'I didn't know clad risk'

THE lead architect on the Grenfell Tower refurbishment was unaware of the risk that cladding could spread fire up and along the outside of a high-rise, an inquiry heard.

Giving evidence to the Grenfell Tower Inquiry yesterday, Bruce Soules of Studio E Architects was shown a diagram illustrating how cladding could contribute to the rapid spread of external fire.

The image, published in guidance to explain building regulations, showed flames breaking out of windows, up external cladding, and then back into the building higher up. Kate Grange QC, counsel to the inquiry, asked Mr Soules if he was aware of the guidance. He replied: "No, I had no knowledge of this."

He also admitted he "can't recall" whether he knew there were different fire regulations for high-rise buildings. The blaze at the 24-storey tower in west London killed 72 people in June 2017. The hearing continues.

ALMOST half of us are in debt – with 15% of those who owe money turning to loan sharks.

Millennials are most likely to use illegal sources of finance (about 23%) than any other generation.

And Britons who use backstreet lenders owe an average of £744.

The study by VoucherCodes found 48% of UK adults are carrying some form of debt, excluding mortgages.

Credit card spending (78%) and overdraft charges (44%)

15% turn to 'illegal lenders'

are the most common causes, revealed the survey.

Some 42% are tied into "buy now, pay later" schemes or repaying personal loans.

A third are indebted to friends or family members.

Cardiff and Derby have the most residents in the red, with more than half of their populations owing money.

North of the border, Edinburgh folk are the most likely to find themselves in debt. Manchester, Leeds, London and Norwich also have at least half in arrears.

The survey found more than half of 25 to 34-year-olds have used payday loans.

Millennials told researchers they do not class themselves as "in debt" until they owe about £5,700.

While 18 to 24-year-olds are more likely to ask parents for financial help. One in 10 from the same age group consider debt an "inevitability" and not worth worrying about.

Anita Naik of VoucherCodes said: "It is concerning to find such a high proportion of people have turned to illegal money lenders as a way to obtain finance."

"This is something that should be avoided at all costs – there are other measures that can be taken to help reduce debts instead."

Gamers warning

FORTNITE is giving gamers an addiction warning if they play for too long.

Fans of the online computer game in China get an alert when they have been on it for three hours.

It reads: "For your own health, please log-off and get some rest."

In-game rewards are reduced if people continue to spend hours online.

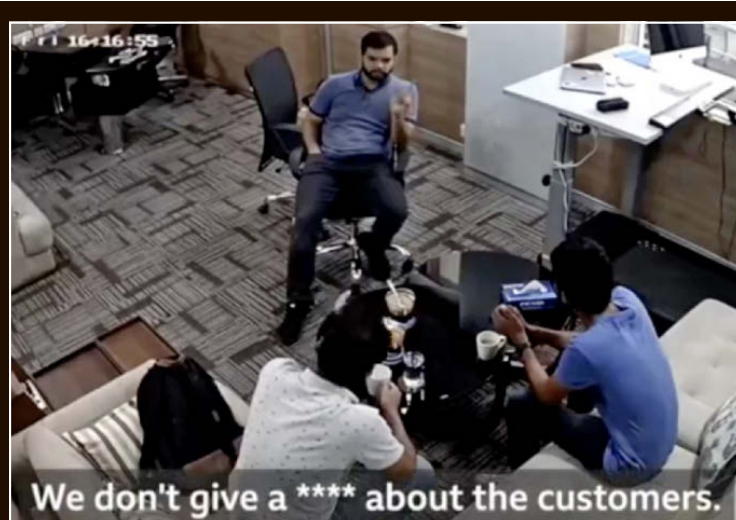

Kid help calls rise

AN average of 67 suicidal kids a day are getting help from Childline following a big rise in demand.

The charity delivered 24,447 counselling sessions in 2018-19, said the NSPCC.

That equates to a 25% rise over the last three years, from 19,481 sessions in 2015-16.

Demand has soared for suicidal kids under 11.

CONMEN ARE HACKED

FRAUDSTERS at a call centre in India are captured laughing as they rip off victims in the UK.

The footage was shown on the BBC's Panorama after a hi-tech vigilante illegally hacked into the fraudsters' CCTV.

The scam – which raked in hundreds of thousands of pounds a month – used fake pop-up warnings on computer screens.

Victims were ordered to contact "Microsoft" for a fix but it was a hotline to the crooks who conned them into handing over cash online.

Some victims lost £1,000 or more.

KEEP CALM SAYS PM AS VIRUS

WE'RE NOT

■ by JACK ANDREWS
BORIS Johnson is preparing to go into battle against the coronavirus.

The Prime Minister revealed he may call up a "Dad's Army" of retired health workers to help the stretched NHS.

He is also attempting to resurrect Britain's traditional "bulldog spirit" in the face of the virus.

And he urged the nation to wash hands with hot, soapy water for as long as it takes to sing Happy Birthday twice.

Under the plan there would be the emergency registration of recently retired health professionals and the introduction of emergency indemnity coverage for health workers to fight the virus.

The PM issued his rallying cry as he unveiled a 27-page document,

■ WASH AND GO: Boris urged public to wash hands as he called on the Dad's Army spirit

● Boris to call on 'Dad's Army'

● And military could offer help

GREETING: The footshake

to be used if COVID-19 takes hold, at a press conference yesterday.

The military could also provide support to emergency services if needed, his document says.

It cites "arrangements for defence to provide support to civil authorities if requested".

Mr Johnson pointed to "long-established plans" by which the police would keep the public safe but would "prioritise those things that they have to do".

He added: "And the Army is of course always ready to back-fill as and when, but that is under the reasonable worst-case scenario."

Mr Johnson channelled the classic comedy's Home Guard volunteers as he appealed for the public to keep "going about our business as usual". He said:

"Crucially, we must not forget what we can all do to fight this virus, which is to wash our hands with soap and water and, forgive me for repeating this, but... wash your hands with soap and hot water for the length of time it takes to sing Happy Birthday twice.

"It's simple advice but it's the most important thing we can do."

Asked if the nation "still has that bulldog spirit to fight this on the beaches" the PM backed Brits to do their bit.

He said: "I have absolutely no doubt we have the resources, the health services and the expertise. I am very confident that the British public understand that and can see exactly what the balance of risk is.

"I think we will get through it in very good shape."

Sales of hand sanitisers more than tripled last month as customers flocked to protect themselves.

Sales soared by 255%, according to new data from consumer experts Kantar Worldpanel.

In Wuhan, China, members of the public have ditched handshakes in favour of the "footshake", where people greet each other by tapping their shoes against each other. The NHS last night declared the outbreak a "Level 4 incident" – the highest category of emergency.

And an expert has warned that doctors and nurses are being shunned amid fear and panic.

Medical staff have been abused and avoided over concerns they're swimming with infection.

Prof David Koh, a World Health Organisation consultant, said: "Such reactions are reminiscent of the 2003 Sars outbreak, where not only the public but even close family members were afraid of being infected by healthcare workers."

Glasgow's Shish Mahal will deliver meals to anyone in the city who has to self-isolate in response to coronavirus.

One doesn't want that Crownavirus

THE Queen wears long gloves as she awards the CBE to Butterflies actress Wendy Craig at Buckingham Palace yesterday.
It was the first time the 93-year-old has covered her hands while giving honours. The palace declined to confirm whether it was down to coronavirus. Health experts have advised over-60s to avoid crowded areas.

STAFF keep their distance as they cut clients' hair with scissors attached to poles in the Chinese city of Luzhou. Meanwhile, Italians are being told to stand a metre apart at all times to prevent the virus spreading.

'Race hate bug attack'

A STUDENT from Singapore says he was attacked by racists over coronavirus.

Jonathan Mok, 23, wrote on Facebook that he was punched and kicked by a group of four or five men and a woman in Oxford Street, London.

Mr Mok, who has been living in the capital for two years, said he suffered fractures in his face and may need surgery.

He said: "The guy who tried to kick me then said: 'I don't want your coronavirus in my country', before swinging another sucker punch at me, which resulted in my face exploding with blood."

"Racists constantly find excuses to expound their hatred - and in this current backdrop of the coronavirus, they've found yet another excuse."

CHIPPER: Joel Rawlins

Victim: I'm feeling fine

A BRITISH man quarantined in hospital with COVID-19 says: "I feel great."

Joel Rawlins, 26, praised NHS staff as he lifted the lid on life in lockdown - where he's video calling mates and scoffing take-aways - in a defiant message from his isolation unit bed.

The pianist had been working on the Diamond Princess cruise ship and was brought home from Japan last month before testing positive here.

Joel, from Chesham, Bucks, has been in isolation at the Royal Hallamshire Hospital in Sheffield since Sunday.

He said: "I'm doing absolutely fine and will be out before you know it."

"There is no need to be scared, the virus isn't deadly, just stay safe and keep washing your hands and report yourself if you show any symptoms."

HOLY WATER BAN

A CATHOLIC church has banned holy water over fears about spreading coronavirus.

St Cuthbert's in Hamilton, South Lanarkshire, has also forbidden churchgoers from shaking hands - known as the sign of peace.

The Scottish church made the decision following the announcement on Sunday of the country's first case of coronavirus.

Bishop of Motherwell, Reverend Joseph Toal, has said that anyone who has cold or flu-like symptoms should not attend mass. And the

by JACK ANDREWS

Bishops' Conference of England and Wales has warned against taking communion wine from a shared chalice in services or taking communion hosts on the tongue.

They also told Catholics to stop passing the collection plate around and recommended the removal of shared hymn books.

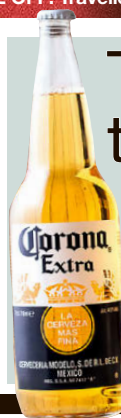

As concerns about the deadly respiratory outbreak escalate, churches around Europe have emptied their fonts of water to limit contagion.

That's hard to swallow

CORONA beer has taken a hammering following the coronavirus outbreak.

A third of drinkers are shunning the lager because of its name, a poll found. It is not the first brand to suffer. In 2015, ISIS Pharmaceuticals had to be renamed Ionis due to Islamic State.

And concrete firm Jim'll Mix It became just Mix It after Jimmy Savile was unmasked as a serial sex offender.

DAILY STAR Says

Keep calm over virus

THERE'S nothing like a global pandemic to get people worried.

Humans have long feared a killer plague or disease that can wipe us all out.

And coronavirus is certainly something to be wary of.

But some perspective is needed.

There are dozens of positive UK cases in a country of 60million people.

This is not the time to panic.

All the people paid to protect us are urging caution but saying to keep calm. So that is what we should do.

Be sensible, carry tissues and wash your hands more often than usual.

At least we can be safe in the knowledge that this isn't being underplayed.

Every country has put in vigorous measures to tackle the virus.

It would be much worse if they were trying to bury the bad news or turn a blind eye.

We're a tough nation and we need to draw on our strength now.

And keep our hands as clean as possible.

PC lot out of control

JUST when you think you've heard it all.

A students' union has rebranded International Women's Day to include trans women.

PC fanatics at Leicester University have changed the word "women" to "womxn".

How ridiculous. It's not even a word. University chiefs say they want to make it more inclusive.

But they're missing the point.

Changing the name belittles the event. It becomes totally meaningless if it includes both sexes.

This should be a celebration of those who have battled for female equality.

No wonder so many female students are up in arms about it.

Once again, our bonkers PC culture is to blame.

It's time we called an end to this madness once and for all.

PROTEST: Greta addresses Bristol crowd

Teen snowflake is taken to protest in electric police car

EXCLUSIVE ■ by JERRY LAWTON

POLICE have been blasted for chauffeuring Greta Thunberg to a climate change protest in an electric patrol car.

They picked up the environmental activist, 17, at a railway station and drove her to a "youth strike" demonstration in an unmarked vehicle.

After she had addressed a 15,000-strong crowd at the rally and led a march through Bristol she was driven back to her train in the same force-owned motor – with an escort.

The move has sparked outrage from officers and crime investigators across Britain.

Former Metropolitan Police investigator Colin Sutton tweeted: "I'm trying to understand this. And failing."

The author then posted a photo of a vintage car bearing two swastika flags and added: "I wonder how they will collect other protest leaders in future?"

"Maybe they can find one of these for the EDL?"

Mark Williams-Thomas, the former Surrey Police officer whose investigation exposed paedophile Jimmy Savile, replied: "Totally agree."

"Why are the police picking up #GretaThunberg and taking her to a protest rally? This is an abuse of policing." Members of the PUZZLED: Colin Sutton public joined in the rant. One said: "Absolute nonsense. The police must not be seen to support any particular group."

Last night a police spokesman said: "The operational commander decided we should drive Ms Thunberg the 1.5 miles from the station to the event and back to mitigate the risks to her and other children among a crowd of more than 15,000."

Genesis 'reunite for tour'

ROCKERS Genesis are set to re-form 13 years after their last live show.

Singer Phil Collins, Mike Rutherford and Tony Banks, all 69, will talk about the reunion on Zoe Ball's Radio 2 Breakfast Show this morning.

The plans, which are thought to include a tour, come after the trio sparked rumours in January when pictured together at a basketball game in New York.

Fans have been desperate for the band to get back together since their 40th anniversary tour in 2007.

Genesis, whose hits include Invisible Touch, That's All and Turn It On Again, released their last studio album, Calling All Stations, in 1997.

Collins is now unable to play drums due to nerve damage in his hands.

'WITCH HUNT': Caroline killed herself last month

TRAGIC STAR CASE UNDER SPOTLIGHT

A REVIEW is being launched into the prosecution of Caroline Flack, it has been revealed.

The Love Island star, 40, was found dead in her flat as she waited to go on trial for allegedly attacking boyfriend Lewis Burton with a lamp.

The presenter's management accused the Crown Prosecution Service of pursuing a "show trial" against Caroline and causing her "significant distress".

A Freedom of Information request has revealed there will now be "a post-case review panel of the case by a Deputy Chief Crown Prosecutor". Caroline had pleaded not guilty to the charge, and was due to appear in court today.

The day before her death on February 15 she was informed by her lawyers that the CPS was continuing with the case.

Mr Burton, who received a head injury during the alleged incident, said he had "never supported" Caroline's prosecution.

He claimed that she had been the subject of a "witch hunt".

Last night the CPS said: "Post-case debriefings are not uncommon. They are held to identify good practice and learning points."

Asked if they would re-examine the decision to charge Caroline, a spokesman added: "The review will look at the general CPS handling of the case and obviously the decisions behind charging is part of that. It will look at the case in the round."

Caroline had stepped down from Love Island after being arrested.

She was released on bail but ordered not to contact Mr Burton before the trial.

Miriam: Millions like gay Phillip

ACTRESS Miriam Margolyes thinks that there are "millions" of people like telly's Phillip Schofield struggling to come out as gay.

The 78-year-old is openly a lesbian but says outside the showbusiness industry it is hard for people to be honest about their sexuality.

This Morning presenter Phillip, 57, came out last month despite his 27-year marriage to wife Stephanie.

Miriam said: "There are millions, unfortunately [who feel forced to lead a secret life]."

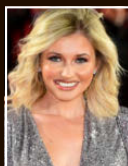

"We live in a bubble of people who don't care what sexuality people are. But there are a great many other people who do care and make life miserable for people because of it. And I think it's awful."

Miriam was 27 before she had a girlfriend and did not realise she was gay as a youngster.

She added: "I think it all came as a bit of a bombshell."

Amy's therapy

AMY Hart is still in therapy following Love Island.

She was dumped by Curtis Pritchard for Maura Higgins on the show last summer.

Amy, 26, said: "I still do therapy. Therapy has really helped me understand it's not me who is the problem."

FIANCEE'S GROOMED BY SICKO

Bride's big day confession for two-and-a-half years after admitting assault by beating and engaging in controlling and coercive behaviour in an intimate relationship.

The terrified woman revealed she was being forced to tie the knot with brute Adrian Jacks.

Her mum listened open-mouthed as her daughter told how he had subjected her to a year of mental and physical abuse.

Treated like a "rag doll", she had been strangled, punched and pinned to the wall by the 34-year-old – the last attack coming days before their wedding day.

Her mum urged her to call police, who arrested him before the wedding could take place on September 28.

He spent what should have been his big day in custody.

Jacks, from Worksop, Notts, was jailed

The judge at Nottingham Crown Court imposed an indefinite restraining order barring him from contacting his victim again.

The couple had been dating since 2018.

Jacks had posted a smiling photo of them online weeks before their wedding. Det Con Tracey Marshall said Jacks was an "habitual perpetrator of domestic violence". She added: "We are pleased with the result and we hope it gives the victim, who has been brave throughout the investigation, some comfort that she will never hear from Jacks again."

'Vegan' Greggs on a roll

GREGGS is celebrating a record year after profits hit £108million thanks to their vegan snacks.

Sales surged after its meat-free sausage roll was launched in January 2019.

The baker went on to create its vegan steak bake and vegan doughnut that launched earlier this year.

Chief executive Roger Whiteside said the new vegan range was Greggs' "most successful product" in recent years.

He added that the baker would think about creating more meat-free and dairy-free versions of its best-selling food.

Mr Whiteside said: "2019 was an exceptional year of progress for Greggs."

The UK's biggest bakery chain saw it open a further 97 shops, taking its total to 2,050.

And 25,000 staff each got a £300 share of a £7m pay bonus thanks to the baker's sales boost.

UNI WOMEN'S DAY RENAMED BY TRANS BOSS

by RUTH McKEE

A STUDENTS' union chief has been blasted for branding International Women's Day "International Womxn's Day" to include trans women.

Dan Orr, newly elected women's officer at the University of Leicester, who is trans, was criticised because "she has not grown up with the same prejudices and stereotypes that face girls and women".

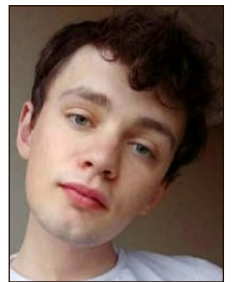

One female student, who did not want to be named, said: "I know she will have had her own prejudices to deal with but they are not the same."

"I am sure Dan will try her best, but she has not grown up with the same prejudices girls and women face and the stereotypes they have had to deal with related to the female body."

The scholar, who did not want to be named for fear of being punished by her university, said she was "very upset" that Dan had been elected.

And she claimed it was "insulting" that the name of the celebration had been changed. She said it "belittles every-thing women have had to fight for".

A newsletter sent to students said that "we use the term 'womxn' as a more inclusive spelling of 'women' that includes any person who identifies as a womxn." International Women's Day is on

'INCLUSIVE': Dan Orr

Sunday. Kathleen Stock, a professor of philosophy at Sussex University, joined the debate. She said: "Concepts aren't 'umbrellas' or 'shelters' for whoever wants to come in, that's not what concepts do."

The University of Leicester Students' Union claimed its campaign "creates an inclusive environment".

EASTER HOLS

Twister horror

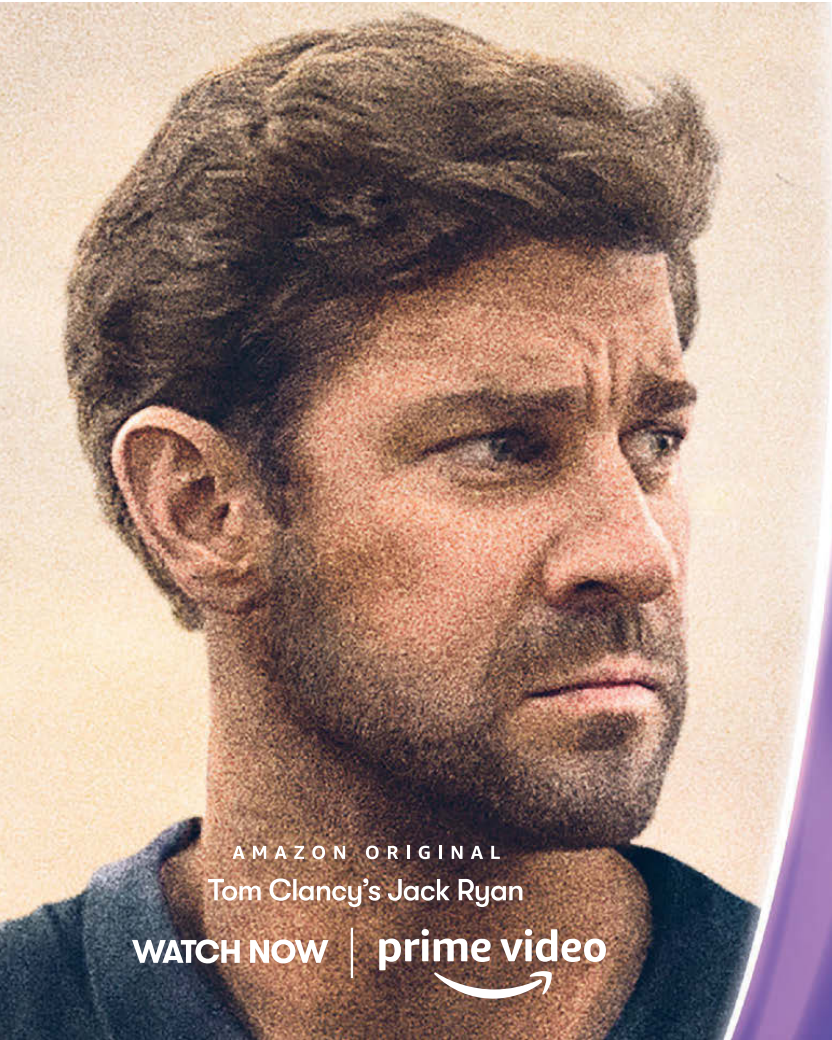

A TORNADO left a trail of destruction in its wake, shredding buildings, toppling power lines and littering streets with debris. At least 22 people died across Tennessee, US, after severe storms ripped through the state – including the capital Nashville, above. Tens of thousands of residents were left without electricity and hundreds were homeless last night.

Heathrow fliers & rail users face hell

BAGGAGE handlers could unleash “Easter holiday chaos” on Heathrow flyers with six days of strikes planned over the holiday. Unions are demanding a staff walkout over a pay dispute and attempts at “union busting” at the airport. British Airways, Virgin, Emirates and IAG Freight are all expected to be affected, leaving thousands of passengers without their luggage. The strikes come as the rail network also looks set to face mayhem over the Bank Holiday. Network Rail is carrying out 420 separate engineering projects between Good Friday and Easter Monday. Some lines will be completely shut down over the long weekend, with passengers suffering reduced timetables, longer journeys and replacement buses. Anyone wanting to travel along the West Coast Main Line between London and Glasgow will face multiple engineering works as track is updated and HS2 preparation continues. In a bid to make-up for the public transport problems, Highways England has vowed to temporarily lift hundreds of miles of roadworks over Easter to ease motorway congestion. Network Rail boss Andrew Haines said: “We know that train performance has to improve if we are to provide the service railway passengers and freight users deserve.”

WOMAN KILLED BY DOGS SHE RESCUED

Anne, 61, attacked as she fed Egyptian strays

DOG LOVER: Anne Johnson, known locally as Janet

A BRITISH woman running an animal shelter in Egypt was mauled to death by three dogs she had saved, police believe.

Anne Johnson, 61, was found dead at the shelter in the small Red Sea town of Dahab.

Anne - known to her friends as Janet and believed to have grown up in Macclesfield, Cheshire - had lived in Egypt for 16 years, where she had worked to save abandoned animals including horses, cats and donkeys.

The feral dogs reportedly turned on her as she tried to feed them, and she died from bites to her face and throat.

Her body has been sent for forensic examination and an official cause of death has not been given. But a friend insists

■ by TOM TOWERS

she was not attacked, however fell unconscious.

Her unnamed pal believes police are using her death last Friday to close the shelter called Janet's Wadi, which is reportedly unpopular with locals.

The friend said: "Authorities have tried shutting her down for years, they're now using this to push for the shelter to be closed."

"We are very concerned for the animals. She dedicated her life to the dogs."

A message posted on a Facebook fundraising group set up to support her read: "Janet fought for the neglected and suffering animals of Dahab when they had no one else."

"She will be greatly missed."

Sexist slant to bullies

I'VE been a boss and the only person I ever shouted at was MY boss (it's all right, he coped). There's no need to run any business on fear and intimidation.

Whether Home Secretary Priti Patel is a bully is the subject of an inquiry, although it is curious that Sir Philip Rutnam, below, chose to announce his grievances in a press conference.

Bullying is hideous and both sexes are capable of it.

But it's interesting how a domineering, aggressive male boss is often portrayed as an alpha male go-getter, while a woman is still a shrill, vicious, paranoid witch.

Probe's Pc mad

TWO armed police officers involved in a car crash while racing to London's Streattham terror attack face getting the sack.

The pair are being investigated for alleged dangerous driving as well as gross misconduct.

Without their prompt action, that Sunday morning could have been so much worse than two people being stabbed.

Actually, we haven't all got the lurgy

PANIC PANDEMIC IS A SOAP OPERA

IF one more patronising twit tells me to wash my hands while singing two choruses of Happy Birthday or The National Anthem I'm going to insert my hand sanitiser where the coronavirus don't shine.

I am not five years old. And nor are you. Which is roughly the age most of us mastered the tricky art of applying soap and water to the things at the end of our arms.

We are not all going to die. Most of us will barely sneeze. Yet to witness the hysterical over-reaction to the latest lurgy we are facing Armageddon. Most of us have already lived through Sars, Swine Flu, Ebola, Monkeypox, countless flu epidemics (which can kill tens of thousands of us a year), the Millennium Bug, Brexit and several Simon Cowell Saturday night TV assaults on the senses. For which drinking your alcohol hand wash is highly recommended.

So can we please all stop the panic pandemic? Watched incredulously yesterday as our Prime Minister tried to reassure us that he had everything under control. Er, hello? This is a man who can't even brush his own hair.

And as for the Downing Street "insider" who ominously intoned that coronavirus getting much worse would mean "that life cannot carry on as it does now".

Get a grip you fools. Coming out with stuff like that helps no-one aside from companies getting rich flogging the useless tat we are all bulk buying. Facemasks for example. Did you see those pictures of the Brits banged up in that all inclusive Tenerife hotel sunbathing while wearing glorified paper towels over the bottom half of their mugs?

And there was me thinking sunglasses tan lines were irritating. They're going to come home with faces like zebra crossings. And for what? Because facemasks are a proven waste of time protecting you against pretty much any virus aside from Pratitis.

The Government's four stage plan is contain, delay, research and mitigate. They also muttered darkly about cities being placed in lockdown, closing schools and cancelling gatherings. This isn't the Walking Dead. It's a bad case of sniffle.

But self-isolating is however a genuine worry because if you're self-employed no work equals no pay.

So you'll just starve to death instead. Has anyone in "power" thought this one through, hmm? Or maybe Bozza will bung me and the old man a few quid to laze around watching Netflix for a couple of weeks, just in case?

So if all the doom-mongers who reckon we should simply ban anyone from entering or leaving the country don't mind I think I might check out some flights. Because so many people are scared to travel airlines have slashed their costs and cities normally heaving with tourists are virtually empty.

Once place in particular really appealed. It's in California, just outside of LA. It's name? Corona.

Dina a real role model

LOVE the fact that awesome sprinter Dina Asher-Smith has been immortalised as a Barbie doll ahead of International Women's Day on Sunday.

She hopes that the toy will inspire girls to take up, and continue, to enjoy sport.

Pray that she's right. Because getting sweaty on a running track sure beats the hell out of getting hot and bothered about your fake nails/hair/teeth/boobs/bum on programmes such as Love Island.

YOU'RE PULLING OUR LEG

WHILE we're on the subject, yet another idiot "expert" has predicted coronavirus will be the death of the handshake. Instead we're all supposed to kick one another in a hygienic foot-to-foot tapping greeting.

Right, of course...

Try this with anyone suffering from gout, corns, bunions or ingrowing toe-nails and you may not live long enough for coronavirus to get you.

Just a friendly word of warning.

his head at them. Faheem's partner Jade Stonier, 27, was inside recovering from brain surgery with his six-year-old son at the time.

To the desperate dad's relief the gang fled after ramming one of their cars into his front gate and smashing the garden wall.

The incident is the latest in a string of attacks on the family.

Vandals have broken windows at the property near Stoke-on-Trent, Staffs, three times before.

Faheem said: "We're scared in our own home now but I won't let them win by moving out."

He said of the skirmish: "Six cars pulled up at the side of me and men got out carrying baseball bats. My instinct kicked in and I ran to my house. I ran for my life."

"The group of lads chased me to my address with weapons and were doing everything to try to get in. They all had their hoods up and one was wearing a balaclava."

"I've got CCTV on my house and it shows six cars with about 28 lads turning up. I was able to get in and get my ornamental Samurai sword, which I was swinging to scare them off and keep them away."

"If I didn't have that sword then something bad would definitely have happened. It was very scary."

"They were shouting, saying they were going to run through my house."

"I did everything I could to protect my family."

Police have arrested two men. A spokesman said: "Our investigations are still ongoing."

Glitches caused 999 hell

A POLICE computer glitch caused delays in answering 999 calls and left vulnerable people "at risk".

It also meant safety checks were not carried out in hundreds of domestic abuse cases, sometimes for more than 100 days after an incident.

The £60million Greater Manchester Police system upgrade last July forced officers to use pen and paper during the crash.

Yesterday, a report by watchdog the Inspectorate of Constabulary and Fire and Rescue Services found the flaw had "exposed vulnerable people to potential risk of harm".

TELLIES AS LARGE AS THE WALL

We'll all have 100in screens

LIVING rooms will have to be redesigned to make space for monster telly screens in the next 10 years, analysts predict.

The rise in streaming services such as Netflix and Amazon Prime has driven demand for 100in screens.

Televisions have grown each year as technology develops, say financial advisers Deloitte.

Although more people watch telly on smart-phones and laptops demand for huge screens is high.

Deloitte's Paul Lee, who wrote the study, said: "A decade from now, people will still continue to seek-out high production value content, and will still want to watch this on large screens, up to 100 inches in size."

"Living rooms will be designed to accommodate larger screens, and more households will be able to afford larger TV sets because manufacturers will offer a cheaper price for the authorisation to share people's viewing habits with advertisers. Many will have accepted the trade-off for their data to get a better quality screen."

Deloitte predict that in 2030, Brits will watch four hours of telly a day. Mr Lee said: "Every year people will say screens can't get larger. When they are the size of the wall, that's when they can't get larger."

HOLE: The shop's wall

Jewels drill duo caged

TWO burglars who drilled through walls to raid a jewellery shop under the cover of a nearby marathon have been jailed for six years each.

Florin-Cristin Neagu, 46, and Sorin Munteanu, 44, were found guilty of the "sophisticated" £300,000 heist at George Attenborough & Son Jewellers in London.

The pair and pal Nicolae Sisca, who had previously admitted burglary, carried out the raid over a weekend in March last year.

Jurors at Southwark Crown Court took just 32 minutes to convict Neagu and Munteanu.

The court heard the men first attempted to tunnel into the basement of the luxury jewellers - but drilled into a bookmaker's store next door by mistake.

Jurors were shown footage of Sisca looking around the betting shop.

The raiders tried again the next day, which coincided with thousands of runners competing in the nearby London Landmarks half-marathon.

Romanians Neagu and Munteanu fled the UK within 48 hours but were arrested in their homeland and extradited.

Woman 'bit captain' in row over a buggy

by JAMES CAVEN

A PILOT was attacked in a cockpit by a mum and daughter after they were told to store a buggy in the hold, a court heard.

Henrietta Mitaiare, 23, is alleged to have pushed Guido Keel and bit his arm.

Mary Roberts, 53, then kicked him as they struggled on the floor, it was said.

Co-pilot Friedrich Preiler, right, described the scene as "like a battlefield."

Staff at Zurich Airport had told the pair the buggy could not go in the cabin of the Swiss Air flight to London Heathrow last May, Uxbridge Magistrates' Court heard. After landing, Mitaiare asked cabin manager Ali Chkerdaa for staff names. The pilot stepped in but she pushed him into the cockpit, it is claimed.

Roberts bit Mr Chkherdaa's finger before kicking the captain, the court heard.

Mitaiare says the pilot used force on her.

Roberts, of Fulham, south-west London, and Mitare, of Kensington, west London, both deny assault by beating and failing to obey a pilot. The trial continues.

HEROES USED

by NATASHA WYNARCZYK

IT was one of the most daring prison escapes of all time – two men breaking free from a maximum security jail using nothing more than wooden keys they'd carved in their cell.

Political prisoners Tim Jenkin and Stephen Lee not only managed to flee the notorious South African Pretoria Central Prison but they also made it all the way to safety in London despite a manhunt.

Their remarkable true story has now been made into a film, Escape From Pretoria.

Starring Daniel Radcliffe as Jenkin and Daniel Webber as Lee, the movie takes a close look at how they evaded guards for more than a year, making a mad dash for freedom with just a chisel and a set of keys.

Jenkin and Lee ended up behind bars in June 1978 thanks to their roles as supporters of Nelson Mandela's African National Congress, which was banned during the apartheid era.

Bombs

For three years, Jenkin and Lee had been setting off "leaflet bombs" – harmless devices that distributed 500 illegal pamphlets at a time to get their message across.

When the police came to call in 1978, Jenkin knew "that was it".

He was held in solitary confinement for one month, before being interrogated and sentenced to 12 years in prison under South Africa's Terrorism Act.

Lee received four years fewer than his associate.

Both men were sent to a wing for political prisoners nicknamed "The Local" in Pretoria Central Prison – whose inmates have also included Nelson Mandela and his wife Winnie, hijacker and mercenary leader "Mad" Mike Hoare, and athlete Oscar Pistorius, who shot dead his girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp in 2013.

Jenkin admitted that from the moment he stepped into his dingy cell his thoughts drifted to escape and he began thinking of possible ways to do it.

But their fellow inmates kept telling the pair they'd never make it out, as Pretoria Prison was a fortress that had gone down in history as being almost impossible to escape from.

It was surrounded by a six-metre high barbed-wire perimeter fence, with prison wardens and guard dogs prowling the grounds day and night.

Jenkin and Lee were undeterred, and were so confident they began having money smuggled in to use on taxi fares when they got out.

But after Lee engineered a trip to the dentist for a reconnaissance, he discovered the prison had 10 doors the pair would need to get through before they were free, putting their plans in jeopardy.

Then, Jenkin had a flash of inspiration while gazing at the lock in front of him in his cell.

As a child, he had learned to pick locks using wire.

"I got a piece of paper and, using a knife, pressed it into the lock," he recalls.

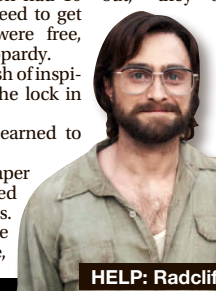

"That gave me the depth of the lock inside, which was the as the key."

Jenkin and Lee used wood in the cell under the no guards, taking their cells in a out of their cells to try and get through an extra door using the keys they'd made.

They risked being caught every time by prison guards, and Jenkin recalls: "We would spot the night warden and your heart is just pumping and you get back to your cell and you'd think: 'OK, it's over, I can relax.' But you couldn't - your heart was beating."

The prisoners used dummies made from boiler suits stuffed with sheets in their beds, so the game wouldn't be given away when the warden made their rounds.

After a series of "dummy runs" which were completed over a year, they finally made it to the 10th door.

But they had to leave this final barrier untested until the actual night of the escape, which was in December 1979.

There was only one guard on duty, and a fellow prisoner called Denis Goldberg distracted him while Jenkin, Lee and their activist jailmate Alex Moumbaris went through the doors.

It almost went wrong when the lock wouldn't budge. Thankfully, Jenkin had brought a hammer and chisel and used it to break the lock so they could make a run for it.

"Believe it or not, the chisel they used in the film was the actual chisel we used on the front door," says Jenkin. "It was the only thing we managed to keep. We got rid of all the keys immediately, but for some reason we kept that... probably as a weapon. I still have it in my toolbox and still use it as a normal tool. I loaned it to them for the film."

Once out, the trio took taxis and trains, hitchhiked and walked 25 miles through the night until they reached the border with Eswatini, formerly known as Swaziland.

Telling

The ANC then got them to Mozambique, then to Angola and Zambia, where the pair appeared at a press conference in January 1980 telling their story to the world.

They then settled in north London - but years later Jenkin returned to South Africa and now lives in Johannesburg.

Pretoria Central Prison has since been renamed Kgosi Mampuru II Management Area, and was reburbished to stop copycat escapes. In fact, there's only been one successful breakout since, when serial murderer and rapist Annanias Mathe got out in 2006 - but he was caught two weeks later.

Jenkin has admitted that finding out Radcliffe would be playing him was a "surprise" - but says he had a series of Skype chats with the Harry Potter star before meeting him on the film set.

"We would often sit together and he'd ask me about particular scenes, what was going through my head while this was happening," says Jenkin.

"We worked quite closely and he wanted to know what to emphasise, he was very keen to portray the mood and, well, me, I guess, as accurately as he could." The film is based on Jenkin's 2003 book Inside Out: Escape From Pretoria Prison, and he says Hollywood has not "embellished" the story.

"In a way the real story is even more exciting," says Jenkin. "It's just too long to fit into the 100 minutes, so they've taken licence to summarise a whole lot of events into one. So I wouldn't say it's embellished at all, it's quite accurate."

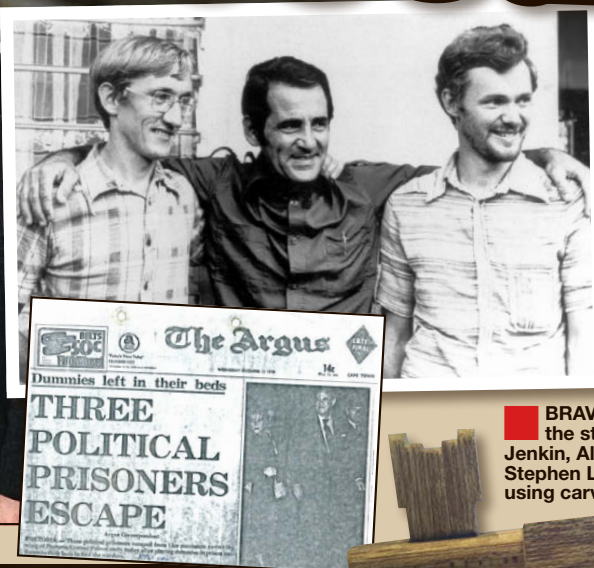

And Jenkin adds more than 40 years on, he has no regrets about his protest work and dash for freedom.

"I'm glad I played the part I did," he says. "I'm glad that we escaped. It was a victory over the system. Everything I did was good."

● Escape From Pretoria is in cinemas from Friday.

THE TROUBLE WITH MAGGIE COLE: ITV, 9pm

HotTV CHOICE

with Mike Ward

Tell you what, tonight's schedules are awash with seaside-themed telly.

As if HARRY REDKNAPP'S SANDBANKS SUMMER (8pm, ITV) – this week featuring Harry's old I'm A Celebrity jungle chums Rita Simons and Nick Knowles – weren't enough, which in a good many ways it very much is, we also have both a new seaside-based comedy and a new seaside-based comedy drama.

The latter is THE TROUBLE WITH MAGGIE COLE (9pm, ITV), set in a fictional Devon village and starring Dawn French in the title role. Maggie is basically a local busybody who knows way too much about the private lives of the local residents and whose big gob is about to land her in a whole heap of trouble. Mark Heap plays her loyal husband, local headmaster Peter, while ex-Corrie star Julie Hesmondhalgh's character Jill is Maggie's nearest and dearest pal. Or at least she is to begin with...

The other seaside-set thing is a new three-parter on Gold, called SANDYLANDS (10pm), going out nightly between now and Friday.

This one stars Sanjeev Bhaskar as a local amusement arcade boss who appears to have suffered a fatal pedalo accident, with Natalie Dew as his daughter, reluctantly back in town to attend his memorial service. Other stars include The Inbetweeners' Simon Bird, Line Of Duty's Craig Parkinson (it's worth watching for his ropery karaoke act alone), plus David Walliams and Sophie Thompson as a pair of weirdo B&B owners.

Meanwhile, on THE GREAT POTTERY THROW DOWN (9pm, More4), they're making toilets.

HACKSAW RIDGE ★★★★★ (2016) Paramount Network, 9pm Mel Gibson launched his directing comeback with this brutally realistic, Oscar-nominated Second World War film. Gibson tells the story of Desmond Doss (Andrew Garfield) – a US Army Medic who refused to take up arms due to his religious beliefs but performed heroics on the island of Okinawa.

MONEY MONSTER ★★★ (2016) Sony Movies, 9pm George Clooney, Julia Roberts and Dominic West are all on the money in a tense hostage thriller that plays out on a financial news channel. But Brit star Jack O'Connell is even better as a disgruntled investor who storms a studio to force a smug host and a dodgy hedge fund manager to come clean on live TV.

★★★★★ Don't miss it ★★★★★ Good

JUST JANE

JANE O'GORMAN SOLVES
YOUR PROBLEMS TODAY
... AND EVERY DAY

I'm out of my league

I'VE been swept off my feet by an amazing woman. She's gorgeous, rich and extremely talented.

I'm ordinary and I really don't know what she wants from me.

She seems to enjoy me talking about my ordinary job and family. We go out for expensive dates to top restaurants and hotels – which she pays for – and I'm sure people are muttering: "What's she doing with him?"

We're just back from a romantic weekend in the country where we walked, ate and had sex. I don't imagine for one minute that I'm much of a lover, but she declared it "the best weekend ever".

What's going on?

JANE SAYS: This woman seems delighted to have found someone genuine and honest.

She may be fed up of the egotists and peacocks in her daily life, so you're like a breath of fresh air.

Don't put yourself down because you are just as good as the next person.

And stop looking over your shoulder.

You have no way of knowing what other people are thinking – and why should you care?

Enjoy yourself. Just show your partner love and respect and continue to be yourself.

Wife gave me boot over pair of shoes

FLING'S LED TO ANGER

MY wife has thrown me out for the pettiest of reasons.

I've been shown the door simply for leaving my shoes in the wrong place.

They should have been in the porch and I made the mistake of bringing them into the hall.

For that crime I've had my clothes shoved into black bags and been told to clear off.

I'm currently squatting with my brother and can't help thinking that my wife was looking for any excuse to get rid of me.

Idyllic

Now she is refusing to take my calls. Any time I go to the house I'm told to stop harassing her or she'll call the police.

We've only been married a year and I can't believe how quickly things have fallen apart.

When we married we were so in love. Our honeymoon was idyllic. We went to Bali, where we made love under the stars.

When we returned home we had so much fun doing up our own place.

Then in November I was told she'd slept with my best mate two nights before our wedding, so naturally I confronted her.

I offered to forgive her but she became angry and vicious. Basically, she didn't like being found out and told off. She felt

Picture posed by models

PETTY WOMAN: Ever since he found out about her romp she has been gunning for him humiliated. She was in the wrong yet she turned on me.

She said the fling was my fault because I'd neglected her in the build-up to the ceremony. In my defence I was working like stink to pay the bills.

But from then on, nothing I did was right. "Shoegate" was the final straw.

Now I feel she was simply waiting for me to trip up.

She got me with the shoes, but it could so easily have been with a badly packed dishwasher or wrongly placed towel.

Isn't this so pathetic when our relationship once had so much potential?

JANE SAYS: This young marriage never stood a chance because it kicked off on a lie.

You married a woman who had slept with your friend hours before your ceremony.

She thought she'd got away with it. It was only when you confronted her with the truth that she turned on you.

You are bitter and confused, but it could be that you've had a lucky escape.

The fact is you don't know this woman at all.

You went into this marriage with high hopes and the best of intentions, but she'd already let you down before you'd exchanged your wedding vows. She behaved like a dream during your honeymoon, yet hit the roof when you dared to call her out.

She isn't the person you need her to be. Were you ever actually right for each other? I have my doubts.

Start looking into divorce. Be honest with friends and family about what happened so they can give you the love and support you need.

There's no shame in admitting that things haven't worked out, so hold your head up high and accept that life goes on.

Left in lurch by parents

MY parents are planning to relocate far away so I can't move with them.

They're looking at tiny houses miles from where I work.

I've accused them of wanting to ditch me and they don't deny it. They say it's time I stood on my own two feet.

But how can I do that when I don't have the money or domestic skills to run my own place?

I'm comfortable in our current home and don't see why I should be turfed out and made to suffer just to prove a point.

Do you? I'm 38.

JANE SAYS: It sounds as if your exhausted parents are desperate for their own space.

Of course they love you, but they need you to spread your wings.

If they've been feeding and looking after you for 38 long years, then you have to accept that this is their time now.

Ask them to help you find a suitable home in a flat-share and wave them off with a cheery smile.

Of course you're apprehensive, but I fear you've become too comfortable and complacent.

I hope you'll thank them for this tough love once you're living a richer life.

Bullying boss so two-faced

MY boss recently put out a memo urging staff to be kind to each other. A decent sentiment, I'm sure you agree.

But she is the most nasty, vindictive, bullying individual I've ever met in my life. How dare she tell us what to do when she's so vile?

JANE SAYS: I suspect this hypocritical individual saw the sending of this memo as a box-ticking exercise. If you don't enjoy the atmosphere in this toxic environment, think about moving on.

Why subject yourself to a daily dose of misery when you could be happier and more fulfilled elsewhere?

I doubt if she's going to change or improve.

Battler Jo still going for gold

OLYMPIAN READY TO COMPETE

TRACK veteran Jo Pavey is preparing to compete in a record-equalling sixth Olympics this summer – aged 46.

The mum-of-two has appeared at every Games since 2000 and her appearance at Tokyo would match the record for a British track and field athlete set by Tessa Sanderson.

But the 10,000m and 5,000m runner has told how her career has been plagued by health problems.

After appearing at her first world championships in 1997, disaster struck. She recalls: "I suffered a serious knee injury which required an operation and cost me two and a half years out of the sport."

"My career threatened to be over when it had only just begun. I battled back and fortunately made my first Olympics in Sydney in 2000."

"But I've also had many serious calf tears throughout my career."

They are not the only health challenges she's faced...

Jo says: "I've had asthma since I was a young child, it runs in my

"I have also had problems with my blood sugar going high during races."

Yet Jo has chalked up some amazing achievements.

Despite tearing her calf muscle three months earlier she finished fifth in the 5,000m at the 2004 Athens Olympics. And as a 2007 World Championships bronze medallist she claimed gold in the 10,000 metres at the 2014 European Championships – only 11 months after giving birth.

She says: "It happened when I would have least expected it. I was over 40 and just coming back from having my second child."

"Age also brings experience. Over the years I've been able to learn what training sessions work for me. I've also learnt to listen to my body and to be flexible." When it comes to her training regime, Jo follows an 8-10 day cycle: "It helps me fit in all the important components of training while allowing enough easy days between the important workouts."

"Typically, my training cycle includes interval sessions with a mix of paces, tempo runs, a long run and days of easy running."

"I carry out strength and conditioning work at home – exercises such as squats, lunges and lots of core stability work."

"To keep my fitness levels up I also use aqua running, particularly if I have a niggles."

"It emulates the effort of normal running sessions without the impact through the joints and muscles."

Jo, married to Gavin with a son Jacob, 10, and daughter Emily, six, adds: "As a family we love to go out on NAKED TRUTH: A range of healthier "lean" smoothies is being launched by Naked. Featuring flavours including Raspberry, Kiwi & Cucumber and Peach & Ginger, they are 40% lower in sugar.

HANDY HINT: We're all being told to wash our hands to avoid coronavirus, but paper towels may be more effective than hand dryers, says a study in journal Mayo Clinic Proceedings.

bikes and also often go paddle boarding, which is good for core strength."

Teetotal during a racing season, Jo adds: "I mainly ensure I eat a good balanced diet of plenty of carbohydrates, protein, healthy fats and lots of fruit and veg. I love healthy stir fries and curries."

"After a hard workout I ensure I hydrate and have a healthy snack within the first 20 minutes and then make sure that I have a decent meal within about 60-90 minutes."

"During the few days in the lead-up to a race I do make an effort to increase my carbohydrate intake."

"On the morning of a race I'll have a pre-race snack of about 400-450 calories. I usually then have a bit of an energy bar or a bit of banana."

Still determinedly gunning for her first Olympic medal, Jo adds: "I still feel motivated to train as I still really enjoy it. I've kept going for so many years because I just love running!"

KEY TO THE CARDS: our racecards are designed to give you a better, easier to understand guide to the runners. Brackets after the racecard number indicate the draw in Flat races. In the form figures, an 'L' indicates the horse finished in last place and a # indicates Bumper form. Figures in brackets after each horse's name indicate the number of days since the horse last ran. (C) indicates a course winner, (D) indicates a winner over the same distance as today's race. (B) or (V) indicates that the horse was blinkers or a victor. (T) indicates that the horse wears a tongue strap. * indicates if wearing blinkers or victor for first time. (P) indicates that the horse is wearing a cheek piece. (BF) stands for beaten favourite. (F) is winner on firm going, (G) on good going, (S) on soft going and (A) on the all weather. The figures in the last column after the jockey's name is an exclusive Clockform rating giving a guide to the horse's chance. The highest figure denotes the top rated, which is also pinpointed by a *.

Honeysuckle to tackle Benie Des Dieux at Festival

in association with thepools.com

HONEYSUCKLE will run in the Mares' Hurdle at the 2020 Cheltenham Festival, connections have decided.

The Kenneth Alexander-owned six-year-old claimed her seventh victory from as many starts with a battling display in the Irish Champion Hurdle at Leopardstown last month, after which copions were kept open regarding her Festival target.

Honeysuckle was as short as 4-1 to beat the boys in the Champion Hurdle next Tuesday.

However, she will instead go back against her own sex - throwing up a potentially mouth-watering clash with the Willie Mullins-trained Benie Des Dieux, winner of the race in 2018 and a final-flight faller 12 months ago.

Honeysuckle's trainer Henry De Bromhead said: "The Mares' Hurdle is where we're going. It was a tough decision but we've made it now and that's it. She seems in great form."

Peter Molony, who purchased the 110,000 euro mare and acts as racing manager to Alexander, believes it is wrong to suggest connections have opted for the easier option with Honeysuckle. He said: "I think everyone knew we were always going to leave it until late.

■ by MELISSA JONES

"In our opinion she's a two-and-a-half-mile mare - that's her optimum trip.

"I've read somewhere that we're lacking in ambition but if taking on Benie Des Dieux is lacking ambition, I don't know what ambition is.

"It will be a great race. Let's hope everything turns up in one piece."

Meanwhile, Jonjo O'Neill plans to pitch unbeaten chaser Annie Mc into Grade One company at the Festival.

The six-year-old mare is set to run in the Marsh Novices' Chase over 2m 4f next Thursday.

Owned by Coral Champions Club and supported by the bookmaker's ambassador Chris Hughes, Annie Mc has won her three races over fences this season.

O'Neill has decided to test her credentials at the highest level, rather than take up one of her two handicap entries.

He said: "It's a good race, I think two and a half, two-six is her best trip.

"She has plenty of pace and jumps well."

FESTIVAL CHOICE:
Honeysuckle will bid for glory in the Mares' Hurdle at Cheltenham

Pin takes aim for Guineas

■ by MELISSA JONES

PINATUBO is the headline name among 77 colts entered for the Qipco 2000 Guineas at Newmarket on May 2.

The colt trained by Charlie Appleby (below) ended 2019 unbeaten in six starts, including a nine-length demolition in the National Stakes at the Curragh and a two-length verdict in the Dewhurst at Newmarket.

He was given a mark of 128 following his Curragh win and the Godolphin colt remains on that rating, which makes him the best juvenile since Celtic Swing achieved a figure of 130 in 1994 - an achievement matched only by Arazi in 1991.

Frankel was rated 126 at the end of his two-year-old season. Adding further depth to the Godolphin challenge are Group One winners Earthlight and Victor Ludorum from Andre Fabre's yard and Saeed bin Suroor's Military March.

Bin Suroor said: "Military March is in full training in the UK where mentally and physically he has progressed.

"It's fantastic to see he's grown so well and we feel the 2000 Guineas would be a fantastic starting point, although this is probably going to be his minimum trip."

RUGBY UNION

BOARD MASTER

Chess nut Manu on the attack

MANU TUILAGI has told how he is preparing for Wales by rehearsing his wrecking-ball tactics – on the chessboard.

England's plans for Saturday's Twickenham clash might have been disrupted by the shock of prop Mako Vunipola being told to self-isolate.

But Tuilagi has focused by heading to the games room at England's five-star hotel and schooling his team-mates.

Henry Slade said: "He killed me at chess, he is unbelievable. It lasted about 30 seconds. It was a rude awakening."

England have been at their best when they jump out to a fast start, with Tuilagi forcing the opposition back.

New Zealand could not cope with him in the World Cup and Ireland were equally powerless 10 days ago.

Now team-mates, used to the luxury of playing alongside him, are getting a taste of the treatment he inflicts on the enemy without even picking up a ball.

"I only started playing chess in Japan during the World Cup but I am obsessed with it," said Tuilagi, 28.

"The way I play is pretty much the same as my rugby. If I'm in white I'll attack as you get to go first.

"And when you attack you have to go all in, because as soon as you let your foot off the gas you'll be losing."

The Ireland team well beaten at Twickenham will certainly recognise that approach.

"I try to get us over the gainline early on, get some momentum," said Tuilagi. "If we get that it's easier to play off it, whether to kick or carry on running."

■ by ALEX SPINK

"We got it last week and we had a good start. Hopefully we will look to do the same against Wales."

After England beat Ireland 24-12, forwards coach Matt Proudfoot asked his family which player had caught their eye. All said Tuilagi.

"He just offers so much," said Proudfoot. "He gives you direction. His personality is dependable, reliable."

Slade must wait to see whether coach Eddie Jones will this weekend restore his centre partnership with Tuilagi which worked so well in Japan.

He added: "Manu gives us a massive lift. He gets us over the gainline really well but we can also use him as a decoy."

Mako in virus setback

From Back Page 29-year-old to stay at home. "Mako is not in camp on medical grounds," said a Rugby Football Union spokesperson. "He is not sick but it is a precaution." The NHS recommended period of self-isolation is 14 days, meaning Vunipola will miss England's final match in Italy on Saturday week.

But the game is under threat due to the scale of the outbreak in the north of the country. Ireland have postponed their game with Italy, scheduled for Saturday.

Wales' fly-half Dan Biggar is winning his race to be fit after suffering a knee injury for Northampton last weekend.

WATCHFUL: Shrubsole

Chances look pour for Anya

■ from ALEX SMITH in Sydney

ANYA SHRUBSOLE says England's players will be glued to the weather forecasts ahead of their T20 World Cup semi-final.

England are due to face India at the SCG tomorrow morning but heavy rain is predicted.

India will go through to the final if both sides fail to get in at least 10 overs as they reached the last four as their group winners, while England qualified as runners-up.

"We are weather watching," said fast bowler Shrubsole, 28.

"Everyone will be downloading around five weather apps between now and the game. It is very hard to predict."

India also have wonderkid Shafali Verma waiting to rain on England's parade.

Verma, 16, is the third-highest scorer in the tournament and is also top of the six-hitting charts.

England opener Danni Wyatt teamed up with her in last year's Women's T20 Challenge and said: "I was like, 'Wow, who is that?'"

"I couldn't believe she was only 15. She can hit the ball very hard already and has a very bright future. But we have our plans for her."

TWIN SNUB STUNS PRICE

WARRINGTON coach Steve Price says he is shocked by the absence of Gareth Widdop and Blake Austin from Shaun Wane's first England selection.

Wane has invited 31 domestically-based players to a meeting at Old Trafford later this month ahead of the Ashes series this autumn.

A further eight from Australia's NRL have been placed on a "watch list" for this season.

Wane has been keen to stress this is not a formal squad and the door remains open for all players on both sides of the world.

But Wolves coach Price – who has eight other players in the group – admitted he did not expect to see Widdop or Austin overlooked.

Widdop has been a regular for his country since his debut in 2010 but has been hampered by injuries over the last 12 months, while Australian-born stand-off Austin featured on the wing for Great Britain in 2019.

■ by GARETH WALKER

Price said: "I was very surprised. Gareth has been really consistent when he's played for his country, and represented his country with a lot of honour."

On Austin, Price added: "With the limited opportunities he got last year, I think he's another one who put the team and the country first. He went out there and had to play out of position."

"I'm not quite sure what Shaun and his coaching staff feel, that's for them to answer."

Other notable absentees include another Australian-born half-back in current Steve Prescott Man of Steel Jackson Hastings, Hull FC utility back Jake Connor and Wane's old Wigan captain Sean O'Loughlin.

But there were invites for Hull centre Josh Griffin, Castleford hooker Paul McShane and Leeds youngster Harry Newman.

Wane said: "I realise there are some notable exceptions at this stage, and I would say to those players the door is never closed and outstanding form will be rewarded."

Warrington's Matty Ashton, who has made a huge impact in three Super League games, faces up to five months on the sidelines with a hamstring tear.

ENGLAND SQUAD: Charnley, Clark, Cooper, Currie (all Warrington), Evals (Salford), Farrell (Wigan), Gale (Leeds), Gildart (Wigan), Griffin (Hull FC), Hardaker (Wigan), Hill, Hughes (both Warrington), Johnstone (Wakefield), Jones (Hull FC), Lomax (St Helens), Lyne (Wakefield), McGilvary (Huddersfield), McShane (Castleford), Makinson (St Helens), Manfredi (Wigan), Newman (Leeds), Percival (St Helens), Philbin, Ratchford (both Warrington), Roby (St Helens), Sarginson (Salford), Taylor (Hull FC), Thompson (St Helens), Tomkins (Catalans), Walmesley (St Helens), Watts (Castleford).

SERIOUSLY football UEFA NATIONS LEAGUE DRAW

Fit or forget it

From Back Page football. Their clubs all have important matches. Then we are hoping both come through with no issues ahead of the summer for us.

"We've had really good updates right the way through and Harry and Marcus (inset) are exactly where we were expecting them to be.

"Both players will give themselves the best possible chance of being available. That's their mentality and that's their dedication to their sport.

"That's the only bit we can guarantee.

"What we can't guarantee is how that rehab will develop as it's stepped up and as it becomes more intense. But they are both on track."

Tottenham striker Kane is confident of playing by next month while Manchester United boss Ole Gunnar Solskjaer says

Rashford will be fit for the run-in. Southgate has always said he will not take players to major tournaments unless fully fit.

He's likely to pick in-form Everton frontman Dominic Calvert-Lewin for this month's friendlies with Denmark and Italy.

Southgate refused to rule out a return for Leicester's Jamie Vardy, who quit international football after the World Cup.

TOP DRAW: Southgate with Belgium coach Roberto Martinez at yesterday's draw

■ from JOHN CROSS in Amsterdam
GARETH SOUTHGATE has been given the chance to lay the ghosts to rest from England's Euro 2016 nightmare.

England were drawn against Iceland in Nations League Group Two of League A - which will be the first time they have faced them since their humiliating 2-1 defeat under Roy Hodgson in Nice four years ago - along with world No.1 Belgium and Denmark.

Three Lions boss Southgate said: "We've been trying to take steps towards doing that [laying ghosts] with our performances since then anyway.

"Now there's a game that is a different sort of test.

"Iceland have had a difficult 12 months but it's a game we've got to be extremely well prepared for because we know the risk involved."

Iceland boss Erik Hamren said: "I can see you want a better result this time!

"I was not the coach then but it was a fantastic moment for a small country like Iceland. You can imagine what it felt like to beat England."

Belgium boss Roberto Martinez said: "It's a great group.

"Going to Wembley is always a very special occasion for all the fans and us as a team and we've improved since we played in the World Cup."

Southgate admitted that he does not know whether England's friendlies with Italy and Denmark will definitely go ahead because of the coronavirus but insisted he is planning towards them.

However, he made it very clear he is backing Everton goalkeeper

GHOST BUSTER

Gareth handed Iceland exorcise

Jordan Pickford to be his No.1 despite watching him make another high-profile error against Manchester United at Goodison Park on Sunday.

But Southgate did cast major doubt on whether Manchester City midfielder Phil Foden, 19, would get a call-up for the Euros because of his lack of game time. He said: "Jordan's performances for us, throughout, have been outstanding. He has been a key part of some big, big results.

"That is clear to everybody but in goal you are always under the spotlight and if you are the England goalkeeper then that is the reality of the job so I don't think he will be shying away from that. He is very resilient.

"He has got a very experienced manager in Carlo Ancelotti at his club now to help with it so I am expecting him to bounce back.

"The weekend goal is one he would want to do better with but that is the life of a goalkeeper."

"The door's open for everybody. We've got 70 English players in the Premier League and when they're of the quality of a player like Phil then of course the door's open but it's clear that he hasn't played a lot of first-team football so it's hard to gauge his level at times.

"It was a brilliant experience for him to be involved in the Carabao Cup final at the weekend. You saw glimpses of the quality he has."

I don't see what all the fuss is about Jack Grealish. Whenever he plays against a top team, he's second best. Looked ok in the championship, but this season it could be two relegations from the Premier League on the trot. FOXY

SICK AS A PARROTT

Jose fed up with call from fans to play his Troy boy

JOSE MOURINHO has told fans to stop getting in a flap over his refusal to start teen striker Troy Parrott.

Injuries to Harry Kane and Heung-min Son have led to calls for the Republic of Ireland forward to ease Tottenham's striker crisis.

But Mourinho said Parrott, 18, who has played six minutes in two Premier League appearances, was not yet ready to be a first-team starter and would be back on the bench against Norwich tonight.

"He's a kid, so of course we need to take care of him," said the Spurs boss. "He has potential but he is not the end product."

"Everything goes very, very well, but this is a world where lots of people, they don't even know if Troy has long hair or short hair. Or is blond or is dark. They don't even know that and speak about: 'Troy, Troy, Troy, Troy, he should play'."

"There was a guy behind me on the bench the other day: 'Play Troy, play Troy'. I don't think he knows Troy."

Mourinho sent Parrott back to the Under-23s on Monday as part of his "educational process" after questioning his attitude.

The former Manchester United boss said: "He's an Irish kid with a family based in Dublin, that comes to London. So he needs to have his feet on the ground."

"I was so happy with the way he performed (for the U23s), but I was worried about attitude. I told him

by NEIL McLEMAN

before the game, every time you play with the kids of your age, you have to show your colleagues why you are the privileged one.

"Why you are training in the first-team every day and some of them are not - they are still in the age group."

"Because it was something that he was not doing. He cannot go there with contempt."

"I had exactly the same words with Scott McTominay (at United)."

"In these generations, kids, they have things too easy in life. It is a process."

WINGS CLIPPED: Parrott and (above) with Mourinho

Dan's a Wig wham man

DANIEL FARKE wants his Norwich players to make FA Cup memories this season.

And if they end up replicating Wigan's double of seven years ago then so be it. Wigan stunned Man City in the 2013 final before being relegated three days later.

The Canaries - 20th in the Premier League table and six points from safety - will take 9,000 fans to Tottenham.

And the last time Norwich lifted a trophy at the national stadium - the 1985 Milk Cup - they went down as well.

Farke (left) won't be risking ill Teemu Pukki or Alex Tettey, but he said: "We play this game in order to create memories. Quite often we judge it just from a financial perspective.

"Cup games are all do-or-die and it reminds us why we first started to play football."

Defender Ben Godfrey said: "It's a chance to win a trophy and go down in history."

BREN WANTS STERLING EFFORT FROM GRAY

DEMARAI GRAY has been urged to follow the lead of Raheem Sterling to kick-start his Leicester career against his old club Birmingham tonight.

Former England Under-21 wide man Gray (left) has had to be patient with the high-flying Foxes this season.

He has not started a league game in 2020 and has been limited to two top-flight starts and 412 minutes of action. But boss Brendan Rodgers wants more from him after comparing his stats of one goal and one assist to Manchester City ace Sterling, who has 11 goals and an assist in the Premier League.

Rodgers said: "These are the levels. Demarai has all the tools to play at the very highest level."

"If you look at speed and power and explosiveness, technique, those are attributes he has."

"Demarai has a lot of caps at Under-21 level.

Then it is how can you grow and be consistent when you get to his age of 23."

"It is something I have spoken to him about."

"If you look at the games he has played, he has to produce more."

"I have worked with a number of wingers who go from scoring three to four goals a season to 15-plus."

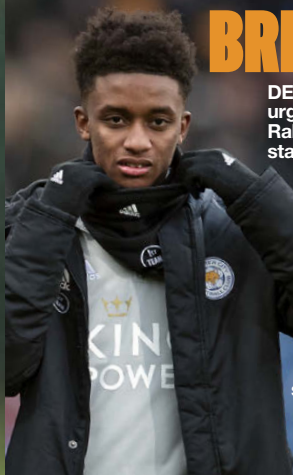

"There is obviously a tactical and technical element to it but it is then repeating that on the field."

Former Birmingham trainee Gray, snapped up in January 2016 for £3.5m, has been promised a run-out this evening but Rodgers hopes he won't try too hard to impress.

He added: "You don't want to put too much pressure on the players because if you have been out of the team and then come in, the worst thing for a player is to force it."

"When you force it then that is when you can get really frustrated."

Hol of a deal for Mason

■ by CHRIS McKENNA

MASON HOLGATE has signed a new five-year contract at Everton in the wake of interest from Manchester City.

The defender, 23, has become an important part of Carlo Ancelotti's first team since the Italian took over at the club and the new deal ties him to the club until June 2025.

Holgate said: "This is my fifth year at Everton and my development as a person and a player in that period has been massive."

"It is a great club to be at and I am really excited about the direction it is going."

"We want to move to the next step and push for bigger things."

"I want to win things – and winning some silverware is where I see us. It is definitely a positive time to be here and I am looking forward to seeing how far we can go."

Holgate joined the Toffees from Barnsley in 2015 and has leaped ahead of Michael Keane in the pecking order to partner Yerry Mina at the back.

PEP'S POWER SHOWER

WINNING FEELING: Pep Guardiola holds the Carabao Cup at Wembley on Sunday

Guardiola sets sights on a cup clean sweep

PEP GUARDIOLA has ordered his Manchester City stars to shower him with more silverware.

City are riding high on confidence after beating Aston Villa on Sunday to win the Carabao Cup for a third time on the spin.

The Premier League champions have now won eight of the last nine domestic trophies available and can add the Champions League and FA Cup this season.

City travel to Sheffield Wednesday tonight looking to dispatch the Championship side and book a place in the quarter-finals to keep alive their hopes of another treble after last season's domestic hat-trick.

But Guardiola has told his men not to get too far ahead of themselves.

He said: "There has been a lot of effort behind the scenes. It started more than one decade ago and a lot of people are working here."

"The most important thing was the league when Roberto Mancini was here, it changed the mentality of the club. The first one is always the most difficult one and they did it."

"But we must think about the next game. I learn at the big clubs I was at before, that when they win a trophy, they go and take a shower and think of the next one. It is so nice what we have done, but now we have another final."

■ by JEREMY CROSS

Away in the FA Cup is always difficult." Whatever happens between now and the end of the season, Guardiola insists he won't judge how successful the campaign has been on how many trophies his side have won.

He added: "I'm not so demanding on my team. I just demand that we be who we are. That is all. Having the personality and bravery to play, that's where I want to be."

"It can be good for people to judge on the titles we win, of course that is important. That barometer is the most important thing, but for the manager it is not the only one. I see if players were better than last season, the way we play, how we react in bad moments."

"How the new players settle, there are many things and not just 'winning the title is good, not winning the title is bad'."

"Arriving in the final stages of competitions, fighting in the league until the last moment but losing it all, is that a bad season? I don't think so."

Monk wants believers

GARRY Monk says his Sheffield Wednesday players should pack in football if they do not believe they can upset Manchester City.

The Owls have won just one of their last nine Championship games, yet Monk insists they must believe they can shock City at Hillsborough. "I've got a feeling

■ by DAVID ANDERSON the lads will give their all in this game," said Monk (left).

"They've earned the right to play against this type of team, they've earned the right to be in this round and we want to try, even though it's a small chance, to make it to the next round. "It can happen. Of course, it needs a lot for that to happen.

"But if you don't believe in that, you shouldn't be in professional sport, certainly football."

"All the odds are against us and we're going to have to be at our very best and have a little bit of luck on top, but who says we can't do that?"

MIG FIGHTER:
Almiron steers
home his first and celebrates with Allan
Saint-Maximin (inset)

AL-MIGHTY

NEWCASTLE have every right to think the FA Cup gods are smiling on them again as Steve Bruce's side clinched a quarter-final spot.

The Geordies haven't been able to buy a goal of late but suddenly their dismal Premier League form went out of the window.

If you believe in fate then there's an ominous ring about this result.

This was the fifth FA Cup meeting between these two great old clubs and all of them have been at The Hawthorns.

Newcastle had only won once - back in 1974 when they ended up going all the way to Wembley.

And Miguel Almiron certainly seems to like the competition - his double making it four FA Cup goals.

The £21m man struck twice in the first half and when Valentino Lazaro was gifted a third it was suddenly all looking unusually

Miguel has Toon dreaming

by DAVE ARMITAGE

comfortable. Still, they couldn't stop themselves giving their fans the jitters as late goals from Matt Phillips and sub Kenneth Zohore had Newcastle reeling.

For Toon boss Bruce it was welcome respite from a slump in which they haven't scored in four league games and find themselves just five points clear of the relegation zone.

West Brom made 11 changes but in Gareth Barry, Chris Brunt, Kieran Gibbs and Charlie Austin drafted in four players with just shy of 1,500 league appearances between them. Allan Saint-Maximin was causing all sorts of problems for the Baggies and he eventually created the breakthrough in the 33rd minute with a superb piece of creative play.

Minutes after rattling the post, he sent Almiron through and he drew keeper Jonathan Bond before curling a left-foot shot around him into the bottom corner.

Then Almiron gave the 5,000 travelling fans real cause to think the trip was worthwhile on the stroke of half-time when he stuck a great finish at the end of a penetrating move.

Lazaro carved Albion open down the right, the ball dropped to Joelinton who put the ball into Almiron's path with a clever backheel and the Paraguayan sent another left-foot shot into the roof of the net. Next it was Lazaro's turn, though he was rather fortunate that Bond pushed the ball onto him trying to deal with Saint-Maximin's 47th-minute centre.

Albion caused a few moments of panic, especially when Phillips clawed one back in the 74th minute when his shot flew in off the underside of the bar.

Zohore grabbed a consolation goal when he tapped home with seconds left.

FA CUP FIFTH ROUND

EXTRA SPECIAL:
Sharp fires in the winner

TIME FOR A SHARP EXIT

GOLDEN-OLDIE Billy Sharp sent Chris Wilder's Blades into the FA Cup quarter-finals for the first time in six years.

The veteran striker came off the bench with the game deadlocked in extra time to head home Luke Freeman's cross for only his third goal of the season – but the 243rd of his outstanding career.

If United's winner came from an expected source, their opener was something of a surprise.

David McGoldrick has been running Newcastle's £40million luxury Joelinton close as king of the non-scoring strikers this season.

Yet it took him just 85 seconds to put the visitors' noses in front.

From Ben Osborn's wicked left-wing cross, unmarked McGoldrick rose to head his first goal of the season and his first in 23 club appearances – stretching back to April 22 in a 3-0 win at Hull last season.

When goal-shy centre-forwards hit the target with barely a minute on the clock, you are entitled to think your luck's out – and Reading were briefly stunned by their fate.

But the Royals summoned a decent response, and United keeper Dean Henderson did well to parry Yakou Meite's swerving effort.

And they were level two minutes before the break when George Puskas ramm'd his penalty beyond Henderson after George Baldock was penalised for pushing Andy Rinomhota.

It was not clear how much force, if any, Baldock exerted in his challenge, and referee Kevin Friend's decision appeared to be based on the artistry of Rinomhota's fall.

The Blades didn't always look comfortable on a lively pitch, but they had looked likelier to extend their lead than concede a confected equaliser.

Skipper John Egan's glancing header from Luke Freeman's corner was just too high, while McGoldrick – enthused by his drought-breaking goal – extended Rafael Cabral.

Once they were level, however, Reading gave as good as they got, taking the tie into extra-time.

But United went and clinched it thanks to that man Sharp.

BILLY GILMOUR made a mockery of Liverpool's once mighty air of invincibility as Jurgen Klopp's week went from bad to worse.

■ by PAUL BROWN

The Reds followed up their shock 3-0 Premier League defeat at Watford to crash out of the FA Cup despite fielding all their big guns at Chelsea.

Goals from Willian and Ross Barkley did the damage.

But 18-year-old phenomenon Gilmour absolutely ran the show in midfield.

The Scotland Under-21 star looked a massive prospect as he repeatedly embarrassed Fabinho in the engine room.

A horrible fumble from Adrian for the opening goal certainly helped in this rematch of the 2012 final.

But it was another poor performance from Liverpool with Chelsea, who also lost Willian to an ever-growing injury list, hitting the woodwork twice.

Considering their 22-point lead in the league, it's not exactly time to panic for Liverpool.

But this was another trophy gone, and they have work to do in the Champions League, where they trail Atletico Madrid 1-0.

How long has it been since Liverpool actually played well?

Some might say those two defeats in their previous three matches had been coming.

Before this, they had led for only 34 minutes in four matches since the winter break and looked a shadow of their usually imperious selves.

Klopp has had his critics for his costly

performance for a young player. He was a calm head in that first five or 10 minutes.

"He's a throwback of a midfielder. Can you put your foot in? Yes. Can you make angles to play the passes? Yes.

"He's only slight in stature but he's huge in personality."

CUP FOR IT: Willian

BANNED: Casilla

Addicks in race row fury

EXCLUSIVE

■ by DARREN LEWIS
CHARLTON are furious that Leeds keeper Kiko Casilla was banned for only eight games for calling Jonathan Leko "a f n**".

And the Addicks have also hit out at thugs now targeting the Congo-born forward on social media.

The FA pushed for a 10-game ban for Casilla, only to be overruled by an independent panel despite pointing out 33-year-old Casilla's "cynical" attempt at "dishonesty".

Both Leno and team-mate Macauley Bonne told the panel they had heard the slur during Charlton's 1-0 win at The Valley in September.

Casilla denied the offence but Charlton are angry the three-man commission - Graeme McPherson QC, former footballer Marvin Robinson and ex-Blackburn winger Stuart Ripley - did not impose a stronger penalty.

The south London club said: "Jonathan was a victim in this incident and the pair of them did not ask for this. The club is proud of both of them for standing up as football continues to fight racism.

"Last year the club twice reported racist abuse on social media directed towards Lyle Taylor to the police."

Luc-ing to return

■ by PAUL BROWN
LUCAS TORREIRA could still play for Arsenal again this season despite leaving Portsmouth on crutches on Monday.

The Uruguayan lasted just 16 minutes of the 2-0 FA Cup fifth round win before being taken off on a stretcher.

He was clattered by a strong tackle from James Bolton and later fitted with a leg brace as a precaution. But midfielder Torreira believes he has only suffered a sprain.

team selection in this competition yet this was a much stronger one than he had named in previous rounds.

But Lampard raised a few eyebrows with his own selection, making six changes from the side which drew with Bournemouth.

In came forgotten man Kepa in goal for his first start in seven games but Jorginho was only on the bench.

Lamps also recalled centre-backs Kurt Zouma and Antonio Rudiger and it has to be said both were all over the place to begin with.

But casual Liverpool shot themselves in the foot when Fabinho coughed up possession cheaply from a short goal kick and Willian pounced.

His shot was almost straight at Adrian but the former West Ham keeper seemed surprised by it and could only deflect it into his own net.

He had just saved really well from Willian moments beforehand and while it wasn't quite a Loris Karius, it was poor.

Kepa then formed a one-man wall to block not one but three Liverpool shots in a row and had made more saves by half-time than he had in a game all season.

But Chelsea fans did not really start to believe until Pedro nicked it from Curtis Jones and fed Barkley, who bombed on through the middle before smashing in number two.

Barkley had struggled to that point but suddenly he came alive.

And Pedro should have finished it when he found himself with a clean run on goal from the halfway line after a slip from Joe Gomez but he shot straight at Adrian. Cesar Azpilicueta then picked out Olivier Giroud with a pinpoint ball over the top which bamboozled a below-par Gomez.

But this time Adrian managed to pull off a fine fingertip save to tip his volley on to the crossbar.

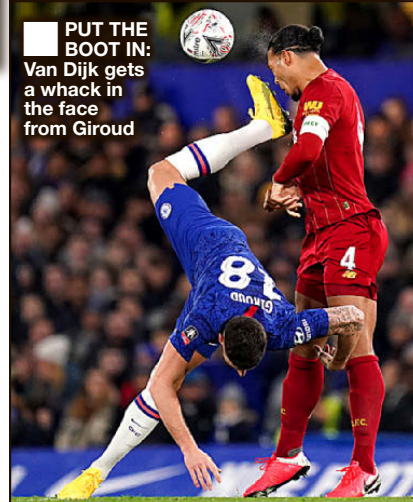

Chelsea were suddenly streaming forward at will, picking holes in an increasingly wide-open Liverpool defence.

ADRIAN'S howler helped dump Liverpool out of the FA Cup last night.

The keeper seemed to have Willian's 13th-minute shot covered but it bounced off his body and into the net.

Ross Barkley slammed in a second after the break as Jurgen Klopp's side - which included key men like Virgil van Dijk and Sadio Mane - failed again.

While it's not quite a crisis, the Kop kings have lost three of their last four games, against Atletico Madrid, Watford and Chelsea.

SQUARES

This game requires two or more players. The first player draws a line from any dot to any vertically or horizontally adjacent dot. The next player does the same, and the players continue to take turns drawing lines in this way. The object of the game is to form a square by joining four dots. When a player draws a line that closes a square, she writes her initials inside the square and gets a bonus turn. When all possible lines have been drawn, the player with the most initialled squares is the winner.

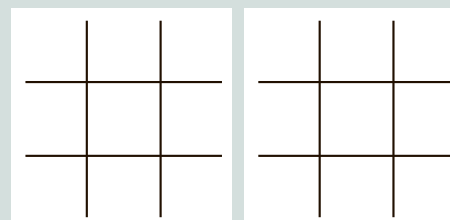

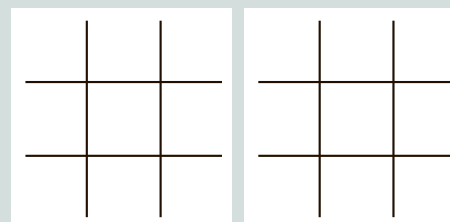

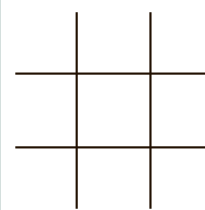

HANGMAN

Think of the name of a planet, then in the blue box above, draw dashes to represent the number of letters in the word. Then the person you're playing against starts to guess letters. If the letter is in the word, write it on the corresponding dash. If the letter is not in the word then draw a line on the hangman and cross off the letter on the alphabet chart.

OPTICAL ILLUSIONS

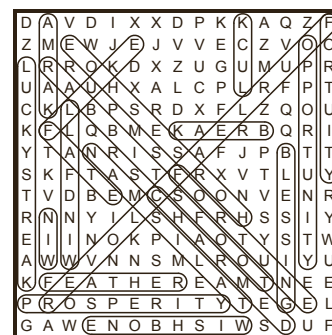

Buddha's Eye: This is a variant of 'Ouchi disc'. When you stare at the disc and move your head, the centre of the disc seems to deepen and expand. This is due to your motion and the contrast between the centre of the disc and its crown, creating the illusion of a 3-D object.

Gentlemen: The balance is perfectly level even though it seems to tilt to the right. The visual distortion is induced by the contrast between the inset patterns of tilted lines and the outlines of the rectangles which represent the balance.
