Terrain is also a good resource. It might feel like you're splurging to buy a good-quality faux plant, but they pay for themselves in a couple of months.

Q How do you figure out the ideal-size table for a dining room?

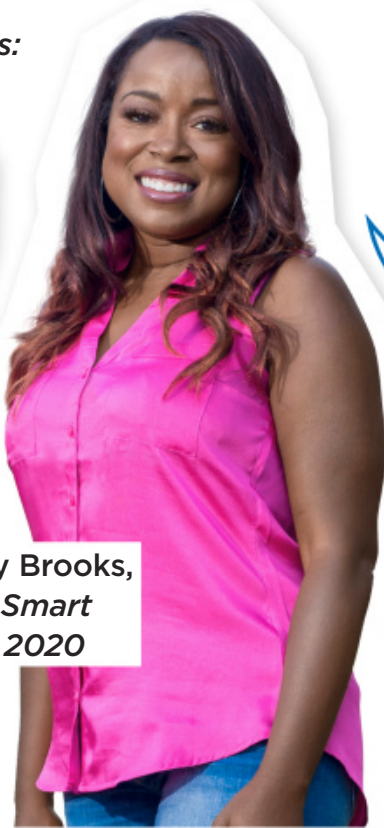

You'll want to assess both the size of the room and how many people will usually be sitting around the table. My dream look is slightly oversize, with a large dimmable light fixture above, to make a room feel cozy. Measure 4 feet from each wall to allow for clearance of the chairs; that's as big as you can go. Even if you don't have people over often, don't skimp—get a table that's too small and a room won't feel lived in. It will seem like you are just visiting your own home.

Q What are some rules of thumb for mixing patterns?

Pairing patterns of different scales is the way to pull it off—think a large, widely spaced pattern with detailed, compact designs. For example, an airy floral on a wallpaper in a bedroom would go well with a bench that has thin stripes. You also want to make sure there are some coordinating colors between the patterned pieces. And if they have bold colors, there should be neutral elements in the room to balance them out—much like how a “Jonathan” sets the stage for a “Drew!”

Q Is there a way to tell how much light a room needs?

It's a three-step process. First assess how you feel about the lighting that's already in place, including recessed cans, chandeliers, and pendants. Basically, the total amount you need has to do with the size of the space and how much natural light hits it. (There are online lighting calculators to help figure this out.) Then consider how you'll spend time in the room and task lighting. In a living room, for example, you may want a sconce near your sofa or the favorite chair where you do your reading. Start with that and live in the room. Then fill in holes with soft lighting that can also enhance your decor, like a chic table lamp.

Q Is there a no-fail way to put together a gallery wall?

Don't be nervous! Imperfectly spaced gallery walls with a mix of shapes and sizes and even different frames are the best kind. If you're worried about messing up, gather all the pieces you want to include. Lay them out on the floor the way you'd like to see them arranged on the wall and snap a pic with your phone so you remember. I like to throw art up freehand, but if crooked is going to drive you crazy, start from the bottom left corner and work your way up for the best chance of keeping things straight. Sometimes I mix in an object like a horseshoe for a look that's both casual and curated.

Leanne Ford,
Restored by the Fords

Q Are there any tricks for blending old and new furniture?

The old console an aunt handed down or that you scored at a flea market can blend beautifully with modern pieces if it's balanced with at least one other prominent vintage element, such as a rug or piece of art. You can top the antique piece with modern knickknacks to blend it even more. One thing I always do before bringing a vintage piece into the mix is consider what each part will do for the room. As much as I might love the style and shape of a chair, for example, it's possible the fabric could make the entire room look dated. In that case, I'll have it reupholstered in a pattern that's fresher.

LIGHTNING ROUND: sofa cushions: one long one or multiples?

One if you love to lounge, two or three if you have a family and spillage (unavoidable in our house when I was a kid)!

—Drew Scott, Property Brothers: Forever Home

Q Where should you start and stop paint colors in an open floor plan?

You shouldn't! Dividing up an open floor plan with colors defeats the whole idea, which is to create a cohesive, airy feeling. I like a light neutral color for the entire space. Two of my go-tos are Alpaca and Rhinestone, a greige and a light gray, both by Sherwin-Williams. Only transition paint colors when there's a spot that has a natural break, like painting an L-shaped hallway one color on the long part and another color around the corner.

The blue decals used here come in a long roll with paper backing. Cut strips slightly taller than the drawer fronts, and remove the drawers and knobs. go big and go home

The unique way to spiff up a space: Try one (really cool!) giant piece.

48 inches wide!

a supersized mirror

"An enormous mirror can help a small area feel larger and a dark space appear lighter," says Seattle, WA, blogger Sabrina Tan of Gypsy Tan, who hung this brass-framed one from CB2 in her entry. That, plus head-to-toe outfit checks on the way out the door.

a can't-miss-it clock

Sorry, smartphones: "Hanging a massive clock with a pretty face infuses a space with sophistication," says designer Kimberley Kay, who spruced up this San Francisco, CA, home office. The 30-inch-by-30-inch HomeGoods score matches the niche's boxiness, while oak warms the walls and the chrome table legs.

More than 6
square feet of fab!

a larger-than-life sink

While this trough-like station is a great fit for a family with four kids in Jupiter, FL, it's also a statement piece, says designer Kara Hebert. She paired the black-and-white Kohler sink with Thomas O'Brien sconces that mimic the two-tone look. For a kick, she picked tiles by Cement Tile Shop in shades of blue. Mirrored medicine chests and a roomy basket provide storage.

Stretches 5 feet across!

a sky-high headboard

"A room that's all neutral needs impact," says designer Shea McGee, and this grand custom headboard does the trick. To suit the minimalist look the Park City, UT, couple craved, it's upholstered in solid-color linen. Stacked framed nature scenes on either side enhance the serene feel while also filling all that space above the nightstands.

It's 6½
feet high!

Spans
30 inches!

a ginormous light

"I wanted to break out of the typical nautical theme," says designer Jenny Keenan of this beach home on Sullivan Island, SC. An XL vintage chandelier made of capiz shells has jellyfish-esque luminescence. (For a similar one, try the 30-inch capiz shell pendant from RH.) Jenny paired it with patterned blue pillows—not a seahorse in sight!—and had a coffee table made by Grey Area to resemble a surfboard, with bright stripes and a shellac finish.

[fun decorating]

regal chairs

“Since you can see the dining room when you walk into this house in Newport, CA, I chose tall velvet head chairs in the homeowner’s fave color,” says designer Robin Strickler. (They’re Martin host chairs covered in Lillian August Columbo teal fabric). Nailhead trim makes them even more stately: “Whoever sits in them feels like a king or queen!”

a jumbo lamp

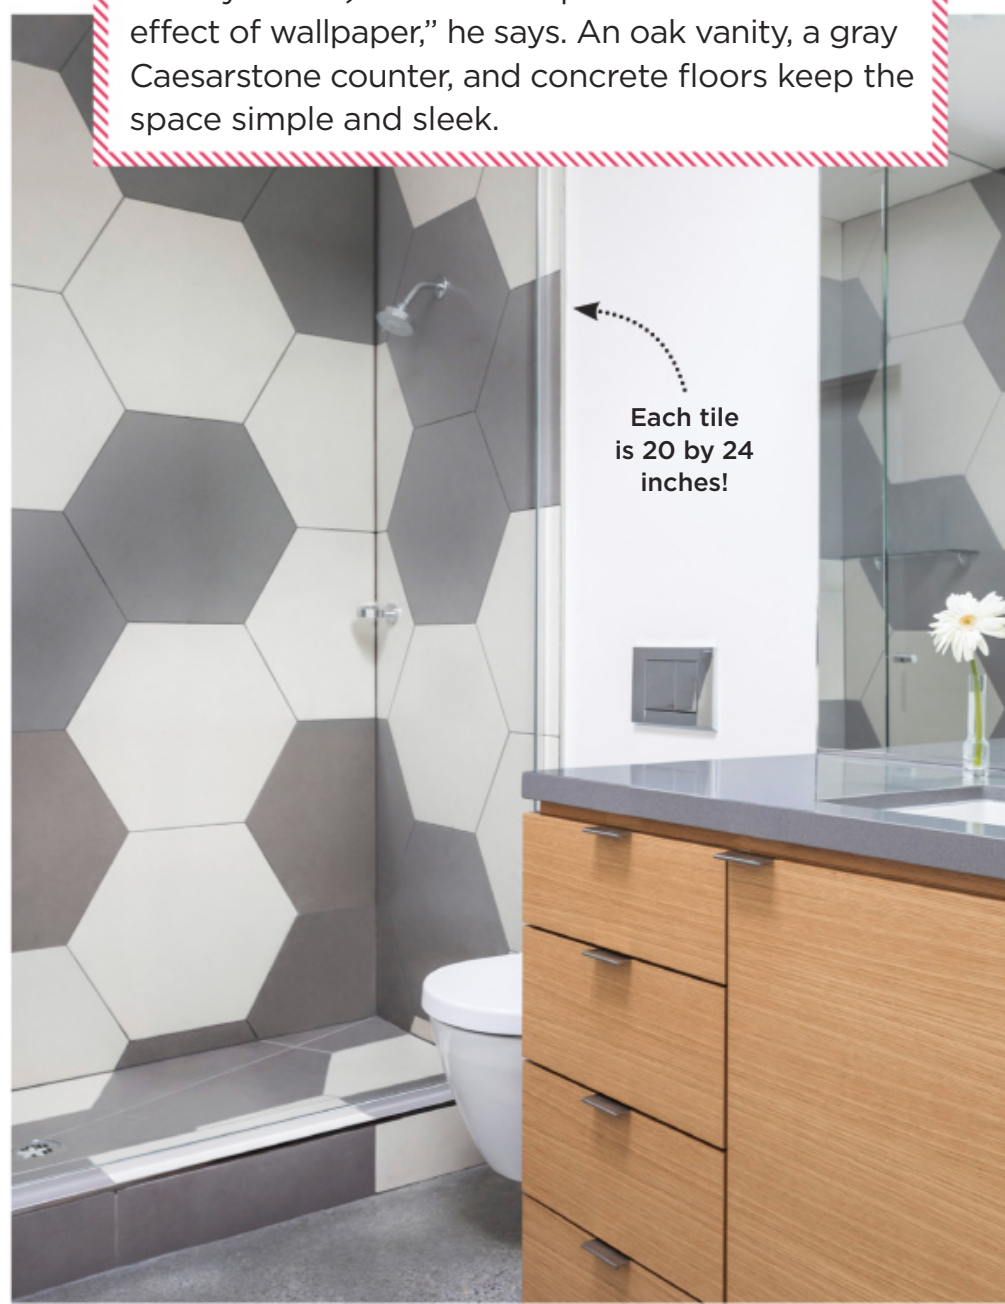

This triangle-motif stunner by Currey & Company holds its own in a room that has a lot going on. “A prominent, interesting lamp acts as a piece of art and gives the eye something to focus on,” says designer Denise Davies about this Westchester County, NY, bedroom. Its twin is on the other side of the bed for double the impact.

The lamp stands 27 inches tall—as big as the nightstand!

extra-big tiles

For a cool take on traditional 2-inch hexagon tile, designer Curtis Popp decked out this Folsom, CA, bathroom with a blown-up version (Bee Hive tiles by Daltile) in a random pattern. “It has the effect of wallpaper,” he says. An oak vanity, a gray Caesarstone counter, and concrete floors keep the space simple and sleek.

how bad is it to paint your house the same color as a neighbor's?

If you covet the cobalt blue or yellow of a home on your block, you're better off swatching some second choices. "Copying a distinctive color—one that somebody probably chose to make a statement and express individuality—is generally not a good idea," says Lisa Moon, a color consultant with Paper Moon Painting in Texas. Even if you asked and got the lime green light, it's less than ideal for your street, since two matching unique-color houses might look odd. If the other home isn't visible from yours, though, you could use the shade in a secondary way, like on your shutters or front door. Says Moon, "This may flatter your neighbor and preserve a good relationship."

[good question]

how bad is it to inflate the value of a charitable donation for a tax return?

When you guesstimate the worth of your donations, part of you might believe the price is right—hey, you only wore that little black dress once! That sofa was a custom order! Sadly, the IRS has other standards. “The ‘fair market value’ that tax returns ask for essentially translates to garage sale and Craigslist prices,” says Alison Cogan, C.P.A., director of tax services at MRA Advisory Group in Parsippany, NJ. Computers that review returns refer to stats for how much the average person with your income donates and flag transactions that stand out. Read: You risk an audit. So crunch some numbers—organizations like Goodwill and The Salvation Army have guides that list common items. “For anything valued at more than $500, take a picture and note the cost and how you determined it, in case you ever need to show your work to the IRS,” says Cogan.

● KINDA BAD!

how bad is it to ignore a light that sometimes flickers?

Get on it. Lights on the blink could be a minor deal or a sign of a major electrical problem. The situation is harmless if it involves a loose bulb (tighten that thing!), or an LED one installed in a fixture with an older dimmer switch that doesn't sync with the lower voltage (replace the dimmer). Otherwise, contact a licensed electrician ASAP. “A light that occasionally flickers can be a sign of a loose connection in it, the switch, the outlet, or the circuit, which could lead to electrical shock or become a fire hazard,” says contractor Mike Holmes, host of Holmes and Holmes. If the lights around your place simultaneously brighten and dim, a transformer in the area may be malfunctioning; to find out, call your power company.

how bad is it to toast with water?

While some folks may know the superstition about a toast with water being bad luck, modern-think is to focus on the sentiment of the occasion, not the liquid in the glass. “These days, a guest can toast with whatever drink they prefer based on health, spirituality, and lifestyle choices,” says international etiquette trainer Sharon Schweitzer, who’s based in Austin, TX. If you’re doing the honors at a wedding or another event where tradition rules, though, stick with the expected bubbly. It doesn’t have to be alcoholic: “A maid of honor can arrange to have sparkling apple cider in her glass,” says Schweitzer. Just avoid an empty glass, which seems weird and unlucky-ish.

● NOT BAD AT ALL!

(if you’re participating in a toast)

● KINDA BAD!

(if you’re the one making the toast)

how bad is it to not flatten cardboard boxes for recycling?

Break them down, for the sake of your recycling crew and the planet. Although flattening parcels isn’t always mandatory, “it means they take up less space in trucks and are easier for processors to handle,” says Mitch Hedlund, executive director of the nonprofit group Recycle Across America. Leave a box intact and it might not get recycled, he says: Workers at plants may lack the time to check for non-processable material inside (we’re talking about you, packing peanuts) and could send the box to the trash (eep). Given the boom in boxes out there, partly due to the vast increase in online orders, it’s more key than ever to prevent them from ending up in a landfill. So go on, be a model recycler!

in every room

Check out an Oklahoma City home that dazzles and delights everywhere you look.

W

hitney Rainbolt was surprised by how much she liked her home at first sight. “The outside is modern, and I’m more Southern traditional, but it was just so cool,” she says. She and her husband, Adam, lived five blocks away and had been searching for a larger place for their growing family. With four bedrooms and lots of living space, the house (built in 2017) fit the bill. Inside, however, the contemporary design gave her unwelcome vibes—all-white walls and dark wood ceiling beams seemed cold and bland. Whitney felt confident she could make it her own, but she had some competition: “My brother, who also lives in Oklahoma City, was looking for a house at the same time, and we sort of fought over this one,” she says, laughing. “He let me have it!” To put a special stamp on each room, the couple called on a trusted friend, designer Hallie Henley Sims. Unique fabrics, knockout wallpapers, uncommon pieces, and beams painted light gray instilled warmth and personality. Now a house that was once devoid of originality is brimming with one-of-a-kind style.

Whitney and Adam with, from left, Thomas and Ward

Whitney and Adam were drawn to the home’s large windows and steeply pitched roofs.

living room

What's better than one amazing pattern? Two! These both have ties to nature—the fabric on the armchair, by Schumacher, is a landscape of blues and greens, and there's an animal print by Hinson on the X-benches. A gray sectional and neutral rugs balance them out, while all the light streaming in makes the room even more inviting—for goldendoodles Dood and Rosie, too.

kitchen

Metallic touches made this roomy kitchen shine. "I'd envisioned Lucite barstools with presence at the island," says Whitney. She found these vintage brass-frame beauties on Chairish, and designer Hallie had the seats reupholstered in Zak + Fox fabric. Playing off them are faucets, cabinet hardware, and glam globe pendants, all in brass finishes. A row of mini cabinets flush with the ceiling hides the mechanics of the motorized window shade. Clever!

"I loved the painted look of the wallpaper as soon as I saw it," says Whitney. A floor-to-ceiling floral is fun and not stuffy next to zebra-stripe fabric by Jim Thompson on the chairs, a glass Art Deco table from Adam's family, and a custom china cabinet with a pagoda top that nods to the chinoiserie wallpaper. The chandelier by The Urban Electric Co. brings sweet frill.

Whitney's favorite color—aqua—set the room's palette in motion, beginning with the upholstered bed by Mr. & Mrs. Howard for Sherrill Furniture. Hallie chose a floral Schumacher fabric for the euro shams, then put in a pair of teal and gold lamps by Chelsea House and tufted green benches (by Highland House), which Ward uses to climb onto the bed to watch cartoons. On weekend mornings, the couple throw open the doors to the patio.

There wasn't much to change in this space, which, in time, Ward and Thomas will share. To personalize the white vanity and arched mirrors, Whitney and Hallie went with wallpaper by Phillip Jeffries that's a take on a Greek key pattern.

ward's bedroom

The toddler recently transitioned to a big-kid bed, and Whitney decided to give him more mature digs—with a dash of elephants (Ward has a thing for them). The wall color, Hale Navy by Benjamin Moore, was inspired by the navy in the adjoining bathroom's wallpaper. Shades of blue hold the patterns together; the bed is upholstered in fabric by Carleton V, and the duvet cover is by Serena & Lily.

DRAMA!

(and that's a good thing)

Bold colors, luxe textures, striking pieces—this house does not hold back.

living room

Don't let the fanciness fool you: Kids regularly flop onto the custom navy velvet sofa and caramel-color leather chairs from DwellStudio and chill on the suzani rug by Timothy Paul. A large distressed mirror from ABC Carpet & Home rounds out the room's mix of modern and vintage.

The original brick exterior is a rare sight in Washington, D.C., where many row houses have been painted over.

Sapna and Andy with Livia, 1, and Rumi, 4

People usually don't want drama in their lives—unless their home calls for it. That's how Sapna Mehta and Andy Grimmig felt about the row house they bought in Washington, D.C. Built in 1911, it had glorious 10-foot-high ceilings, but a lot of the place's ornate detail had been stripped away. Similarly sad: "Some parts were stuck in the '70s, like wood-panel walls and linoleum countertops," says Sapna. Guided by architect Carmel Greer, they reinvented the house, knocking down walls for a better flow and putting in high-impact elements like beaux-arts-style marble mantels, extra-thick crown molding painted glossy black, and reclaimed heart pine herringbone floors. With two kids, livability was key, which meant lots of open space and soft (stainproof!) fabrics. The result? A home that's comfy and all sorts of chic. As Sapna says, "‘Family-friendly’ doesn't have to mean ‘boring.’"

family room

Supersized built-ins are as ornamental as they are functional. “I love that our art objects and books have room to breathe,” says Sapna. A quest for a showstopping mantel for the new gas fireplace led her to this black marble one from MantelCraft. What’s missing: chairs and a coffee table—more room for the kids to cartwheel!

breakfast nook

Downing cereal never gets old when you're seated in a plush velvet banquette with a back that's nearly 3 feet tall. The color is picked up in the prints (from Minted, left, and by Karel Appel, right) and the gilded interior of the Tom Dixon pendant. Since it doubles as a spot for crafting—the banquette drawers hold supplies—"we didn't want a precious table," says Sapna. This find, from Rove Concepts, has a walnut veneer top.

kitchen

Black cabinets and white marble countertops bring the sleek, and they're warmed up by rustic open shelves and chocolate leather counter stools from ABC Carpet & Home. This kitchen has lots of room for prep—that island stretches 11 feet long. “I tend to glare at the water stains on it,” says Sapna, “but then again, we really wanted a visually arresting look.”

guest bathroom

"It's easier to make a daring choice when you're not seeing it every day," says Sapna of the energetic Moroccan-inspired pattern (Fez tiles by Granada Tile). Architect Carmel suggested taking the 8-inch-by-8-inch concrete squares all the way up to the shower ceiling.

Sapna and Andy wanted a soothing space, which explains the blue walls. But it just wouldn't be their style if it looked tame, which explains the mahogany four-poster Noir bed. Certain elements are purposefully off-kilter, like the chandelier by Park Studio LA that hovers above the foot of the bed rather than the middle and a small rug on just one side. A pair of funky brass sconces by OneFortyThree extend from the wall.

It's a space fit for a mischievous toddler. "Livia's always playing hide-and-seek behind the glider," says Sapna. The kid-size Panton chairs are basically indestructible. GUESS WHAT you don't need new cabinets!

However meh yours feel, they can get a whole other life with one of these clever ideas.

take some doors off

Score the charm of open shelving, instantly! Just remove the doors—truly as simple as unscrewing the hinges—patch hardware holes, and touch up the paint. Then paint the insides of the cabinets the same color as the exterior (this is Foxhall Green by Sherwin-Williams), or break out with a contrasting hue. For even more of a custom feel, replace existing shelves with ones that are thicker.

ROOM DESIGN: URBANOLOGY DESIGNS

paint cabinets different colors

Never underestimate the power of paint. A punchy color on just the uppers of wood cabinets (this is Talipot Palm by Sherwin-Williams) takes a space from perfectly pleasant to soooo good. It involves sanding, priming, and painting the cabinet boxes and doors—remove the doors for this. Label each one, its hinges, and the cabinet box, because if they're put back in different spots, the fit could be off.

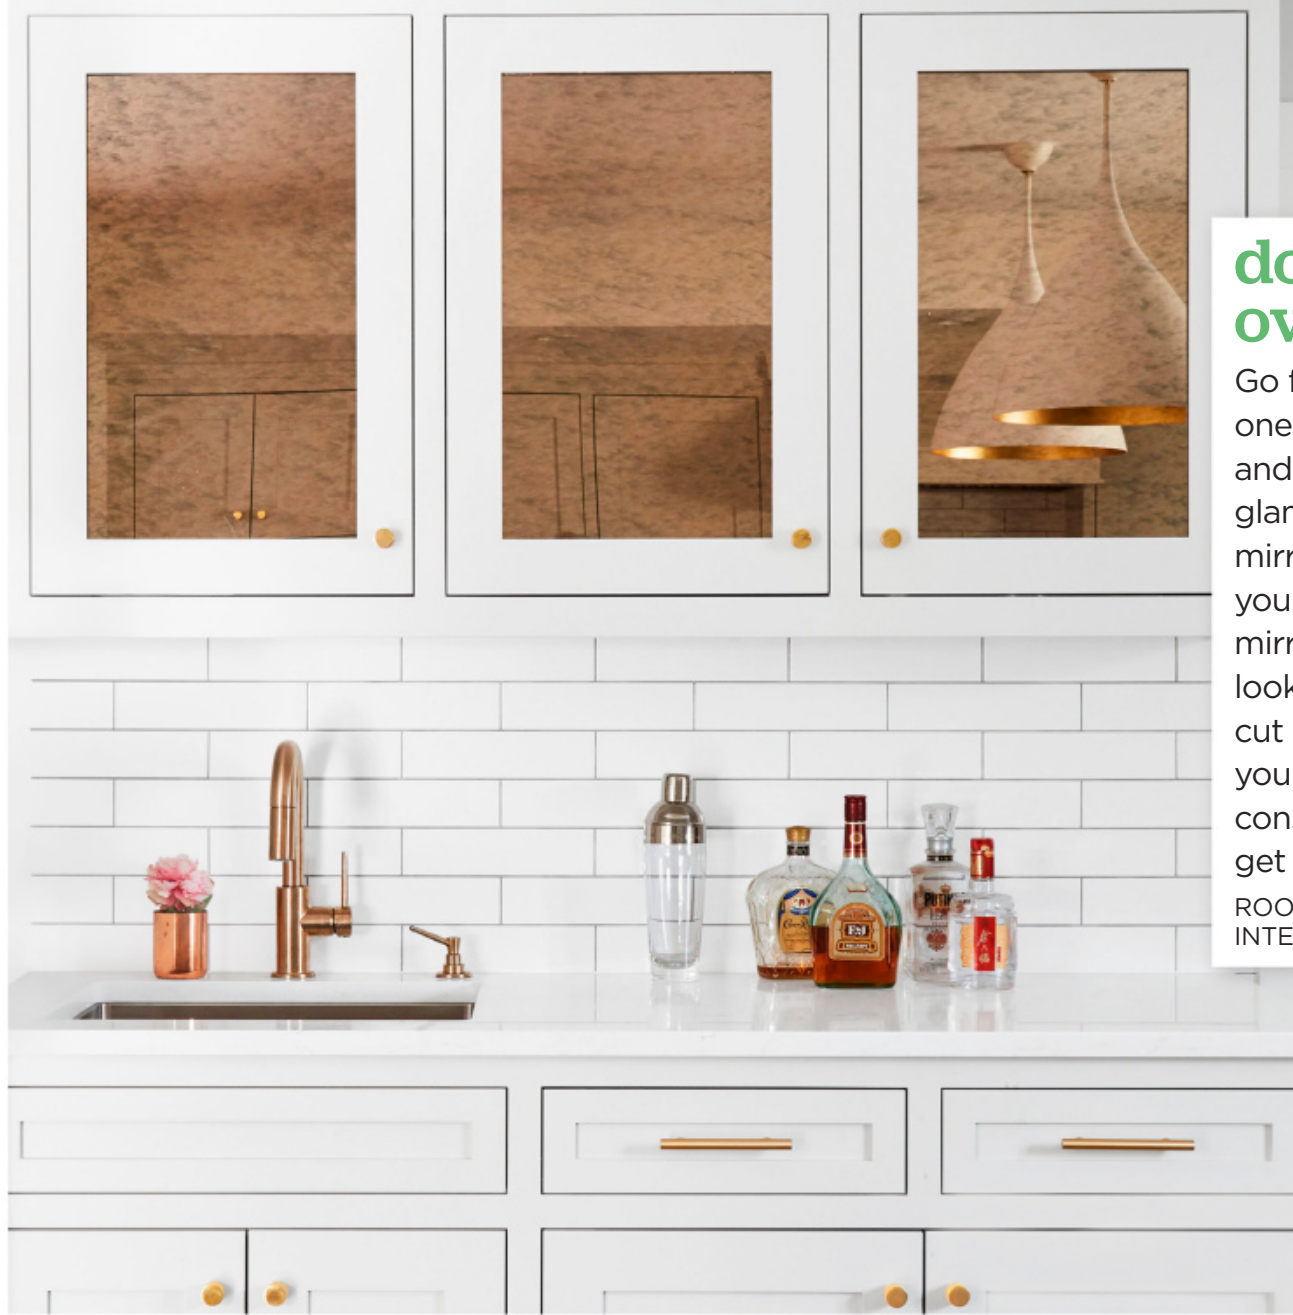

ROOM DESIGN: AIRY KITCHENS

do a mirror overlay

Go for mirrored doors in one section of cabinets and—boom!—you boost glam just like that. Antiqued mirrors add warmth but you can go with regular mirrors for a more current look. Either have the mirrors cut to size and tack onto your existing doors with construction adhesive, or get new doors made.

ROOM DESIGN: JASMIN REESE INTERIORS

A good spot for dishes
you use every day—
just grab and dine.

try open shelves

For an airier kitchen, tear out a cabinet box or two and hang shelves. You'll have to patch and paint the wall and fill in backsplash tiles, but (reality check) it beats buying all new cabinets, often the priciest part of a reno. These oak shelves match the hood trim and the ceiling beams. If you want to make your shelves fancier, you can always add brackets.

ROOM DESIGN: BROOKE WAGNER DESIGN

in the kitchen

swap solid doors for glass ones

In a room with minimal light, glass-front doors turn up brightness. You can find ready-made kinds at a local cabinet shop or home improvement store. Choose a frame color that's different from your other cabinets (these gray doors are from Omega Cabinetry) or paint them yourself. Here, the contrast with the white cabinets plays off the white-and-gray island, while ghost chairs continue the transparent look.

ROOM DESIGN: KAREN B. WOLF INTERIORS

“When you’re putting in new cabinet hardware, using an inexpensive plastic installation template from a home improvement store saves time and stress—it has holes that show you exactly where to drill.”

install new knobs and pulls

It's one of the least invasive ways to update cabinets. The most foolproof switcheroo is to replace knobs with knobs and pulls with pulls (these are all from CB2). Consider alternate shapes, like the hexagon knobs here, and a new finish—brass and matte black are hot right now.

roasted red pepper and sausage quiche

- 1 sheet refrigerated pie dough (half of a 14-ounce box)
- ½ cup roughly chopped jarred roasted peppers
- ¼ cup chopped scallions
- ½ cup cooked and crumbled sausage

1. Heat oven to 375°F. Line a 9-inch pie plate with the pie dough and crimp as desired; chill 30 minutes. Line with foil, then fill with pie weights or dried beans. Bake until the crust is set, about 20 minutes. Remove the foil and weights and continue baking until lightly golden, 5 to 10 more minutes. Let cool while you prepare the filling.

2. Make the filling: Combine the roasted peppers and scallions in a large bowl.

- ¾ cup shredded cheddar cheese
- 3 large eggs
- 1¼ cups heavy cream, half-and-half, or milk
- Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Add the sausage and cheddar, and toss to combine.

3. Whisk the eggs, heavy cream, ½ teaspoon salt, and ¼ teaspoon pepper in a large bowl. Stir in the parsley. Spread the sausage-cheese mixture in the crust, then pour the egg mixture on top. Reduce the oven temperature to 350°F and bake until the filling is set, 40 to 50 minutes. Let cool at least 30 minutes before slicing.
