Ms Patel leaves Cabinet meeting yesterday

Abbott wants independent bullying probe

RESIGNATION
Sir Philip Rutnam

BY OLIVER MILNE Political Reporter

HOME Secretary Priti Patel must stand down while a probe into claims she bullied staff is carried out, Diane Abbott said yesterday.

Labour's demand comes after Boris Johnson launched an investigation into Ms Patel's conduct in the wake of the resignation of top Home Office civil servant Sir Philip Rutnam.

Sir Philip accused Ms Patel of organising a "vicious" briefing campaign against him and indicated he plans to take the Government to an employment tribunal.

The PM has asked the Cabinet Office to "establish the facts" over allegations

Ms Patel broke the ministerial code in her dealings with several officials.

Shadow Home Secretary Ms Abbott called for Ms Patel to "step down" while a "genuinely independent, lawyer-led inquiry" is held, adding: "You can't have a Government at war with its civil servants."

It emerged a former aide of Ms Patel received a £25,000 DWP payout after being "driven to an overdose through her bullying" in 2015. Ms Patel, who was then Employment Minister, allegedly shouted at the woman, told her to "get lost" and fired her because she did not "like her face".

A friend of Ms Patel said: "This person at the DWP only worked for Priti for two weeks and was in the process of quitting when Priti took over." The friend added that the bullying accusations were "made against the department, not Priti".

Cabinet minister Michael Gove said: "The Home Secretary absolutely rejects these allegations."

Ms Patel broke cover yesterday to speak in an MI5 Cabinet briefing.

Labour MP Margaret Hodge said she has "presided over utter havoc and dysfunction at the Home Office".

Ms Patel last night sent an email to her staff saying she regrets Sir Philip's resignation. Co-written by his acting successor as Permanent Secretary Shona Dunn it urged the Home Office "to come together as one team".

DEMAND Diane Abbott

PM 'almost certain' to take paternity leave

BORIS Johnson has said he plans to take paternity leave when his baby with Carrie Symonds is born.

Asked at a press conference if he would, he said: "Almost certainly, yes."

Fiancee Miss Symonds is due in early summer but the PM has a busy schedule, with a G7 summit in the US and a crucial meeting with EU leaders on the post-Brexit trade deal in June. Experts believe the coronavirus may also be at its peak by then.

No10 would not confirm whether Foreign Secretary Dominic Raab is in line to deputise for Mr Johnson.

Two weeks' paid paternity leave came into force under Labour in 2003, although Mr Johnson, with most Tory MPs, voted against the bill. New dads are entitled to £148.68 a week or 90% of their weekly earnings, whichever is lower.

But, as an MP, Mr Johnson is entitled to full pay for the whole period. David Cameron took paternity leave after the birth of his daughter Florence in August 2010.

Mr Johnson's estranged wife Marina Wheeler is said to be "in pieces" that he is engaged to Miss Symonds, 31.

Helen's Law is approved in Commons

BY LOUISE SMITH

HELEN'S Law moved a step closer to becoming law yesterday after passing through the Commons.

The Prisoners (Disclosure of Information About Victims) Bill will now go to the Lords for approval.

It is named after Helen McCourt, 22, who was murdered by pub landlord Ian Simms in 1988.

He was released from his life sentence last month despite never revealing the location of her body.

The bill will force officials to take into account non-cooperation of prisoners during parole requests from killers, and from offenders who do not reveal the identity of children in indecent images.

Helen's mum Marie, 76, who began the law change campaign in the Mirror in 2015, said: "I am thrilled."

WARNING Ian Murray

Labour 'faces 9-council loss in local polls'

BY OLIVER MILNE Political Reporter

LABOUR is facing some of the worst local election results in its 120-year history, a leaked party analysis claims.

It is feared nine councils could be lost in May, with 315 councillors unseated.

And in a worst-case scenario, the document says woes in the areas of northern England previously considered its heartlands will continue.

Sheffield, held most of the past 75 years, is said to be among councils at risk.

Only Wirral and Burnley are listed as possible gains.

Deputy leadership candidate Ian Murray said: "This report should be an urgent wake-up call. We are sleepwalking into disaster if we don't change."

A Labour spokesman said: "We recognise the scale of the challenge."

Turn It On Again

Legends Genesis to re-form after 13yrs

EXCLUSIVE

BY ASHLEIGH RAINBIRD
Diary Editor

CALLING all stations... rockers Genesis are re-forming 13 years after their last live show.

Phil Collins, Mike Rutherford and Tony Banks, all 69, will talk about the reunion on Zoe Ball's Radio 2 Breakfast Show this morning.

The plans, which are thought to include a tour, come after the trio sparked rumours in January when they were snapped together at a basketball game in New York.

Fans have been desperate for the band to re-form since its 40th anniversary tour in 2007.

Last June, Phil and Mike performed together at a concert in Berlin. It came amid six live dates where Mike's other band, Mike and the Mechanics, toured with Phil on his Still Not Dead Yet tour.

At the end of last year, Phil hinted: "We remain close friends, so you never know..." And Mike had said in April: "Never say never. There's no plans. But never say never."

Genesis, whose hits include Invisible Touch, That's All and Turn It On Again, released their last studio album, Calling All Stations, in 1997.

Phil was originally the drummer and became lead singer after Peter Gabriel, 70, left in 1975.

He is now unable to play drums due to nerve damage in his hands and son Nicholas, 18, has filled in for him on his solo tour.

Rolling Stone magazine previously asked him if he would like to stand in for his dad in a Genesis reunion – and he said he would be "ecstatic".

Nicholas said: "That Genesis stuff, drumwise, is something else, absolutely unbelievable."

Phil said in 2017 he had suggested Nicholas standing in for him during a reunion, saying: "I did mention to Tony very quietly if we did anything again, it would be with Nic on drums. He kind of didn't say no. But I'm not sure if he heard me or not."

Meanwhile, former bandmate Steve Hackett, 70, has his memoirs, A Genesis In My Bed, out in July.

CORONAVIRUS CRISIS: NHS

QUEEN IS ON VIRUS ALERT

BY PIPPA CRERAR Political Editor and RUSSELL MYERS Royal Editor

THE Queen led the way for anxious Brits yesterday as she carried on business as usual despite the coronavirus outbreak.

The 93-year-old monarch handed out honours at Buckingham Palace as the deadly virus spread across the UK. She wore gloves as a precaution at the regular investiture, the first time she has done so in a decade.

Meanwhile, the Prince of Wales shook hands, without gloves, as he gave out honours at the Royal College of Music's annual awards in London.

NHS England declared a "level-four incident", the highest level of emergency.

Health Secretary Matt Hancock held talks with social media firms to combat the spread of disinformation.

The Government admitted yesterday that a "reasonable worst case scenario" could mean that 1% of those infected by the virus could die.

If infection rates hit 80%, as they have in Wuhan, China, that could mean as many as 530,000 deaths.

Although Boris Johnson said for most people it would be a "mild" disease, ministers said that the elderly and those with underlying health conditions faced a 2% mortality rate.

Global evidence suggests that children are the least likely to develop serious symptoms, while pregnant women do not seem at higher risk.

A British guest has been confirmed

» Monarch carries on : » Border Force could duties but uses gloves : quarantine travellers as the latest person diagnosed with coronavirus at a Tenerife hotel, local health authorities said yesterday.

As the number of people infected in the UK rose to 51, the Government set out its epidemic plans.

The UK is currently at the containment stage but may use more dramatic measures as more cases develop.

Police would concentrate on serious crimes and maintaining public order.

Emergency powers will be ready by April to let schools have bigger class sizes if teachers are ill, or transfer pupils to other schools. Border Force officers will be able to enforce testing of overseas visitors, and quarantine those infected.

Plans to relieve pressure on the NHS include early hospital release and delaying non-urgent care. Retired doctors and nurses could be asked to return while an "army" of volunteers could be recruited to help in hospitals.

OAPs could be advised to avoid big public gatherings.

A plan to help care homes maintain supplies of food and medicines is being drafted and they could be asked to limit visitors.

Calming fears over mortuary space, the Government said it would guarantee the "dignified treatment" of all fatalities.

The Government said up to one in five working people, around six million, could be absent from work at the epidemic's peak. At that time they would advise people to work from home.

FILTER Woman in the City of London

The Prime Minister said he was "going to keep all options under review" on getting employers to offer at least statutory sick pay.

The Government's expanded information campaign will say that hand-washing remains the most important thing people can do.

It believes it will take "months rather than weeks" for the outbreak's full impact to be felt.

As coronavirus concerns created an international rush for toilet paper, Sir Patrick Vallance, the chief scientific adviser, said there was "no reason" to panic-buy or stockpile any supplies, or to cancel summer holidays.

Car plants may halt production due to a shortage of components from China, the union Unite warned. The Treasury is set to offer relief to affected businesses.

As cases in Japan hit 980, sports minister Seiko Hashimoto hinted she wanted to postpone the Tokyo Olympics until later in the year.

Iran mobilised 300,000 soldiers and volunteers. The death toll in Italy has risen by 27 over the past 24 hours to 79 and the country's government is considering a quarantine zone near the northern city of Bergamo.

Last night Argentina confirmed its first case, Spain confirmed its first death and French cases rose to 212.

GONE Shelves empty of hand sanitiser

Stores are cleaning up

SALES of hand sanitiser in supermarkets have surged by 255% in the coronavirus crisis.

Shelves have emptied as 10% more was spent on household cleaners, said industry data firm Kantar.

Two alarmist online adverts for face masks have been banned by the Advertising Standards Authority for exploiting people's fears.

FRESH Wipes popular

Clear messages will stop panic

THE best time for the Government to inform us about the coronavirus outbreak is before it reaches epidemic proportions.

One message is that fatality is correlated with age so if you are over 80 or you have an underlying condition you're at high risk. If you're under the age of 50, you are not.

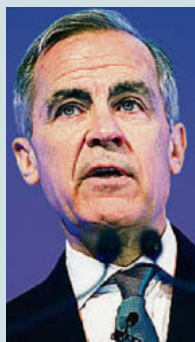

Now is the moment for the health authorities to persuade the future 80% of mild cases to stay at home and not rush to a hospital. Avoid touching the face, particularly the mouth, nose and eyes which form entry points for the virus.

We have learned from China that clear, early communication limits panic, so minister Matt Hancock is duty-bound to be honest with us.

'SHOCK' Mr Carney

Impact to be 'temporary'

THE economic shock of the coronavirus could be "large but ultimately temporary", outgoing Bank of England Governor Mark Carney has warned.

Comparing the outbreak to the 2008 financial crisis, he said while that left lasting economic scars, the impact of the virus is expected to be "disruption not destruction". Mr Carney told the Treasury Select Committee the Bank is ready to "act as appropriate" to prop up Britain's economy and financial system.

The "collective response will be both powerful and timely", he said, adding: "The Bank's role is to help businesses and households manage through an economic shock that could prove large but will ultimately be temporary."

Low-paid face self-isolation cash misery

BY DAN BLOOM

NEARLY two million low-paid workers will be ineligible for statutory sick pay in the crisis, union chiefs warn today.

SSP, worth £94.25 a week, is paid to people in self-isolation but not the self-employed or those on under £118 a week.

Tory ministers yesterday said the ineligible can claim universal credit or employment and support allowance instead.

But MPs said it is not good enough as UC has a five-week wait and ESA needs claimants to have paid National Insurance.

Boris Johnson said he was aware of the problem and "we're going to keep all options under review" but did not announce any solid changes to the system.

TUC general secretary Frances O'Grady is demanding an emergency law. She said: "No one should be out of pocket for doing the right thing. As it stands, many people won't be able to meet basic living costs if they stay home from work."

"This is an impossible choice that has serious implications."

NAZANIN Zaghari-Ratcliffe may be temporarily released from Iranian prison, but her family say they have heard nothing.

Hampstead MP Tulip Siddiq cited the Iranian ambassador to the UK as saying that Nazanin "may be released on furlough today or tomorrow". If released it is believed she would be sent to her mother's house in Iran.

Coronavirus may have killed as many as 210 people in Iran.

Husband Richard Ratcliffe has heard nothing and is sceptical about the offer. He said: "Our experience of furlough last time was negative. The family were exposed to threats from the Revolutionary Guard."

THE cost of a prescription in England is set to rise to £9.15.

It means charges for NHS medication have gone up by almost 30% since the Tories came to power in 2010.

TESTED Kea parrot

Parrots enjoy a flutter just like humans

BY MARK WAGHORN

PARROTS can gamble and make decisions based on probabilities just like us, researchers found.

They discovered the kea, a type of parrot from New Zealand, predicts events based on previous knowledge or experience.

Six keas were trained to associate the colour black with a treat and orange with no reward.

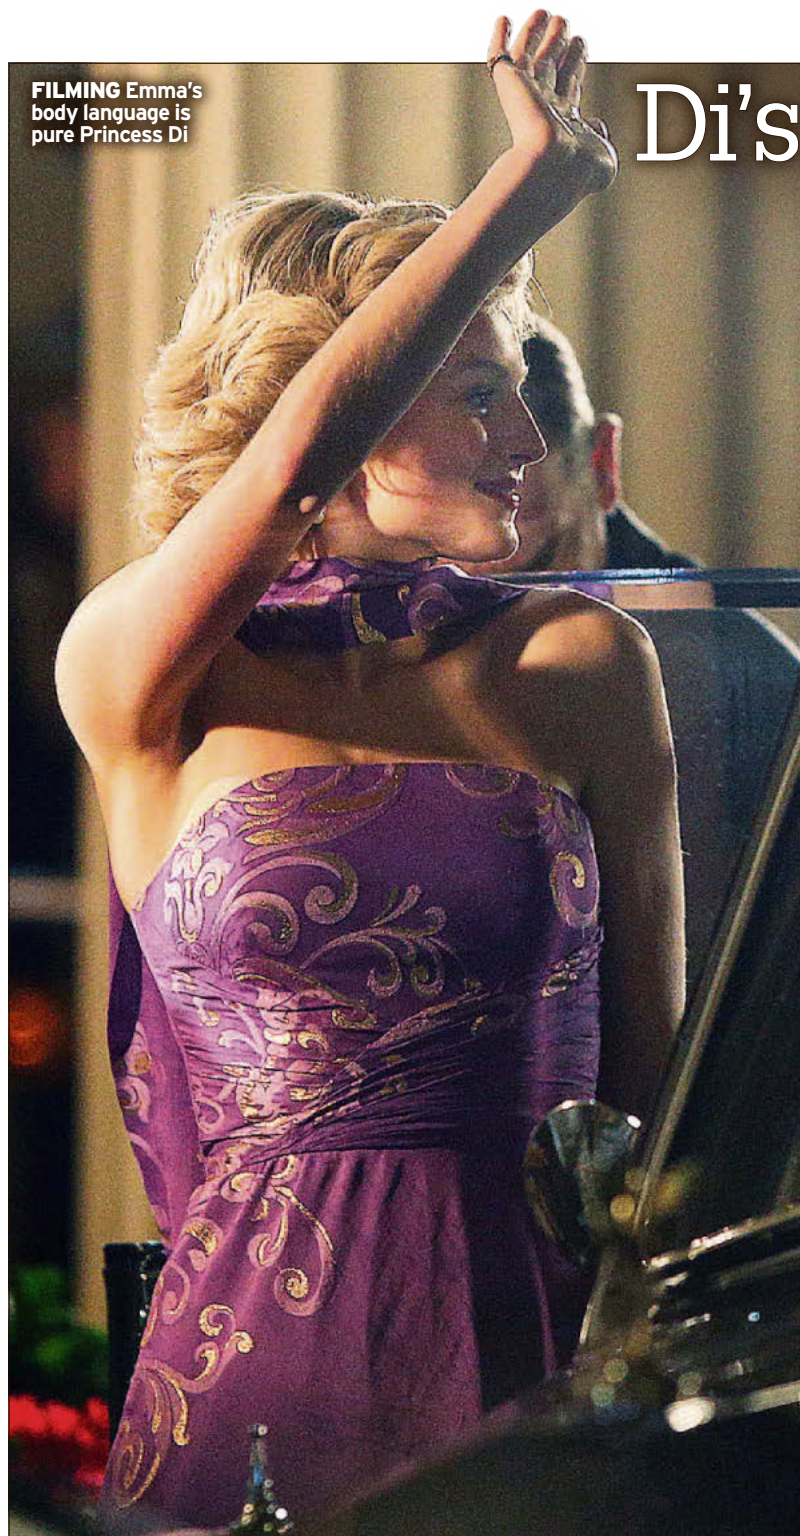

They were then shown two jars of mixed tokens, one with more black than orange and vice versa.

Next a researcher pulled out a token from each jar and hid it in their fist.

The keas consistently chose the hand which reached into the jar with the most black tokens.

Auckland University's Amalia Bastos, who led the study, said: "Keas behave very intelligently."

CPS probing decision to prosecute Caroline

EXCLUSIVE

BY TOM BRYANT
Head of Showbiz

PROSECUTORS will examine their decision to press ahead with prosecuting Caroline Flack after a storm of criticism over her "show trial".

Love Island star Caroline killed herself on February 15.

A day earlier she had learnt the CPS was pursuing charges that she attacked her boyfriend, Lewis Burton, with a lamp.

After a Freedom of Information request the CPS said yesterday there would "be a post-case review panel conducted by a deputy chief crown prosecutor."

COURT DATE Caroline Flack

Star killed herself ahead of trial

A spokesman added: "The review will look at the general CPS handling of the case and, obviously, the decisions behind charging is part of that."

But it is unlikely the results of the probe will be made public.

He said: "Post-case debriefings are not uncommon... but we do not comment on the outcome."

Caroline denied the charges while Lewis, who received a head injury during the alleged incident at her London flat, insisted he "never supported" a prosecution.

He also said Caroline, 40, had become the subject of a "witch hunt". After her death, Caroline's managers slammed the CPS for conducting "a show trial" that caused her "significant distress".

Francis Ridley, of Money Talent Management, said at the time: "[The CPS] pursued this when they knew not only how vulnerable Caroline was but also the alleged victim disputed CPS version of events." The Met Police has already referred itself to the police watchdog over its contact with Caroline before her death. It said this was standard practice.

Caroline stepped down from ITV2 show Love Island after being arrested last December.

She was bailed following an initial court hearing but ordered not to contact Lewis before the trial, which was due to start this month.

VOICE OF THE DAILY Mirror

Crisis needs cool heads

WASH your hands, stay calm and carry on may be sound advice, but coronavirus spreading in Britain requires cool heads to avoid both panic and a pandemic.

When the potential number of fatalities could run into the thousands, tens of thousands or even hundreds of thousands, the importance of preparing for the worst while hoping for the best couldn't be clearer.

Tory Minister Michael Gove's dismissal of experts couldn't sound more stupid when the crisis requires answers from the best brains.

The situation will worsen if we lose our heads, with up to a fifth of the workforce off sick during the epidemic potentially creating a giant financial black hole in the economy.

Doing much of what we usually do, including keeping schools open instead of withdrawing children in fear, is the bulldog spirit for which our nation is famed the world over.

The Queen staying calm and carrying on in her gloves shows us all the way forward.

Tory health tax

NHS prescription prices rising in England by another 15p to £9.15 focuses attention on a sickening Tory rip-off.

If Labour in Wales and the SNP in Scotland can keep them free, surely the Conservatives in Westminster could do so, too, instead of Boris Johnson continuing to levy what is effectively a medicine tax.

The same is true of car parking when it's free at most Welsh and Scottish hospitals, while in England, private operators are allowed to fleece patients and visitors.

Labour promised at the last election to axe parking costs and make prescriptions free in England. Voting Tory sustains unfair, expensive Conservative penalties.

Phil re-Genesis

DAD-BAND Genesis announcing they are reforming is a fresh start for Phil Collins and the wrinkly rockers.

After what was a major break-up, music fans will be watching to see if the former band-mates still have the Invisible Touch.

CRISIS MANAGEMENT

I myself am prepared to self isolate.. either at an agreeable country house or a luxury villa on Mustique, supplied by somebody or other, let's not get bogged down in details..

Smart speakers

You may rely on an Alexa or a smart speaker to play music, time the oven or turn lights off and on.

But this convenience comes at a price. Experts agree they can be a huge problem when it comes to privacy. Dr Garfield Benjamin, a post-doctoral researcher at Solent University, said:

"Smart assistants are privacy nightmares. They can tell when you say 'Hey Alexa' by constantly listening in."

Jake Moore, a cyber security specialist at internet security company ESET, agrees. He says: "If you're going to buy a smart speaker, you're effectively putting a surveillance bug in your home."

"They know a tremendous amount about us from these devices. They're there to hear you, say 'Ok, Google' and 'Hey, Siri' to kick in and do what you want."

"Smart speakers use clever algorithms, it's extremely valuable information, they can listen out to those words. It's going to learn the characteristics."

Dr Benjamin recommends turning your microphone off when not using your speaker or, if you're really concerned, don't have one at all.

Baby monitors

Monitors connected to the net are now a major concern for privacy. Their security is under scrutiny after hackers could talk to kids through them.

The National Cyber Security Centre advises people to tweak settings and update the easy-to-guess passwords.

Dr Benjamin warns that even if you trust the makers security is not often a priority.

"They could have security vulnerabilities that might allow anyone on the internet to watch your kid or giving legitimate users access to each others' feeds."

"There have even been cases of hackers being able to talk to children through the monitors."

"If you want a video monitor, try to choose one you can disable remote access. You should change default passwords and set up two-factor authentication to make it more difficult to hack into."

He advised to research known security issues with the device or the firm before trusting it with video of your children.

Laptops

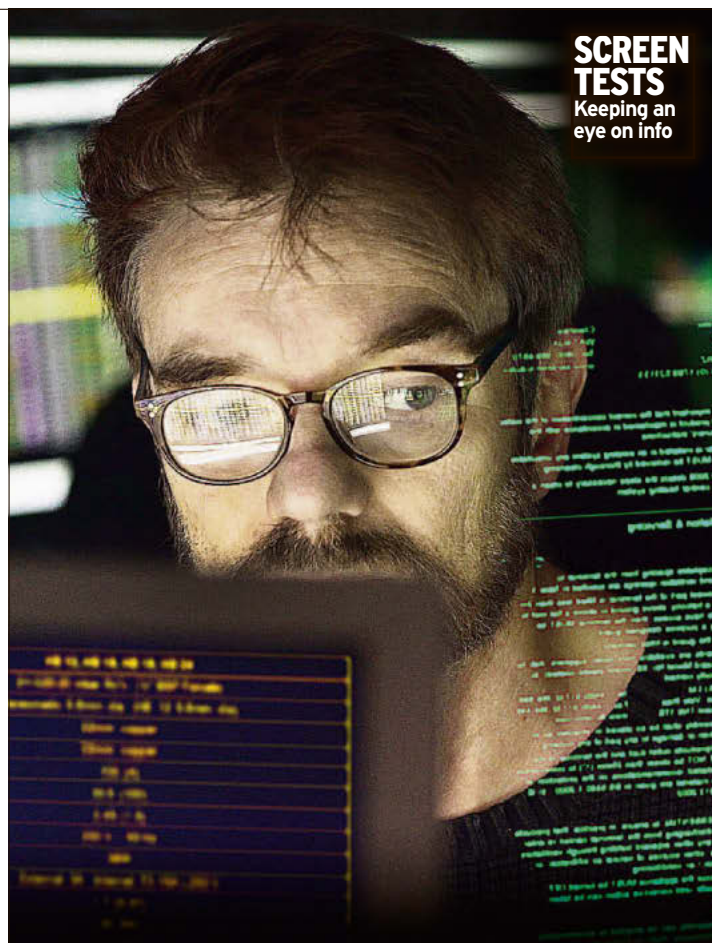

Laptops can get infected with malware and other viruses.

Dr Benjamin says: "A particular risk with laptops is the fact that they have a built in camera. This creates a privacy risk."

"Even the former FBI director James Comey recommended covering over your laptop camera with tape – it's something that he, Mark Zuckerberg and many security experts do. Laptops are quite complex systems and that adds

SPY TECH SNOOPERS

Safety worries for devices

BY RHIAN LUBIN

TECHNOLOGY is crucial to our lives, from phones and laptops to central heating.

But after owners of online baby monitors were hacked by cyber criminals, there are fears the high-tech devices we rely on so much can actually be used to spy on us.

Here, we ask experts if we are the targets of sinister snooping, how to stay safe and reduce the risks online...

security and privacy risks. There are risks with, for example, remote desktop software among others.

"These might allow hackers, companies or governments to gain access to your device."

"The best way to protect yourself is to keep your laptop up to date – updates often include the latest security patches. There is also a lot of good advice available, for example from Doteveryone's "be a better internetter" campaign.

MAJOR CONCERN Baby monitor

See doteveryone.org.uk/project/betterinternetter.

Mobiles

Like laptops, your phone is unlikely to be listening but Mr Moore says it is still "possible". Your apps are more of a concern than the device. He says: "Are they listening? I'd have to say they're not, but it is possible. It's all about managing risk and how much of a target you are. A CEO of a big business is far more of a target than someone who isn't high profile."

Dr Benjamin says: "Smart phones often come with lots of pre-installed apps, and these can get around some of the restrictions that are usually put in place to protect users. For example, some of the Google Play Store safety restrictions that control app privileges can be bypassed with pre-installed apps. This is particularly common with cheaper phones. Best bet is to uninstall unwanted or unused apps."

Smart home apps

Dr Benjamin says: "Smart homes are increasingly common but connecting your energy systems to the internet can be dangerous. There's the risk your home could be hacked, but also privacy risks from the companies that manage these devices."

"Your central heating patterns can give away when you are home or away, whether that's being off for a couple of weeks while you're on holiday or the daily rhythms of your family. Smart meters make this even worse, with electricity usage information being able to even pin-point which film you are watching based on how your TV energy use changes over the course of the film."

Always check the privacy agreements when installing smart home devices and protect yourself by changing default passwords.

"You can often find security reviews online that analyse devices for other issues like hard coded admin passwords. As soon as you are sending utility information through a company's server, you are exposing some of your daily habits to them."

Social media

Mr Moore says social media apps, like Facebook, Twitter and WhatsApp, aren't listening to us, but know a lot about us.

He says: "There are huge questions around social media apps listening in to your conversations."

"It's not been officially proven but I don't believe social media apps are listening, purely because if they were it'd be a huge scandal."

"It may not be listening into you but every time you post it's reading the key words you're writing about, the hashtags. If you post a photo of a baby a lot, they're going to make the assumption you're a new parent."

"You may say something in conversation then notice that advert coming in the next week. That doesn't necessarily mean they've been listening. It comes back to the algorithm. It's incredible how much these firms know."

Dr Benjamin says: "A problem can happen over time as apps seek more access to your device or data. This is known as 'permission creep' and often comes along with new functions."

"It's good practice to check the permissions your apps have and disable any that feel unnecessary or invasive. As with phones, uninstall any apps you don't use."

ALERT King George Dock
10 'migrants' discovered in container

BY JEREMY ARMSTRONG

A CHILD and two women were among 10 suspected illegal African migrants found yesterday in a shipping container in Hull.

They were discovered at King George Dock after UK Border Force officers alerted police at 11.30am.

Two women and a man were taken to hospital but none were thought to be in a serious condition.

A Home Office spokesman said: "All 10 presented themselves as Eritrean nationals and had arrived from Zeebrugge."

The adults faced Home Office questioning and the child was due to be handed to social services.

All will be treated under immigration rules.

Last October the bodies of 39 Vietnamese nationals were found in a refrigerated lorry in Grays, Essex.

BUYOUT Scunthorpe plant
China deal for British Steel
by next week

BY GRAHAM HISCOTT
Head of Business

A CHINESE takeover of British Steel saving 3,200 jobs in Scunthorpe should complete next Monday.

Buyer Jingye said the deal will unlock £1.2 billion investment to modernise the North Lincolnshire town's steelworks.

But despite most jobs being saved, some 400 face the axe on the same day.

It comes 10 months after British Steel collapsed and was kept afloat by state support.

Jingye is taking on the Scunthorpe plant, Teesside Beam Mill and a mill in Skinningrove, North Yorks.

The agreement does not yet include British Steel's plant in Hayange, France.

Jingye chief Li Huiming said he looks forward to beginning "a new chapter in British steelmaking".

DAVOOD TALKS ABOUT

AGONY
Davood and Tawos with their sons in Lesbos

BY TOM PARRY

Special Correspondent in Lesbos

PICTURES BY PHIL HARRIS

CLASPING their two young sons as the Greek police surge towards them, refugees Davood and Tawos Sharifi curse their dreadful fate.

Trapped on the island of Lesbos that has become their prison, the family who fled the Taliban watch as the promise of freedom escapes their grasp in a charge of riot shields and rubber batons.

In the pretty harbour of Mytilini, the island's capital, refugees from war-torn nations such as Syria and Afghanistan are being rounded up to ensure they do not get any further into Europe.

Ripped off by people-smugglers in Turkey who charged them £3,000 for an illegal three-hour journey across the Aegean Sea in an inflatable dinghy, they have now been tricked again.

As the stand-off simmers, officers force hundreds of refugees on to buses to be taken back to a camp where around 30,000 people live in squalor, unable to move forward or go back.

Davood, 50, says he has been waiting seven months to get his family to the Greek mainland. Conned into believing Turkey's promise last week that Europe's borders would be open, the wait goes on.

His sons Ati, four, and Mohammad, two, are in poor health and exhausted.

Davood says: "We left Afghanistan for our safety a year ago. We left because my two brothers were killed by the Taliban."

"For a month we walked through Iran then Turkey. Imagine that with two kids. Their whole lives have been horrible."

"All the money we have, after giving our savings to the smugglers, is the cost of a ferry ticket to Athens. But they won't allow us to go there. They won't give us the stamp on our asylum forms."

Davood adds: "We all came today because we had been told they were letting people on the ferries. Instead we are being herded by police."

"We came here to escape the Taliban, now the Greek police are coming at us."

Davood, a farmer in his home village near Herat, and Tawos, 30, left Afghanistan to work and get their lads into school, without the daily threat of terror attacks and torture.

As they herded migrants through the harbour, the officers shouted in English: "Move, move - no papers to Athens." Greece's government is forcibly repelling migrants trying to get in, and they are doing their utmost to deter families from staying.

The angry scenes in Mytilini were played out in front of British Border Force ship HMC Valiant, in Lesbos to help with the European effort to stem the flow of illegal immigration.

It comes after vigilante attacks by locals who are fed up of bearing the brunt of this crisis.

Charity workers say they have been attacked. Stones have been thrown at cars going to and from the camp, which covers a hillside far beyond an official zone overseen by the UN. It is claimed there have also been arson attacks on facilities associated with the migrants.

Hundreds of people have arrived on islands here in recent days after Turkey's President Tayyip Erdogan announced his country was opening its borders.

His ploy was to put pressure on other nations to accept some of the roughly 3.7 million refugees in Turkish camps.

Harry Dunn's mum PM plea

HARRY Dunn's heart-broken mum has urged Boris Johnson "not to be frightened" of meeting her.

Charlotte Charles wants the PM to "address the issues" around the death of her 19-year-old son.

Harry was killed last August in a crash outside a US base in Northants.

Accused Anne Sacoolas, 42, returned to America.

In a letter, Ms Charles wrote: "Please meet with us so we can talk... We just want to ensure that Harry did not die in vain."

COURT DATE Gillian Bayford, and inset, with her ex Gavin Innes

BY STEPHEN WHITE

EUROMILLIONS winner Gillian Bayford has admitted shoving and shouting at her ex-lover – a domestic abuse charity campaigner.

The mum-of-two, 47, who scooped £148million with her then-husband Adrian in 2012, confessed to a breach of the peace against Gavin Innes, 46, on two separate occasions in October 2017.

But it was also revealed she had been subjected to a campaign of online abuse and false allegations to social workers, her golf club and the charity NSPCC.

Her QC Murdo MacLeod claimed the ex-hospital cleaner was the victim of a vendetta staged by Mr Innes.

He told Dundee sheriff court the false allegations led to "parallel investigations which were distressing and unfounded". Bayford had been due to face trial accused of repeatedly battering him.

HUGE WIN Gillian with then husband Adrian in 2012

The Crown accepted a guilty plea to a lesser charge of behaving threateningly and abusively – a domestically aggravated statutory breach of the peace.

The pair, who had met at school, began dating after he asked her to help with his charity for male victims of abuse. Sheriff Lorna Drummond QC imposed a verbal warning, saying: "I'm not going to impose any penalty. I'm going to admonish you."

Outside court, Mr Innes denied being behind any vendetta or calling her his "pension fund".

He added: "It's sad she wasn't punished."

JAILED Tekle Lennox, and PC Chris Burnham

A HEROIC cop who almost died after being run over while making an arrest came face-to-face with the culprit yesterday.

PC Chris Burnham, 48, suffered a fractured skull and brain bleed after trying to arrest robbery suspect Tekle Lennox, 37, in Coventry last September. He was charged with attempted murder but prosecutors accepted his guilty plea to causing GBH with intent.

As Lennox was jailed for seven years and four months, the PC told Warwick crown court: "I'm struggling to get back to the person I was."

'TARGET' Rob Parkes
Mum 'urged four men to aid murder'

BY LOUIE SMITH

A MUM asked four different men to arrange the murder of her ex after he won custody of their daughter, a jury heard.

Chelmsford crown court was told yesterday that Victoria Breeden, 39, called ex-husband Rob Parkes a b*d and asked boyfriends and other pals to get him killed, offering one £5,000 if he did.

Prosecutor Christopher Paxton QC said Breeden had a "serious and deadly" intention and only "good fortune" saved Rob's life.

Police searched her home in Littleport, Cambs, and found £18,000 cash hidden in a baby milk tin.

Breeden, who appeared in court in a wheelchair, denies four counts of soliciting Mr Parkes' murder over a five-year period.

The trial continues.

ACCUSED Pair cover faces
Pilot hurt as pair go gaga in buggy row

BY MIKE BEDIGAN

A MOTHER and daughter assaulted an airline captain in his cockpit after they were not allowed to store a baby carrier in the cabin, a court has heard.

Henrietta Mitaiare, 23, and Mary Roberts, 53, allegedly pushed Captain Guido Keel to the floor, then scratched and kicked him after arriving at Heathrow Airport last May.

They had been travelling from Zurich, Uxbridge magistrates court heard.

Arlene De Silva, prosecuting, said: "There was a tussle. She ended up on top of the captain."

Captain Keel sustained scratches to his face and arm and a bite on his upper arm in the incident.

Mitaiare and Roberts, of South-West London, deny assault by beating.

The trial continues.

Tragic Dawn's parents 'feel abandoned'

VICTIM Dawn Sturgess

THE parents of novichok victim Dawn Sturgess say they feel as though the Government has "abandoned" them.

Dawn died aged 44 at Salisbury District Hospital, eight days after coming into contact with the nerve agent.

Police believe it was the same kind used in the poisoning of Russian ex-spy Sergei Skripal and his daughter Yulia in Salisbury two years ago today.

Dawn's parents, Stan and Caroline, are currently helping the BBC with the final stages of a drama about her death, starring Anne-Marie Duff, Rafe Spall and Mark Addy.

And speaking ahead of the anniversary of their loss, Stan said: "Our anguish goes on. Obviously, we feel abandoned. We've heard nothing."

"Apart from the lack of interest from the Government, the date of the inquest into Dawn's death keeps getting put off. This is partly because the family have challenged the scope of the inquest. But all the same, it adds to our ordeal."

Dawn and boyfriend Charlie Rowley were poisoned on June 30, 2018, after discovering a perfume bottle in a bin.

Charlie, 46, recovered but still suffers health problems.

In April last year, he met the Russian ambassador in London to challenge him over the Kremlin's involvement.

POISONED

Yulia and Sergei before the attack

BY ADAM ASPINALL

TWO years on from the horrific poison attack, Sergei Skripal, still in hiding, looks to have found a way to leave touching tributes at the graves of his wife and son.

Sergei, 68, and his daughter Yulia, 36, survived the novichok poison assassination bid on March 4, 2018.

The pair remain under protection at an unknown location in the UK.

But fresh flowers and a heart-shaped wreath yesterday appeared next to their family's headstones.

Tragically, it is still too unsafe for them to pay their respects in person to Sergei's wife Liudmila, who died from cancer in 2012, aged 59, and son Alexander, who died of liver failure aged 43, in 2017.

Alexander had been on a holiday in St Petersburg – and would have turned 46 last Sunday.

Sergei often visited the graves, in Salisbury, Wilts, before he was attacked and it was one of the last things he and Yulia did before they were taken ill.

Former spy Sergei still owns his house in the city which was the epicentre of the attack. It was thoroughly cleaned by the army and the council is hoping to buy it to put on the market.

Former council leader Matthew Dean, who was at the forefront of the crisis, said of their former neighbours in the quiet cul-de-sac: "The Skripals' house has been completely decontaminated and everything is back to normal, but they have had terrible inconvenience."

"It should not be underestimated when you can't order a pizza, have a delivery from Amazon, for months at a time – it makes daily life difficult."

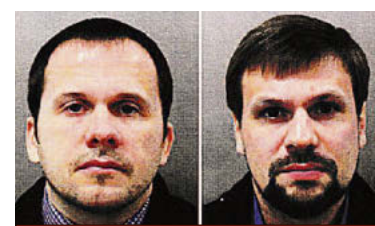

"They were absolute innocent victims of a foreign power who were doing something absolutely, unbelievably, irresponsible."

A Wiltshire Council spokesman said: "We are working with local residents and the owners to bring this property back into residential use."

"We have committed to ensuring it is not used to trade on its history..."

Authorities later identified two Russian nationals – Alexander Petrov and Ruslan Boshirov – as suspects over the poisoning, but no arrests have ever been made.

'DATES' Adrien & Georgina Harvey's ex 'romancing' Blinders star

BY CHRISTOPHER BUCKTIN
US Editor

PEAKY Blinders star Adrien Brody is reportedly dating the British ex-wife of rapist Harvey Weinstein.

As the disgraced movie mogul faces up to 29 years behind bars, it is claimed fashion designer Georgina Chapman, 43, has found solace with the Oscar-winner, 46, who starred in her ex's films Jailbreakers and Hollywoodland.

The couple had already met but got together when they were both invited to Puerto Rico for the launch of Helena Christensen's swimwear line in April.

Pictures from the luxury Dorado Beach Ritz-Carlton Reserve show the pair dining with friends and they have since been seen several times in New York.

Chapman married Weinstein in 2007 and left him in 2017.

Sheridan prepares for unborn son

EXCLUSIVE

BY TOM BRYANT
Head of Showbiz

MULLING over names for her impending arrival is a bittersweet experience for Sheridan Smith.

The joy and excitement of soon becoming a mum is mixed with poignant thoughts of her much-loved late father who died from cancer.

The pregnant actress and singer has considered honouring her dad by naming her son after him, but says Colin may not be the best choice.

She said: "I think all the names we've got so far have been pretty traditional. We thought about naming him after my dad, but my dad's called Colin, which is a bit...."

"As much as we miss him and love him. Storm, River, Colin... you never know."

The 38-year-old lost her dad in 2016, a trauma which later triggered a mental breakdown.

Sheridan, expecting her first with fiancé Jamie Horn, 28, has praised him for being "the best".

"I've had a bit of morning sickness in the beginning, but I've been quite lucky. Honestly, he has been looking after me - he's the best."

"He does everything while I'm just sat at home with the dogs and baking a baby - I've got an easy life. I'm due in May..." Sheridan added: "As soon as I knew I was pregnant, I did take a while off, but whenever the baby arrives, I will be going back to work."

"I know I will. I'm chomping at that bit already."

"I went to the theatre the other night and he did not stop kicking - he loves musicals. I'm assuming he's going to be a dancer or else he [Jamie] wants him to be a footballer."

Sheridan announced she was expecting with Jamie last October on board a cruise ship while she was performing.

Speaking to the audience, the star told fans she had a "baby on board", going on to reveal she'd been suffering from morning sickness.

She joked at the time: "I've got buckets in each wing and trainers so I can run. I'm very out of breath. I've got all these new symptoms, so, sorry."

Talking previously about her mental breakdown, Sheridan said: "I kind of lost it a bit after my dad died. I've come out the other side now and I need to get it all out through my music."

"In public, it looks like I've moaned about everything with my dad dying, but that's not the case. I just had a massive meltdown."

Sheridan met City worker Jamie on Tinder in February, 2019, and the pair got engaged just three months later.

James Stewart

How can anyone omit from a list of Top 30 male movie stars arguably the greatest of them all, James Stewart?

There are great film actors and then there are great movie stars, rarely do the two coincide.

James Stewart epitomised some of the greatest screen acting, combined with genuine star quality and for decades he was the first choice leading man for Hollywood's top directors.

Roger Sampson, South East London

Meryl Streep

The most amazing omission was Meryl Streep. She only has a mere 21 Academy Award nominations - and three wins! I think Chris's eyes were glazed when he put Marilyn Monroe at No2. Sam Johnson, Blackpool

Barbra Streisand

I know the job of narrowing down the Hollywood greats is hellishly difficult but surely Barbra Streisand should get a mention as a brilliant actress, singer and director?

Paul Barker, Alfreton

Al Pacino

How on earth is the brilliant Al Pacino missing? Also, there's no Dustin Hoffman, Gene Hackman or Robert Redford. Here are four supreme stars who have made many outstanding films.

Thomas O'Flaherty, Notts

Cate Blanchett

THE omission of Cate Blanchett raised an eyebrow. I was also astonished Tom Hanks didn't make the Top 30 male actors. The likes of John Wayne couldn't tie his bootlaces as an actor. Martin Laffey, Hebburn

Spencer Tracy

How can your film critic list his Top 30 and leave out Spencer Tracy who was considered even by his own peers during the golden age of Hollywood to be the greatest actor of that era?

Garry Larkin, Kent

Gary Oldman

As usual Gary doesn't get a mention. He is an amazing British talent and it saddens me that he had to go to America to get recognition. He is brilliant in all the films he's been in.

Ali Christie, South London

Sidney Poitier

Schwarzenegger, Willis, Cruise? Don't make me laugh. Precisely which of their performances could be rated above that of Sidney Poitier in The Heat of the Night or Guess Who's Coming to Dinner? Alan Castree, Cumbria

Brigitte Bardot

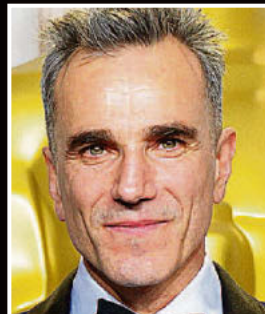

In your list there were two obvious omissions - Brigitte Bardot and Sophia Loren who were both the biggest sex symbols of their era.

Maria Meredith, Hants

Mel Gibson

While I agree with most of Chris's Top 30 male and female Hollywood greats I would also add Mel Gibson to the list who, to my mind, is a fantastic actor. P Jones, Chelmsford

Daniel Day-Lewis

I enjoyed reading your list and I like most of the actors mentioned but surely the brilliant Daniel Day-Lewis deserves a place? Morgan Freeman is a great actor but is often in a supporting role.

Tom Campbell, Stirling

BY FIONA PARKER

OUR film critic Chris Hunneysett sparked a heated debate among Mirror movie buffs when he revealed his Top 30 pick of Hollywood actors and screen goddesses.

Scores of you wrote to say you disagreed with his choice of greats, which failed to mention the likes of James Stewart, Meryl Streep, Robert Redford or Sophia Loren. Here, in no particular order, are your selections of the greatest stars of the silver screen...

Sophia Loren

No list of screen goddesses can be complete without the No1 actress of all time - the gorgeous, beautiful and talented Sophia Loren.

Ask most men to look at this list and they would be sure to point out this glaring omission.
Roger Francis, Gravesend, Kent

Hollywood Hey! list...

Readers were outraged at stars missing from our film critic's choice of movie greats last week.. here you get your say

William Holden

I'd like to have seen William Holden included. With his looks and voice he was captivating in Love is a Many Splendid Thing, Stalag 17 and Sunset Boulevard.
Janet Pearson, Lincs

Jodie Foster

I was shocked two-time Oscar winner Jodie was missing. From her role as a child prostitute in Taxi Driver to Clarice Starling in Silence of the Lambs, Jodie has real star quality.
Sue Ingle, Brighton

Michael Douglas

A good list but a glaring absentee is Michael Douglas who made great films including Fatal Attraction & Wall Street. Timothee Chalamet hasn't earned his place.
Daran Philipson, Solihull

Audie Murphy

He was slight in build and most of his films were Westerns but he was a real life hero and was a highly decorated soldier in the Second World War. Surely he deserves a place on any list?
T O Higgs, Stourbridge

Sir Alec Guinness

Surely, there's room for Sir Alec Guinness in any list of greats? And for Sean Connery to be placed ahead of Paul Newman... the mind boggles!
Nigel Brown, Suffolk

Louise Brooks

Silent film star Louise Brooks should be in the Top 30 because she epitomised the Roaring 20s and is one of the most influential style icons of all time.
Carl Skelton, N'hampton

Forest Whitaker

Where was Forest? He's made some exceptional films from The Last King of Scotland to The Crying Game and also directs and produces.
Alan Gray, Cambs

Gregory Peck

How can Peck not be on your list while Schwarzenegger and Timothee Chalamet are? An icon, he was in great films - Roman Holiday, To Kill A Mockingbird, The Omen etc.
Joanna Jones, Liverpool

Gina Lollobrigida

I don't entirely disagree with your selections, but in my view the beautiful Italian actress Gina Lollobrigida is one of the greatest Hollywood goddesses.
Paul Goodes, Essex

Robert Redford

Where was Robert Redford in your Top 30 male stars? From Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid to The Old Man and the Gun, he has given us dozens of mesmerising big screen performances.
Jill Walsh, Bolton

Russell Crowe

I was surprised Russell Crowe didn't appear on the list. He's handsome and a brilliant actor in films like Gladiator, A Beautiful Mind and LA Confidential.
E Cromwell, Dagenham

Charlton Heston

Where was Charlton Heston? He is one of the greatest Hollywood males of all time when you consider his performance in everything from Ben Hur to Planet of the Apes.
Alan Joyce, Liverpool

James Dean

I agreed with a number of your choices but where was James Dean? Admittedly, he only made three films but his acting in breakthrough film East of Eden was excellent.
Joe Humphreys, Liverpool

Burt Lancaster

One obvious big name actor was missing from your list of Top 30 greats. How could you forget the star of From Here to Eternity and The Birdman of Alcatraz?
Raymond Lovett, P'smouth

Anita Ekberg

Reading your rundown of screen goddesses, I wondered where Anita Ekberg of La Dolce Vita fame was? Also Gina Lollobrigida, Sophia Loren and Claudia Cardinale.
E R Thwaites, Cumbria

Jack Lemmon

I think Jack Lemon should get a mention. He appeared in more than 60 films, including hits like Some Like It Hot with Marilyn Monroe and Glengarry Glen Ross.
Marlene Bridger, N London

Natalie Wood

I couldn't believe that Chris failed to mention Natalie Wood and Deborah Kerr. They were both beautiful and great actresses and surely deserve a place in any list.
John P Logan, B'ham

June Allyson

It would be difficult not to agree with Chris's choice of the 30 top female film stars but my favourite is June Allyson for whom, in my youth, I'd have walked over hot coals!

X marks spot of gender silliness

Leicester University is going to mark something called "International Womxn's Day". Celebrations will be led by the students' union's new women's officer, a transgender woman called Dan Orr.

The university's news letter says: "We use the term womxn as more inclusive spelling of woman that includes any person who identifies as womxn."

"Woman" comes from the Middle English word wifmann, which means female servant or person, and from which we get the word wife.

In Dutch it's vrouwmenns, wife or woman-person, in German Weibsperson, female-person, in West Frisian it's frommes, or woman-human.

The "man" bit indicates species, not gender.

If those born as women have been content to have the local equivalent of "man" at the end of the word since time immemorial, perhaps those who have recently decided to join our gender - welcome, it's great here - could desist from farting about with it until they have read a dictionary.

» Because I'm a mother of a walking experiment in biological warfare, I'm as worried about coronavirus as the next person. But I refuse to take hygiene advice from a man who not only looks unwashed, but who has a reputation for depositing bodily fluids about the country in a fashion that can only be described as "willy-nilly". I'll be washing my hands for as long as it takes to say "Bugger off Boris" 20 times.

So deserving of a medal...

On June 27 it's Armed Forces Day - a chance to celebrate our troops, veterans and their families.

And this year survivors of our Cold War nuclear weapons' tests hope to be remembered.

Last week, Islwyn MP Chris Evans told Parliament: "They suffered a terrible ordeal; many had illnesses and problems throughout their entire life, but... (they) still do not have justice."

"What better way is there to celebrate their contribution than for the Government to finally recognise their service by striking a medal to thank them for what they have done?"

Michael Gove, I'm told, is looking into it.

Fingers crossed.

It's Priti upsetting that even today women are treated so badly

IMAGINE a man who shouts and swears at work. Someone who belittles his staff, who demands to know why everyone is so useless while trying to force an organisation of 35,000 people to make radical changes in 10 months.

He'd be called determined. Ambitious. Fierce. His wife, friends or boss might refer to him as a shark, a tough guy in a sharp suit.

And yeah, he'd get some industrial tribunals flying his way. They'd be paid off, and he'd keep climbing the ladder.

Priti Patel is accused of the same. But she is "awful", she appears "bad at running her department" or "bullying". She thinks her word should be law, it is claimed.

Yet her husband calls her a piranha - small, combative, capable of shredding flesh from bone. And we all find it easier to list her negative qualities than use any of the positive descriptions that would be commonly used for a man in her position.

When Theresa May was Home Secretary, she was labelled incompetent and mildly racist with her "Go Home" vans and the germination of the Windrush scandal.

It flowered under her replacement Amber Rudd, whose political career was choked as a result.

When Jacqui Smith was in the same job, her achievements were lost behind a scandal in which her husband was found to have watched pornography while she was absent.

Those are the only four women who've held this great office of state, and they've all been labelled as uniquely feminine failures - not being in charge, not being able to escape, not being woman enough for her husband.

Ninety men have held the same post. One, the Duke of Wellington, built his fortune from plundering Indian towns his soldiers attacked.

He supported the troops who carried out the massacre of Peterloo, worked against political reform, and was so unpopular that in 1831 a mob twice smashed the windows of his London home, causing him to install iron shutters.

So they called him the Iron Duke. Not racist, not a thief, nor loathed, although he was all those things.

Winston Churchill was also Home Secretary. In 1910, when the Government went back on a promise

If it were a man, he'd be called fierce & determined... not a bully to give women the vote, he ordered police to stop 300 female protesters entering parliament. They were sexually assaulted for six hours. Bones were broken, noses bled.

A suffragette in a wheelchair was pushed into an alleyway and attacked.

Churchill personally intervened to halt prosecutions, and said efforts to introduce suffrage were "anti-democratic".

And we call him a hero.

No matter what allegations against Priti Patel are eventually proved or disproved, the word "bullying" will be in her obituary.

#HETOO IS A GUY BEST AVOIDED...

At first sight, Harvey Weinstein's ex-wife Georgina Chapman has scored an upgrade by dumping a 400lb rapist and taking up with Hollywood heartthrob Adrien Brody.

He won an Oscar at just 29. He bought a farm for an ex-girlfriend, and had it remodelled to look like a castle.

And as America and the UK threw themselves headlong into the 2003 invasion of Iraq, he made an eloquent speech calling for peace.

But before making that speech, he grabbed actress Halle Berry for a "forced kiss" that, these days, would lead to a walkout. Screws always turn on the same thread.

Storming back to a royal mess

ENGAGEMENTS Meghan and Harry

Harry and Meghan are soon back in the UK for their final royal engagements - and massive attention from a public who, not two years ago, lined the streets of Windsor to wish them well.

That they decided to go is disappointing, and the lack of time they devoted to riding out the storms of Meghan's introduction to royalty are not indicative of a couple able to weather the ups and downs of a long marriage.

The Queen has now reportedly told Harry they can come back any time. The chances of Meghan returning are probably lower than those for Harry, on his own.

But it is madness to face a row over their security costs by splitting their royal cops over two continents. And it's simply cruel to deny Archie the chance for a visit with his great-grandmother, who at 93 cannot expect to see him grow up. Do better, you two.

» New research from the University of the Bleeding Obvious shows MPs drink four times a week, and up to 10 units of alcohol on each of those days. There are two reasons for this: 1) The bars - and tea rooms - of Parliament do so much business, because so much business is done in them. 2) Prices are half what they are in the real world. Now where's my doctorate?

Being horrible is Boris' big appeal

DREADFUL But his voters love it

The problem with Boris Johnson is the fact that he's a horrible human is built in to his electoral appeal.

It won't have surprised any of his Red Wall ex-Labour voters - hello, you! - that he has got engaged to his pregnant fancy piece, while waiting for the decree absolute to the woman with whom he spent almost as many years as his new bride has been alive.

It doesn't surprise any of us, either, that he visited flooded areas in the General Election but since then hasn't so much as lifted an eyebrow, never mind a mop. What would destroy him? Answers on a postcard.

'RUDE' Mr von Hessen Tycoon calls cop 'poofter' but is cleared

BY MICHAEL DRUMMOND

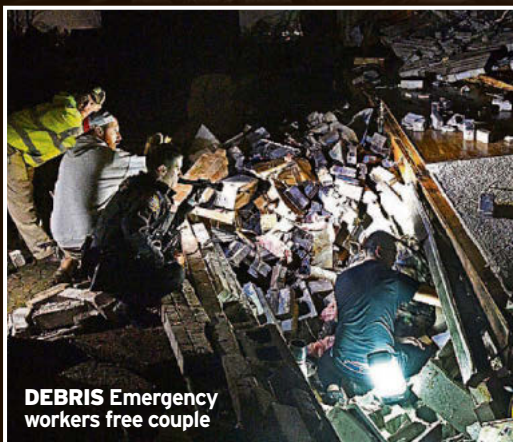

NOTORIOUS property tycoon Nicholas Adolf von Hessen suggested a police officer was a "poofter", a court heard.

Mr von Hessen, 75, formerly Nicholas van Hoogstraten, made the comment after his son was arrested following an argument over car-clamping at a car park he owns.

Brighton magistrate Barbara Dart said she heard Mr von Hessen say "Maybe he's a poofter as well," in a video but that he was not confrontational and not criminal, just rude.

He was cleared of behaviour causing harassment, alarm or distress at the car park in Hove.

Mr von Hessen was convicted of the manslaughter of a business rival in 1999 but it was later overturned. He lost a civil case.

US Editor

A TORNADO killed at least 22 people and left 44,000 without power yesterday as it ravaged the US state of Tennessee.

Some 40 buildings were flattened as it hit downtown Nashville in the early hours.

Mayor John Cooper said the city was "devastated" and urged people to "lend a helping hand" to neighbours.

Tennessee Emergency Community Relations Officer Maggie Hannan added: "It is an ongoing search and rescue right now." The death toll was 14 in Putnam County, while two each were confirmed in Wilson and Davidson counties and one in Benton.

Governor William Lee said the total may rise given the number of people missing.

And police warned the danger was not over, saying: "There are gas lines leaking, power lines that are on the ground."

President Donald Trump said: "Prayers for all affected by the tornadoes in Tennessee."

Bullied to do unpaid work

YOUNG women are pressured and bullied to do unpaid work, preventing them from taking up paid employment, a study says.

Their cooking, cleaning and child care is a huge contribution to the economy, says the group Young Women's Trust

The trust said the carer's allowance should rise to acknowledge this.

Chief executive Sophie Walker said: "Young women are not OK. They are telling us that it is time to value what they do."

'Ditch carbs and diet pop'

DRINKING diet pop with carbohydrates may be more harmful than having the sugar version alone.

The brain's response to sweet taste fell when artificial sweetener and carbs were mixed, experts found.

Consuming a diet drink and fries reduces insulin sensitivity, which may lead to more weight gain than if a sugary drink was drunk.

Dana Small, of Yale University, said: "It's OK to have a Diet Coke once in a while, but you shouldn't drink it with lots of carbs."

Crazed driver jailed for chasing & hitting man

BY LOUIE SMITH

A MAN caught on camera trying to run over a pedestrian in his Land Rover has been jailed for three years.

Duane Manchester, 32, chased the man down the street after an argument.

CCTV shows his cherry red 4x4 mounting the pavement before throwing the victim, 30, forwards into a street sign.

The victim – who was known to him – can be seen desperately trying to escape. But he is struck by the Land Rover and hurled off-screen. He fortunately escaped with just minor injuries including cuts and bruises.

Manchester was found guilty at Ipswich crown court of ABH and dangerous driving for the attack which took place in Lowestoft, Suffolk, on November 10 last year.

DC Chris Thompson, of Lowestoft CID, said: "Hopefully the victim will be relieved that Manchester is behind bars."

Manchester was also disqualified from driving for 18 months.

Chris: I'll fight HS2 in courts

Star slams 'flawed' approval

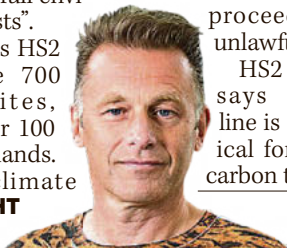

BY RHIAN LUBIN

CHRIS Packham has launched a legal challenge to Boris Johnson's "flawed" approval of the controversial HS2 rail project.

The TV conservationist, 58, claims the decision to green-light plans was unlawful as it relied on the Government's Oakervee review – which did not consider “full environmental costs”.

Chris argues HS2 will damage 700 wildlife sites, including over 100 ancient woodlands.

And its climate CLIMATE FIGHT Chris Packham impact will be incompatible with any net-zero emissions target as it will facilitate airport expansion across the UK.

Chris said: “It’s time for Boris Johnson to be held accountable. We won on Heathrow. We must not allow HS2 to be Johnson’s fast-track to expanding aviation elsewhere. Oakervee is compromised, incomplete and flawed, thus the decision to proceed based on it is unlawful.”

HS2 Ltd says the line is “critical for the UK’s low-carbon transport future”.

On Last Night's TV

The Trip To Greece, Sky One ★★★★★

Last night was a great night for fans of British comedy stars pretending to be someone else.

Channel 4's The Windsors furthered enhanced its reputation as a live action Spitting Image with Simon Day and Julia Deakin letting their imaginations run wild as Kate's lesser-spotted parents, Carole and Mike Middleton.

Meanwhile, much to the dismay of anyone who likes to dismiss it as "just Steve Coogan and Rob Brydon travelling to restaurants and doing impressions of Michael Caine"

(as if that could ever be a bad thing), Coogan and Brydon returned to Sky One with the fourth series of their culinary travelogue

This time they are celebrating the 10th anniversary of the show by following in the footsteps of Odysseus from Troy to Ithaca - a journey which, as Brydon enthusiastically pointed out, now includes "that Abba village from Mamma Mia".

Coogan addressed the elephant in the room as Brydon dusted off an old classic during their first meal: "Are we going to do Ronnie Corbett impressions ten years on?" The answer was yes.

I can see why some viewers don't like the imitations, but the real lasting impressions are left by the breathtaking scenery and incredible food.

Game of Thrones star Sophie Turner has been married to Jonas Brother Joe for a year and rumours suggest she could be expecting. But their love could have been scuppered, thanks to the group's cover of Busted's Year 3000. Sophie tells Elle magazine: "The Jonas Brothers made it massive. Busted broke up. We thought it was their fault. So we hated them." He seems forgiven. She adds: "With Joe, I always felt like I was the one who was punching above my league. He's so handsome, talented, funny..."

007's sugar rush

A secret ingredient has made the car chases in new 007 film No Time To Die really fizz.

James Bond stunt driver Mark Higgins has revealed Coca-Cola was sprayed on roads to create greater grip.

He said: "We knew we could never have driven around Matera (in Italy) if we had any rain because the road surface is like ice.

"So one of the things we did was spray Coca-Cola on the road. We'd do that in the morning when the sun came up and let it dry.

"It increased the grip level maybe two or three-fold."

Speaking to Esquire, he added: "If you look at the trailer, you see a drift the DB5 does in the first part and it leaves a big black line.

"That's real, that's the grip on the surface, not CGI. And that's after the Coca-Cola."

No Time to Die, which is Daniel Craig's final outing as Bond, is out on April 3. But fan sites yesterday called for a delay until summer over coronavirus fears.

Due to the contagious flu-like virus, the cast of TOWIE will no longer be heading to the Canary Island for filming in the coming weeks.

Everton chief gifts £140k to trunk trekker

BY STEPHEN WHITE

EVERTON chairman Bill Kenwright has donated £140,000 to fundraiser Speedo Mick, who walked the length of the country in his swimming trunks.

Mick, real name Michael Cullen, hiked from John o'Groats to Land's End for Leave The Light On, which supports isolated people.

He was invited to Goodison Park by Mr Kenwright for Sunday's game with Manchester United, where he received the gift.

The Everton fan said: "I go up there and Gareth Southgate is in there, Jenny Seagrove [Kenwright's partner], Bobby Charlton.

"Bill Kenwright comes over and slips a little piece of paper under my saucer.

"To my astonishment it was a cheque for £140,000."

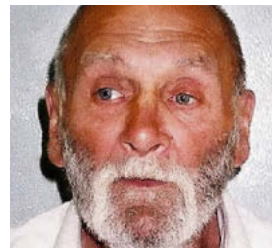

Mr Cullen has now raised more than £500,000.

138th time in the dock for OAP menace

BY MARTIN FRICKER

AN OAP has appeared in court for the 138th time after threatening to kill gypsies in a charity shop.

Patrick Niblett, 79, has racked up 236 offences – including GBH – since 1962 and has been in jail so many times that police say it no longer affects him.

Last September he went into Age UK, ran a finger across his throat and said: "I don't like gypsies."

Police detained 5ft 2ins Niblett outside the Worcester store and found two knives on him.

Niblett, who lives in the city, admitted possessing a blade in a public place and a public order offence at Worcester crown court.

Judge Jim Tindal called him a "menace" and a "racist", sentencing him to eight months suspended with a three-month curfew.

FORGET Instagram influencers and social media agony aunts - 20-somethings would rather turn to their grandparents for advice.

Almost three quarters of young adults ask elderly relatives for tips on love, life and money, a study found. "Family comes first" was the favourite tip followed by "treat others as you wish to be treated".

Old adages including, "save for a rainy day", "forgive and forget" and "look after the pennies and the pounds will look after themselves" were among other pearls of wisdom regularly dished out.

Four in 10 of those polled said they were all ears if granny and grandad spoke, as they know life's pitfalls.

Eight in 10 said wisdom comes with age although two thirds admitted some tips were a little old fashioned.

The survey of 1,500 people was carried out by mobile phone network Giffgaff.

A spokesman for the company said: "This shows how younger people go to their nan or grandad for some great life advice they can count on."

Television of the future...

BY RUKI SAYID Consumer Editor

GOOGLEBOXES are likely to make the mind boggle in the next 10 years.

We will upgrade our sets to 100in screens to create a cinema at home experience, analysts say.

Deloitte also predicts that by 2030 couch potatoes will be glued to the telly for four hours a day.

By then it is thought the average family will be watching 10 on-demand streaming services, such as Netflix.

Currently 85in screens can cost about £2,000 but Deloitte believes even bigger ones will be cheaper in exchange for TV makers getting permission to share customers' viewing habits with advertisers.

It thinks by 2030 huge 8K definition screens will be as commonplace as 36in screens

Experts predict 100in screens in homes by 2030 were in 2010. Deloitte's Paul Lee said: "A decade from now, people will still continue to seek-out high production value content, and will still want to watch this on large screens, up to 100 inches.

"Every year of this decade, people will say screens can't get any larger. When they reach the size of the actual wall, that's when they can't get any larger."

Electronics giant Samsung has unveiled its 8K 292in telly called The Wall, going on sale globally in July at a price yet to be set.

Mr Lee said families will knock out fireplaces, remove bookshelves and re-arrange furniture to take massive screens.

He predicted more than a third of the larger sets will be sold at a lower price "as manufacturers will offer a cheaper price for the authorisation to share people's viewing habits with advertisers". Most homes today have 50-55in screens.

Couple claim on two holidays but save thousands of pounds with AllClear Barry Everett and his wife Margaret understand the importance of comprehensive medical travel insurance only too well, after making two claims – first in Menorca and again in Greece.

The couple, in their late sixties, had been visiting Cala Blanca for 20 years. But following his double cardiac arrest, Barry could no longer get travel insurance from their bank. "I knew very well from a hard lesson learned by a friend – who was left with a £68,000 bill – that I would have to buy comprehensive travel insurance," says Barry.

Barry began looking at providers that would cover his medical history. He chose AllClear, a specialist medical travel insurance provider, after a recommendation from his cardiac consultant.

FANTASTIC SUPPORT

"On the way back to the airport in Menorca I started to feel distinctly unwell," says Barry. "I was in no fit state to fly." Barry had experienced a heart flutter and needed extensive tests. The couple missed their flight and had to be put up in a hotel:

"The support my wife received by the call centre was fantastic. English speaking people who understood our position and knew what advice and support was needed," Barry explains. "We would have effectively been stranded had we not been insured."

AIR AMBULANCE

His second claim came some years later, on holiday in Kos: "The emergency assistance team organised an air ambulance that flew me to Athens where care was a better standard. FORGOTTEN MURDERS THAT SHOCKED

THE SCENE

Pottery Cottage in Derbyshire

BY MATT ROPER

A blizzard was blowing across the Peak District when the call came in that a prisoner on his way to court had attacked his guards and fled across the moors.

Chief Inspector Peter Howse took charge of the manhunt – but he could never have known the unimaginable horrors that were about to unfold.

Before police had even arrived on the remote scene, Billy Hughes had already taken an unsuspecting family hostage in the first house he had come to – Pottery Cottage. And what happened over the next three days in January 1977 would shock Britain, and haunt Peter for the rest of his life.

After using vacuum cleaner flex and washing line to tie up Gill Moran, her husband Richard and their 10-year-old daughter Sarah, as well as Gill's elderly parents Arthur and Amy, Hughes kept the family captive inside the house for a terrifying 55 hours.

Holding them in separate rooms, he played macabre psychological games with them – while secretly killing them one by one. At times the family, believing he wouldn't harm them if they complied, even cooked meals,

INJURED Donald Sprintall and Kenneth Simmonds were both knifed in the neck drank whisky or played card games with him – unaware that young Sarah was lying dead in another room.

Gill, the sole survivor, was only saved – after a high-speed car chase – by Peter wrestling with the killer just as he was about to bring an axe down on her neck.

For more than 40 years what really happened inside Pottery Cottage has remained untold.

But now Gill has allowed Peter, the police chief who saved her life, to finally tell the story, using previously unpublished witness statements, crime scene photos and police reports. His book, The Pottery Cottage Murders, is out this week.

"In all my 34-year police career I've never had to deal with anything quite as horrific," says Peter, now retired and living in Norfolk. "It was the one case which still affects everyone involved."

Gill, now 81, has vowed to remain silent about the nightmare which robbed her of everyone she loved. Billy

Horror at Potte

Hughes, 30, from Preston, was on his way from Leicester Prison to court in Chesterfield, where he was on trial for rape and GBH, he attacked the two guards escorting him in a taxi on January 12, 1977.

He had smuggled out a knife from the prison kitchens which he used to stab Donald Sprintall and Kenneth Simmonds in the neck, leaving them fighting for their lives.

Hughes fled across Derbyshire's moorland before arriving at the Morans' family home at Eastmoor.

There he picked up two axes kept outside for chopping wood before creeping into the house, where he found Gill's mum and dad, Amy and Arthur, aged 68 and 72.

Shortly afterwards, school secretary

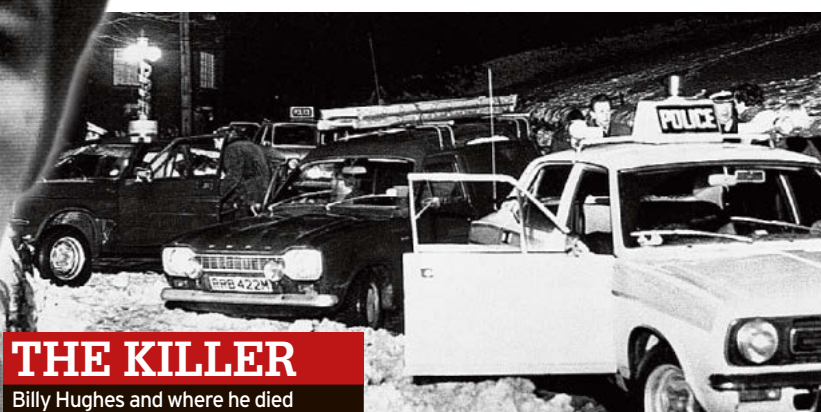

Gill, 38, returned home, before her daughter Sarah came in from school, followed by her husband Richard, 36.

Gill later told police how Hughes then began tying them up.

"He started to tie Mum up," she said. "He tied her hands behind her back. Dad said, 'you're not tying me up'. There was a bit of commotion as we pleaded with Dad to do as he asked. Sarah was very upset." It was the last time she saw her daughter, as Hughes carried each person to different rooms.

The first Peter Howes heard of the fugitive was an hour and a half after he had escaped, when the phone rang at his office in Buxton police station.

He remembers: "I went straight to the scene and set up a three-mile perimeter. We carried on the search for three days and I went on the radio to warn people to look out, to check on their neighbours and to call if they saw anything suspicious. But we didn't get a single call." In fact several neighbours and friends did check on the Morans, but Hughes had been standing next to Gill when the telephone rang, and told her exactly how she should reply. He also made her call Sarah's school and call in sick to her work. And while Peter was in a race against time to find the escaped convict, Hughes was revelling in murder. When Gill asked her about daughter Sarah, he replied with a caring tone: "Sound asleep in mum's room." Later, when the worried mother asked why she hadn't asked for her 'comfort towel' and favourite toy elephant, he took them to her room, telling her on his return: "She was really pleased to see them." In fact Hughes had murdered Sarah in the first night, slitting her throat and leaving her body in a foetal position on the floor. He is also believed to have killed Gill's father Arthur that night. Hughes even allowed Gill and Richard to leave the house for provisions on their own, confident they would return without betraying him to protect their loved ones. It was three days later when Hughes finally left Pottery Cottage, fleeing by night in Gill's car and taking her as a hostage. But as they were leaving, mum Amy staggered out of the front door with blood gushing from a neck wound. Hughes, who thought he had killed her moments earlier, ordered Gill into the snow. Police chief Peter, arriving home after his shift, got the call that neighbours had raised the alarm and officers found Amy dead in a pool of blood in the garden, with the bodies of Arthur, Richard and Sarah inside. Peter recalls: "We got to the front of the police convoy chasing the car through icy country roads, reaching speeds in excess of 80mph." At one point Hughes lost control and crashed. Surrounded by police, Hughes grabbed Gill and held an axe above her neck. Peter says: "He went into a frenzy and went for her. I instinctively jumped through the broken window, the axe skimmed her head and went into the back of the seat. Then it was just chaos, fighting with him inside the car. I can't remember much about it. Then I heard the shots and he fell away." It was the first time British police had shot dead a suspect, later ruled as justifiable homicide at an inquest. Peter last saw Gill two years ago. He adds: "I was pleased to know she had managed to rebuild her life, and find happiness again, a long way from Pottery Cottage." ■ The Pottery Cottage Murders by Carol Ann Lee and Peter Howse, is published tomorrow by Robinson, priced £18.99. matt.roper@mirror.co.uk @mattroperbr

New cruise crew

When Jane McDonald quit her travelogue shows on Channel 5 there was gloom among her millions of fans. So it will be interesting to see how they react to news that the cruising will continue without her. Susan Calman will be the new presenter of Cruising With... and Holidaying With... after 56-year-old Jane's final episodes go out this year. Susan, 45, said: "I'm over the moon to be working with Channel 5 on such a prestigious group of shows. I can't wait to go on exciting voyages and incredible journeys and take the wonderful viewers with me. It's the start of a magnificent chapter." It follows the success of her Channel 5 series Secret Scotland. Some might question whether Cruising With... will still be as fabulous – to use one of Jane's favourite words. But the channel's director of programming Ben Frow said: "Susan was my first and only choice for these shows and I am cock-a-hoop that she is doing more with Channel 5." Time will tell if the shows sink or drop anchor for years.

DEAR COLEEN

your problems solved

BOYFRIEND IS A FLIRT AND IT'S UPSETTING ME

Dear Coleen

I'm a woman aged 29 and have been seeing a great guy for a few months. He's charming and handsome, and really good fun – and therein lies my problem.

I'm absolutely paranoid that he's flirting with my friends and other women.

I think it's just his personality – he's very open and outgoing – and he's never said or done anything inappropriate.

However, my last boyfriend (who could also charm the birds off the trees) cheated on me and it ended the relationship.

I don't want history to repeat itself, but am I making too much of this?

Coleen says

Well, I think it's important to work out how much of this is your stuff and how much of it is his behaviour.

Of course we can't help being affected by things that happened in past relationships, but the key is to learn from them and try to use what you've learnt positively in your next relationship.

Instead of becoming more and more paranoid, why not be honest with your boyfriend and explain you struggle with insecurity sometimes because of how your last partner behaved? Let him reassure you.

He might be charming and outgoing, but he's not your ex and I think you have to give him the benefit of the doubt unless he lets you down (which hopefully he won't).

If you can't trust him and show him you trust him, then the relationship is going to fail before you've really given it a chance.

He's cast me aside now that his wife has thrown him out

Dear Coleen

I'm a single woman in my mid-30s and recently came out of an affair with a married man after 18 months together.

I'd known him for a while before we started the affair.

He'd been telling me that his marriage was dead in the water and he wanted out.

However, during our time together he never attempted to leave her, even though he said he loved me and wanted to be with me. In the end, his wife found out about us and threw him out of the family home – they have two kids together.

He moved in with a mate and, not long after that, told me he wanted to end our relationship. He was really angry and seemed to blame me for the break-up of his marriage and the fact he only sees his kids at weekends.

His ex isn't making things easy for him because she's so angry about what happened.

I miss him, even though he's treated me badly, and can't believe he chucked our relationship away after everything he'd said to me.

Now I feel like he wasn't serious about us at all and was just using me

It seems he blames me for not seeing his kids much because he was miserable with his wife and missing sex.

I don't want to move on with anyone else because I still love him, so how do I get on with my life? I get so angry.

Have you any advice?

Coleen says

The lesson is: affairs very rarely turn out the way you hope they will and a lot of people get hurt in the process.

Maybe when the dust settles between him and his ex, he might get in touch and want to give your relationship a shot, but I don't think you should put your life on hold in the hope it'll happen.

Of course you're hurt, and it'll take time for those feelings to go away.

However, you must have known you were playing with fire when you got involved with someone who was married.

I've been the wife in this scenario and I can tell you that his wife will be hurting too, and she'll feel a lot of anger towards both of you.

I think if he'd genuinely wanted to leave his wife for you, it would have happened before you'd spent 18 months together.

The truth is, he was having his cake and eating it, and he didn't want out of his marriage badly enough and he didn't want you badly enough to do anything about it.

Would you really have wanted to continue being "the other woman" indefinitely? He's the one responsible for breaking up his family and now he has to deal with it.

All you can do is learn from this and try to move on positively, and make the decision not to get involved with people who are married in future.

The letter from the mum who doesn't know how to have the "sex conversation" with her teenage son rang a few bells for me (Dear Coleen, Feb 28).

I dropped some sex advice casually into conversation while I was in the kitchen with my son one morning.

His jaw dropped open and he nearly lost his breakfast, and then covered his ears, saying: "OK, OK, you don't have to tell me about the birds and the bees."

But I felt better for saying it and I noticed he made a joke about it on social media later, so at least I gave him something to post about!

Kate, via email

NOT SURE HOW TO COME OUT TO FAMILY

Dear Coleen

I'm a gay man in my 20s and I'm in love with a guy I've been seeing for a year. I've never come out to my parents or anyone else in my family, but now that I'm in a committed relationship, I don't want to hide any more.

My boyfriend is out, but he has never put me under any pressure to do the same – he just says it's my decision and I should do it when it feels right.

I'm not sure it ever will though!

It's not as if my family is homophobic, but I've never talked to them about anything really personal and don't know how they'd react to the news.

Have you any advice?

Coleen says

It's obvious from your letter that you're desperate to live your life openly, but you're just scared, and I totally understand that.

Your boyfriend is right – the decision about if and when to come out should be yours alone and it's great that he's supportive.

I wonder if his parents or other family members could talk to you about how they felt when your boyfriend came out to them? They might be able to provide some reassurance and insight.

It's a tough conversation to have, but you have to remember your parents love you.

Yes, they might be shocked and it might take them a while to get their heads around the news, but you haven't said anything in your letter to make me think they'd reject you.

They might even have suspected you're gay for a long time, but don't feel it's their place to bring it up.

I'd also recommend visiting fflag.org.uk, an organisation that helps families understand, accept and support their gay, lesbian or bisexual sons and daughters. Good luck.

TRICIA PHILLIPSSHELTER SHIFT REVEALS SHEER
LOSS VICTIMS

BY TRICIA PHILLIPS

The housing crisis has left hundreds of thousands of people homeless and huge numbers of private renters struggling to afford to keep a roof over their heads.

The cold hard figures are scary – but it's the devastation it causes to peoples' lives that is truly shocking.

To find out what a shortage of affordable social housing – one of the main drivers behind the growing crisis – really means, I helped out on the Shelter emergency helpline.

Shadowing Nadeem Kahn, 39, who has been doing this vital work for seven years, I was horrified by the brutal and distressing situation the majority of callers were in.

It was heartbreaking call after heartbreaking call from desperate people who had been evicted or were about to lose their home.

Among them were families, young workers, pensioners, low earners, people with high paying jobs and both renters and home owners – proof that serious issues around housing can hit anyone hard at any time.

SUFFERING

The first call was a mum with very young children who was about to be thrown out onto the street with no where to go and no proper warning.

She had been in temporary accommodation for years and the council hadn't been able to find her a suitable permanent home. Because she turned down an unsuitable property the council had offered, she had been told she had to leave her current home.

Next came a man with cancer suffering harassment from his landlord because he hasn't been able to make rent payments on time.

This was due to problems with Universal Credit. He said he had occasionally paid his rent late because he received his UC payments days after his rent was due.

He tried to explain this to his landlord and offered to pay the difference and asked if he could set a new rent date. But the landlord refused and served him an eviction notice.

Then in came a call from a family being evicted from emergency accommodation due to rent arrears, after an already traumatic time of losing the

Despair at end of the line in UK housing nightmare

family home through mortgage arrears – and now being turned down by their local council for housing help.

One caller was a mum with three children, two with disabilities, being threatened with an illegal eviction after just a few weeks of moving into a home. Again, all because her UC payments were late.

She had been told by her landlord if she didn't pay her arrears that day she would have to leave immediately. I was stunned by this litany of anguish. And I simply don't know how Nadeem remains so calm and understanding through day after day of endless calls from people in such desperate situations. He told me he works out after his shift to help ease his frustrations over a complex housing system at breaking point. "We also get a lot of support at work and from colleagues which really helps," he said.

"But I love my job. Yes it is disturbing when you get someone who is totally distressed and desperate and feels they have no way out. But I try to focus on staying calm and reassuring them I will do my best to sort out their situation."

"I focus on the positive side of things, what I can do to help and what their rights are. I get so much satisfaction when I manage to turn someone's life around and help them keep a roof over their head – and make them feel secure and safe again.

That happened yesterday when I took a call from a guy facing repossession of his home.

RELIEF

"I helped him fill in the forms for a court hearing and gave him advice on how to handle the situation.

"The sheer relief in his voice when he called later to say he wasn't out on the street was wonderful.

"The problem is with such a huge shortage of affordable, social housing things have got complicated. Councils are having to put people into private rented homes – and that brings another level of complexity with a landlord and often a letting agent for tenants to deal with, along with their council."

The Shelter emergency helpline is crucial. It is one of the few options people can turn to for help with housing issues.

It gets a call every 44 seconds and gave free telephone advice to more than 41,000 households in 2018/19, while its webchat service helped over 41,500 cases.

The helpline is open 365 days a year – the housing emergency doesn't take a day off, so nor does this vital lifeline.

Polly Neate, chief executive of Shelter, said: "We are in the grip of a Q Last week you said anything over £325,000 was liable to inheritance tax. But hasn't that been increased? We have several properties that go into trust for the family until we both die.

A You're right, the Government introduced the Main Residence Nil Rate Band which can increase the threshold by a further £175,000 each by 2020-21. However, not everyone qualifies, only one home can be used against the inheritance tax property allowance and it doesn't include most properties in trust.

Q My daughter is currently saving into a Help to Buy ISA, but it seems they're closing. Does she need to transfer this to a Lifetime ISA – or can she simply carry on saving until she has her deposit together? It's going to take her another few years to get there.

A She can continue to pay into the Help to Buy ISA until November 2029. You're correct – these ISAs were closed to new applicants in late November 2019, but existing savers can keep saving up for a house deposit.

Q We have a holiday booked to Italy next month. Will we be able to cancel it and get our money back? We feel worried about travelling there when the coronavirus cases keep increasing.

A This will depend on where you are travelling to in Italy, and whether the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has issued advice against all but essential travel to that area. If so, travel firms will cancel flights and holidays and issue refunds. Contact your travel agent or holiday provider to see where you stand.

national housing emergency, which shows no sign of recovery. At the last count 280,000 people in England were homeless.

"Every day our dedicated advisers answer countless calls from people at the sharpest end of this crisis. Their expert advice can be the difference between a family losing their home or keeping it. It can provide a glimmer of hope at the end of a very dark tunnel.

"Nothing will change until the Government invests in the stable social homes we desperately need."

Putting people into expensive, private rented properties has created a system that isn't working for anyone, as I found out on the Shelter helpline.

And the victims of this chaos are vulnerable people desperate for a basic essential in life - a roof over their heads.

Q Is the Winter Fuel Payment an automatic payment or do people have to apply for it? My 70-year-old dad hasn't received it this year, and I would think he is entitled to this help on his meagre pension.

A People usually receive the Winter Fuel Payment automatically if they have reached the qualifying age which means they were born on or before April 5, 1954. It may need to be claimed by people who have not received it before, and those who do not get a state pension or benefits or who have deferred their State Pension. The Winter Fuel Payment Centre is on 0800 731 0160.

■ Millions of people aged over 55 plan to sell their property and downsize over the next year so that they can boost their savings, according to research by Ford Money.

This could see around £89billion moving from property into savings accounts. Those planning to move reckon they will get an average £85,250 windfall.

Eight out of 10 plan to keep some or all of the cash in savings for an average of six years.

Four out of five plan to use cash savings accounts, while one in eight are considering investments such as stock and shares ISAs.

■ In six months, the first Child Trust Fund holders will turn 18 and they can take control of their accounts.

These savings accounts were given to every child born between September 2002 and January 2011.

But a third of teenagers are unaware they are due a windfall - averaging £2,100 for children born in 2002.

Figures from financial services firm OneFamily, suggest that up to six out of 10 parents and teens could have lost track of their funds, having not added anything since they received a government head start to ensure every child arrived at adulthood with a nest egg. Track down Child Trust Funds at: onefamily.com/child-trust-fund/#findit and gov.uk/child-trust-funds.

■ The retirement income people expect they will need is more than double the amount current pensioners receive.

Older homeowners believe they will need £35,196, but compared to today's average retirement income of £17,212, that will leave people with a potential shortfall of £17,984.

A report from the Equity Release Council and retirement firm Key shows that pension pressures are set to rise as many people access their pension pots early.

Top up an Isa and win £20,000

Nationwide is trying to help encourage people to get into the saving habit with an ISA prize draw offering the chance to win up to £20,000.

From Friday the building society will offer a £500,000 prize pot to its ISA savers.

And it is raising the rate on its Triple Access Online ISA from 0.9% to 1.21%.

This is designed to get savers topping up their ISA balances before and after the new tax year arrives on April 6. The giveaway offers 10 chances to win the top prizes of £20,000 - the current annual ISA allowance - with a further 10 prizes of £10,000 and 40 prizes of £5,000.

Entries to the prize draw open on Friday and close on April 30, covering the end of the current tax year and the start of the new one. New and existing Nationwide savers need to increase their balance by £100 or more by the end of April to qualify.

This follows the launch of Nationwide's Start to Save account and prize draw last month, which offers the chance to win £100 prizes for saving regularly.

Andrew Hagger, from personal finance site Moneycomms.co.uk, said: "ISA rates, like the wider savings market, are stuck in the doldrums and don't look very attractive, so I can understand why Nationwide is making this move."

"With 60 prizes up for grabs and a total prize fund of half a million pounds this move is likely to prove popular - particularly as you only need to deposit a maximum of £100 to qualify. The Nationwide Triple Access Online ISA rate is being increased to 1.21%. It's not market leading but not too far off the pace and savers will probably put up with a lower rate in return for the chance to win between £5,000 and £20,000."

Nationwide says the chance of winning, based on last year's activity, is around 7,600 to one.

The current best-buy easy-access ISAs are:

■ Al Rayan Bank - 1.36%

■ Virgin Money Double

Access ISA - 1.31%

■ Leeds Building Society

Double Access Cash ISA -

1.3%

■ Cynergy Bank - 1.29%

■ Ford Money - 1.27%

DON'T PUT YOUR FAMILY IN DANGER OF EVICTION

BY TRICIA PHILLIPS

Millions of renters don't have any form of income protection to fall back on in the event of an accident or illness.

One in five dwellings in the UK are privately rented but just one in 15 tenants has income protection.

This leaves people at risk of eviction should they fall into financial difficulties and be unable to keep on top of rent and bills.

Research from financial giant LV= reveals that renters are far less likely than home owners to protect their income. A total of 4.5million households are privately renting and one in four families with children now rents in the private sector, compared to less than one in 10 a decade ago.

The study also found that renters have a list of issues they have concerns over, from landlords not solving problems and failing to return deposits to complex contracts that are difficult to understand and disputes over tenancies.

Debbie Kennedy, director of protection at LV=, says: "Millions of families live in rented accommodation, and our research indicates that many worry about what would happen if injury or illness meant they couldn't work and pay their rent.

"Dealing with a landlord is not the same as dealing with your bank or building society and you can quickly find yourself facing rent arrears and eviction."

"Research suggests that one in three people have less than £1,500 in savings, which is only about six weeks' worth of rent."

"One option renters should consider is taking out an income protection insurance, which pays a monthly income if a tenant is unable to work due to illness or accident."

PROTECT YOUR FINANCES

■ Before taking on any extra protection insurance, check what cover you may already have via your employer.

Many firms offer a death-in-service payment, which pays out a lump sum based on your salary and offers a financial safety net to your dependents should you die while employed by the company.

Some companies offer critical illness cover as part of workers' benefits and some also offer sickness pay higher than the statutory sick pay of £94.25 per week.

■ Decide if you need to top up any benefits you have with additional cover.

■ Income protection replaces part of your monthly income if you're unable to work due to illness or injury.

You can opt for a long-term policy that pays out until you retire, die or return to work, or a short-term policy that pays out for a fixed period. Premiums depend on age, medical history, income level and how long you want to wait before the policy pays out.

■ Critical illness cover pays out a lump sum if you are diagnosed with a selection of critical illnesses that include some cancers, heart attack, stroke or loss of limbs. Pre-existing medical conditions are usually excluded.

■ Always check the small print and ensure you are getting the right cover for your circumstances and are aware of any exclusions.

Ensure you know when the policy will begin to pay out - most have a waiting period.

MY FIRM IS WINNING BEAUTY CONTESTS

Dear Biz

You featured my Beauty Kitchen (beautykitchen.co.uk) business offering natural and sustainable skin, haircare, bath and body products in March last year. I thought you might like to hear how things have progressed since then.

The business is really taking off and I'm delighted to say that our products are now stocked in Boots, Holland & Barrett, Sainsbury's and Lloyds Pharmacy.

We have been named Sustainable Skincare Brand of the Year at the Sustainable Lifestyle Awards, which is very exciting.

We have launched a Return + Refill + Repeat programme, which is based on the simple milkman model, whereby customers receive products in a bottle, use it and return it for refilling.

Our latest launch The Sustainables - made with natural, organic, cruelty-free, sustainable and vegan ingredients, with 100% recyclable packaging and included in return and refill - has been an amazing sell-out.

We have plans to launch 1,000 Beauty Kitchen refill stations in the UK over the next two years with the aim of saving 100million plastic bottles from going to landfill. Thanks so much for your

Biz replies

It is so lovely to hear from you again, Jo, and we are impressed with what you have achieved with your Beauty Kitchen business in such a short space of time. The credentials of your products and the refill and reuse option are just what people want as they are looking for products without chemicals, that are sustainable and don't end up creating a mountain of single-use plastic.

Keep up the excellent work and good luck with growing your business further. Stay in touch to let us know how things are going.

BIZTIPS Startups set to hit record high despite Brexit

Despite turbulent economic times and the uncertainty over how Brexit will affect businesses, the outlook for 2020 looks rosy on the small business front.

New research reveals there could be a record number of new startups this year, with 1.8million people planning on setting up shop.

That's 30% more than the 1.4million new limited company and self-employed registrations in 2019.

Research among 2,500 people by financial management firm Intuit QuickBooks also found a number of other factors that indicate confidence in the small business community.

One in five respondents said they are likely to move from kitchen table to premises for the first time. One in three established business owners say they will employ at least one new person as they continue to grow their company.

Chris Evans, vice president and UK country manager at Intuit QuickBooks, said: "Our research shows there's optimism across the country.

PROSPER

"And particularly for those keen to either start or grow their own business.

"Small businesses are the backbone of our economy - we need to do everything we can to support them, to help them be more productive and prosper."

One in 10 self-employed people plan to take on their first employee this year - but just over a quarter are worried about being able to consistently afford their salary, along with issues around understanding employment and payroll regulations and being able to stand out from the crowd of employers to lure the best talent.

Chris added: "I am regularly speaking to small business owners across the country and I understand the challenges they can face on a daily basis, just to keep on an even keel.

"The prospect of increasing sales or workforce can be both exciting and also daunting, especially if that means taking on more responsibility.

"However, with the right digital tools and support in place, you can run and grow your business with confidence."

» The owner of price comparison website GoCompare is counting the cost of growing its auto-switching energy arm. GoCo's Autosave business - Weflip and Look After My Bills - grew customer numbers by 71% to 300,000 in under six months which was 80,000 ahead of schedule. It has a target of 420,000 over the next six months. But it splashed out £13million on marketing costs, which meant group underlying operating profits plunged by 39.8% to £26.5m.

INSURER'S £35M BLOW

The recent storms have blown at least a £35million hole in insurer Direct Line's bill for claims. The Churchill and Green Flag owner also said the coronavirus outbreak may hit its travel insurance arm this year, while stock market disruption could knock its investments. The admission came as annual profits dropped 12.2% to £509.7m.

Direct Line last week announced it was axing around 800 jobs as part of £50m of costcutting.

BOOMING pasty chain Greggs could roll out an overseas expansion.

The Newcastle-based baker has floated the idea of opening shops abroad if it runs out of room to grow here.

Boss Roger Whiteside said that from 2025 onwards "we will have to look beyond the UK for growth".

Greggs' previous overseas foray, to Belgium, flopped. Whiteside said: "The difference this time round is we are much broader developed."

Another option being considered could be a non-Greggs-branded chain to appeal to posher customers.

Greggs already has more than 2,000 UK shops, and plans to open 100 a year, with analysts predicting it could get to 3,000.

All new outlets are in places such as railway stations and office parks. It's also trailing five concessions in Asda supermarkets, and food deliveries, with take-away app Just Eat.

The news came as Greggs announced record annual sales rose 13.5% to almost £1.3billion, helped by the storming success of its vegan sausage roll.

Profits soared 31% to £108.3million.

Sales took a battering from the recent storms, with a flooded bakery in Wales halting production of vegan doughnuts and Welsh cakes.

And the firm warned demand would be hit if the coronavirus crisis led to people avoiding shops or working from home.

Greggs, already big in the food-on-the-go market, is now competing with coffee giants Starbucks and Costa.

It's now number three and plans more coffee-led shops.

Bradley Walsh has announced he's to leave Doctor Who after filming a Christmas special. Meanwhile, the BBC was forced to defend the show which has seen ratings plummet from 8 million to 5.5 million.

Is Doctor Who as good as it used to be?

YES
38%NO
62%

Yes. Bradley was one of my faves but the show's suffered having to give time to the companions. Love Jodie and hope they can give her more attention in her final season.
DYLAN CROLL

Yes. It's great having Jodie as the Doctor but I'd like to see a format more like the 1970s return.
STEVE COOPER

Yes. I'm disappointed Bradley's leaving but I love Jodie as the female Doctor. The show will go on...
HELEN MOSS

No. They need to get someone in with a good grasp of story-telling like they did with the series revival in 2005.
ANDREW WALKER

No. Doctor Who's a sinking ship. Don't blame Brad for leaving.
PAUL JONES

No. Companions come and go as they're just support for the Doctor and actors get bored quickly. They need to be replaced by better ones.

If she's bullying, Patel must go...

■ The danger in a democracy like ours comes when ministers get over-confident and believe they have all the answers.

What is worrying is there are signs the new Tory Government will not accept different points of view besides that of the Cabinet.

If Home Secretary Priti Patel is ruling the Home Office in a bullying manner, as it is alleged, then she must go, and go quickly.

There are also indications that Boris Johnson is attempting to stifle criticism of himself by ignoring the Commons Liaison Committee and banning certain media outlets from briefings. Again, this should not be allowed.
Howard Gardner Sale, Gtr Manchester

■ Government ministers come and go but it is the civil servants who keep the government machine and the country running.

They are renowned for their loyalty to the nation, therefore it's unprecedented for a senior civil servant such as Sir Philip Rutnam to resign over the alleged bullying behaviour of Home Secretary Priti Patel. Ms Patel owes Parliament an explanation as to what led Sir Philip to quit. Unfortunately, as the Tories have a big majority, she probably won't be pressurised into doing so.
Christine Hanks Woking, Hants

■ I see it has only taken a couple of months for the new Tory Government to resort back to being the "Nasty Party". The message has gone from "Yes Minister" to "Don't cross us", with Priti Patel apparently playing the

THE BIG ISSUE

No. 10 has launched a Cabinet Office inquiry into allegations of bullying by Priti Patel - which she denies. Senior civil servant Sir Philip Rutnam quit at the weekend accusing her of "shouting and swearing at staff" and is to sue for constructive dismissal. You say...

pantomime villain. If this is what the tawdry Tories mean by "taking back control" then Johnson and his cronies have duped the electorate. I despair!
Collin Rossini, Dovercourt, Essex

■ The Priti Patel Home Office row is a symptom of what is wrong with Boris Johnson's government.

It's unprecedented for a civil servant as senior as Sir Philip Rutnam, who obey a strict code of silence, to openly accuse the Home Secretary of being a bully and a liar.

His rejection of a pay-off in return for his silence comes shortly after Sajid Javid was forced to step down as Chancellor after being ordered to get rid of his aides.

These two incidents surely reveal the toxic culture of Boris Johnson's government?
Eric Thorpe Salford, Gtr Manchester

■ Regarding the accusations of bullying by Priti Patel, I can't say I am surprised to hear claims she belittled and repeatedly made unreasonable demands of staff, yet still Johnson defends her behaviour, stating he has faith in all members of his Cabinet. I'm glad Sir Philip Rutnam has spoken out. I believe he intends to claim for constructive dismissal against the Government. Good for him.

Amanda Brown Pulham St Mary, Norfolk

■ The civil service is impartial, so for a senior member to speak out against the Government is unusual.

There is also a ministerial code for all ministers which Ms Patel may have broken by making unreasonable or impossible demands, and it seems she may have bullied civil servants to get her own way, if the allegations are true.

She needs sacking and hopefully Cummings will follow her.
Martin Ayres, Manchester

■ Home Secretary Priti Patel appears to display a nasty streak in her approach to politics.

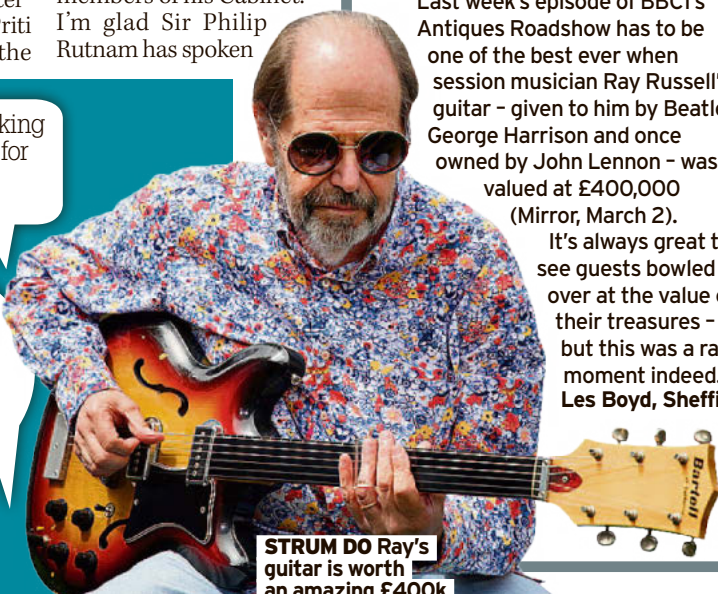

She is very aggressive in her responses and actions. In my view, she is unfit to be a minister in the Queen's government.

Sandy Kumar, Redhill, Gtr London

Good pluck Ray

Last week's episode of BBC1's Antiques Roadshow has to be one of the best ever when session musician Ray Russell's guitar - given to him by Beatle George Harrison and once owned by John Lennon - was valued at £400,000 (Mirror, March 2).

It's always great to see guests bowled over at the value of their treasures - but this was a rare moment indeed.
Les Boyd, Sheffield

STRUM DO Ray's guitar is worth an amazing £400k

Give North the runway

■ So there will probably be no third Heathrow runway now the environmentalists have won at the Court of Appeal.

Good. I lived under the flight path for 25 years and anyway London is already well provided for in terms of airports. I suggest adding a runway to Manchester and improving rail networks in the North to support it.

Is that sufficiently weird for Boris Johnson and Dominic Cummings or have the Northern Powerhouse and breaking Labour's "red wall" just been electioneering?

M J Cobb Stanford-le-Hope, Essex

■ Twenty-eight games, 26 wins, one draw, one defeat. How many club benefactors, chairmen, managers, players and fans would love to see a record like that?

Liverpool won't end the season unbeaten, but who cares? That would have been the icing and sprinkles on the cake. They haven't won the League since 1990 - that's been 30 years of hurt and I'm sure eating that piece of cake will taste the best, regardless of missing sprinkles!

A Smith, March, Cambs

Tweet of the day

Labour's Chris Bryant's scathing assessment of the Prime Minister...

@RhonddaBryant - Am I the only one who thinks Johnson just looks bored by coronavirus, bored by flooding, bored by anything that has the temerity to interrupt his appreciation of himself?

■ So it's going to cost £20million a year to protect Harry and Meghan.

I wonder how people on zero-hours contracts and those who have to use foodbanks feel about spending that amount.

The pair decided to opt out so they can make millions - so this is their expense and they must pay for it.

THE TROUBLE WITH MAGGIE COLE
ITV, 9pm

THIS is the strangest thing - a prime-time drama that doesn't involve murder, detectives or some devastating tragedy. Well, not yet anyway.

In a break from the normal misery, this light series is a gentle, amusing look at what happens when gossip rocks a small community. Sticks and stones and all that.

With vibrant characters in a tight-knit coastal village, plus beautiful scenes shot in Cornwall, it doesn't seem a coincidence that this airs not long after Doc Martin ends.

Dawn French is the titular Maggie Cole. And it's pretty obvious from the off what the "trouble" is with Maggie.

She's a busybody who just loves to gossip. In fact, she's quite an unlikeable character, only improved somewhat by her lovely husband Peter, played by the brilliant Mark Heap.

The first episode spends some time setting the scene in the small community of Thurlbury. Maggie is a local historian who is absolutely thrilled to be asked to do a radio interview to celebrate the village's 500th anniversary.

But after a few gin and tonics during the interview, she shares some gossip about some of the local residents.

Then she gathers the entire village together for a garden party so that they can all listen to the interview, oblivious to what is about to play out.

Awkward doesn't quite cover it. This has a great cast, including ex Corrie star Julie Hesmondhalgh, Patrick Robinson and Vicki Pepperdine.

And while this opener is fairly predictable, there's a sense that the "storm in a teacup" is about to become more of a hurricane...

MISSING Les Vegas doesn't return from pedalo trip

SANDYLANDS
GOLD, 10pm

If you like bold, brash, end-of-pier comedy such as Benidorm or Scarborough, then this will probably tickle your fancy.

As the title suggests, it's a seaside sitcom boasting a "cast of colourful locals", most of whom might make you cringe.

It does have a great cast, including Sanjeev Bhaskar, Sophie Thompson, David Walliams, Simon Bird, Craig Parkinson and Hugh Bonneville, all having what looks like a riot on set.

As this begins, amusement arcade "King of the Strip" Les Vegas (Bhaskar) goes missing, presumed dead, on his pedalo.

His estranged daughter Emily (Natalie Dew), who swore she'd never return to her neon-lit childhood town, is summoned back to attend his memorial service.

But there are plenty of unexpected encounters for Emily, not least oddball B&B owners Derek and Jeannie Swallows (Walliams and Thompson), nightclub owner Terry Chino (Parkinson), a mysterious one-eyed man (Bonneville) and her former crush Nathan Wild (Bird).

Continues tomorrow and concludes Friday.

TIGERS: HUNTING THE TRAFFICKERS
BBC2, 9pm

From footage of frozen tiger cubs in freezers at a breeding facility in Laos, to tigers held in high-security holding pens in Thai zoos, and caged tigers fattened in a dark basement in Vietnam to be killed and cooked to order - this is a shocking exposé.

With figures estimating that there are less than 4,000 tigers left in the wild, Royal Marines Commando Aldo Kane investigates the secrets of the illegal tiger trade in South East Asia and those who profit. While highlighting the plight faced by the species, there's a look at how tiger farms drive consumer demand for tiger products, fuelling the illegal trade and poaching.

Some communities covet illegal products such as tiger-bone wine and tiger-bone glue, which are believed to have medicinal values in parts of Asia, mainly in China and Vietnam.

From tiger wine breweries to small backyard holdings, Aldo covertly films tiger traffickers, shedding light on a worrying and upsetting underworld.

WARRINGTON coach Steve Price says he is shocked by the omission of Gareth Widdop and Blake Austin from Shaun Wane's first England selection.

Wane has invited 31 domestically-based players to a meeting at Old Trafford this month ahead of the Ashes series this autumn.

A further eight from Australia's NRL have been placed on a "watch list" for this season.

Wane has been keen to stress this is not a formal squad and the door remains open for all players.

But Wolves coach Price, who has eight other players in the group, admitted he didn't expect to see Widdop or Austin overlooked.

Widdop has been a regular for his country since his debut in 2010 but has been hampered by injuries over the last 12 months, while Australian-born stand-off Austin featured on the wing for Great Britain in 2019.

Price (left) said: "I was very surprised. Gareth has been really consistent for his country."

On Austin, Price said: "With the limited opportunities he got last year he's another one who put the team and the country first."

Other notable absentees include another Australian-born half-back in Steve Prescott Man of Steel Jackson Hastings, Hull FC's Jake Connor and Wane's old Wigan captain, Sean O'Loughlin.

But there were invites for Hull centre Josh Griffin, Castleford hooker Paul McShane and Leeds youngster Harry Newman.

Wane said: "The door is never closed and outstanding form will be rewarded."

■ Warrington's Matty Ashton faces up to five months out with a hamstring tear.

ENGLAND:

Charnley, Clark, Cooper, Currie (all Warrington), Evalds (Salford), Farrell (Wigan), Gale (Leeds), Gildart (Wigan), Griffin (Hull FC), Hardaker (Wigan), Hill, Hughes (both Warrington), Johnstone (Wakefield), Jones (Hull FC), Lomax (St Helens), Lyne (Wakefield), McGilvary (Huddersfield), McShane (Castleford), Makinson (St Helens), Manfredi (Wigan), Newman (Leeds), Percival (St Helens), Philbin, Ratchford (both Warrington), Roby (St Helens), Sarginson (Salford), Taylor (Hull FC), Thompson (St Helens), Tomkins (Catalans), Walmsley (St Helens), Watts (Castleford).

TOUR CHIEF DIES AT 40

BY MIKE WALTERS

TOUR DE FRANCE legends Chris Froome and Geraint Thomas were in shock last night after their Team Ineos sporting director Nico Portal died suddenly at 40.

Frenchman Portal was a strategic architect of Froome's four Yellow Jerseys, Thomas riding to glory in 2018 and Egan Bernal's triumph last year. He died at home in Andorra from a suspected heart attack, casting a huge shadow over the team's build-up to Le Tour.

In a statement, Team Ineos said: "We are all overcome with grief. RIP Nico - your spirit will always be with us on the road and forever in our hearts."

WHYTE 'VIOLENCE'

BY DAVID ANDERSON
DILLIAN WHYTE has promised Alexander Povetkin "maximum violence" following the announcement of their clash at Manchester Arena.

Whyte (right) will make the first defence of his WBC interim title against the former WBA champ on May 2. He said: "This is a great fight. You only have to look at his resume to see he's always been considered as one of the most fearsome punchers in the heavyweight division. I've got respect for Povetkin - but I'm on to maximum violence."

HONEY POT

Clash with Benie Des Dieux in prospect

BY NEIL RANDON
HONEYSUCKLE is to run in the Close Brothers Mares' Hurdle at the Cheltenham Festival, rather than the Unibet Champion Hurdle on the same afternoon.

The unbeaten six-year-old was as short as 4-1 to beat the boys in the Champion Hurdle next Tuesday after claiming her seventh victory in the Irish Champion Hurdle at Leopardstown last month.

But trainer Henry de Bromhead yesterday confirmed his star hurdler will aim for the Mares' Hurdle instead.

De Bromhead said: "That is where we're going. It was a tough decision, but we've made it, and that's it."

A clash with Benie Des Dieux, trained by Willie Mullins, who won the race in 2018, before falling at the last flight last year is now in prospect.

Peter Molony, who purchased Honeysuckle for €110,000 and acts as racing manager for owner Kenneth Alexander, disputes the view connections have gone for the easier option.

He said: "In our opinion she's a two-and-a-half-mile mare – that's her optimum trip."

"I've read somewhere that we're lacking in ambition – but if taking on Benie Des Dieux is lacking ambition, I don't know what ambition is!"

BLOSSOMING
Honeysuckle is unbeaten in seven starts

WOMEN'S T20 WORLD CUP

INDIA WOMEN v ENGLAND WOMEN
TOMORROW, STARTS 4AMRAIN RAIN GO AWAY...
WE'VE A BIG SEMI TO PLAY!

Shrubsole will be watching the weather ahead of India clash as the downpours forecast could see England hopes washed away without a ball bowled

FROM ALEX SMITH in Sydney
ANYA SHRUBSOLE says England's players will be glued to the weather forecasts ahead of tomorrow's T20 World Cup semi-final.

England are due to face India at the Sydney Cricket Ground tomorrow morning.

But with heavy rain predicted, England will be knocked out if there is a wash-out or both sides fail to get in at least 10 overs by virtue of failing to win their group.

"We are weather watching," said the fast bowler. "Everyone will be downloading around five weather apps between now and the game. It is hard to predict. I was in the West Indies a few years ago and everything shut up shop because a hurricane was predicted, but the worst we got was a storm.

"Things can change pretty fast and there is nothing we can do about the weather. We just need to prepare as if the game will go ahead."

BBC weatherman Simon King said. "Rain is expected to fall for most of Thursday with the chance of the odd thunderstorm.

"The first semi-final featuring England is under threat of being called off without a ball being bowled." If they do crash out without bowling a ball it will be down to their opening-game defeat to South Africa. Shrubsole says England won't be wracked with regret though.

"If that is how you operate in life then you will always have things you wish could have gone a different way," she said. "We can't think like that. The loss to South Africa was disappointing.

WORRIES Verma and the rain-lashed SCG

"We weren't at our best and it was a wake-up call but since then we've played really good cricket." If the weather doesn't wash away England's hopes of reaching Sunday's final, India have teenage wonderkid Shafali Verma waiting to rain on their parade.

The 16-year-old is the third-highest scorer in the tournament and tops the six-hitting charts. England opener Danni Wyatt teamed up with Verma in last year's T20 Challenge, the female version of the IPL.

"I first saw her in the nets facing really quick boy bowlers and I was like, 'Woah, who is that?' I couldn't believe she was only 15," said Wyatt. "She hits the ball very hard. But we have plans for her so hopefully she won't get any runs."

Champions Australia meet South Africa in the second semi-final on Thursday with the hosts in the same boat as England if their game falls to the weather after finishing runners-up in their group.

CRICKET THE HUNDRED

EQUAL PAY FOR MEN AND WOMEN

BY DEAN WILSON

MEN and women cricketers will play for the same prize money in The Hundred.

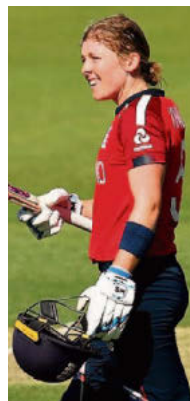

Both tournaments will offer a £300,000 prize pot with the winning team taking £150,000 and a trophy.

Runners-up will pocket £75,000 and the losing team in the 'eliminator' will get £50,000. There will also be the same individual prizes with the most valuable player in each tournament receiving £10,000 and a £5,000 bonus for the top run scorers, wicket-takers and fielders.

"This is a great announcement for women's sport," said England skipper Heather Knight ahead of Thursday's T20 World Cup semi-final against India. "While there is still a way to go for gender parity, this move is a significant step in the right direction."

But women competing in Sunday's final are being paid just 12 per cent of what the men will earn in November.

CRICKET ENGLAND'S TOUR OF SRI LANKA

JENNINGS: I'VE BEEN BATTERED

KEATON JENNINGS admits he has struggled to cope with the "absolute battering" he has suffered from his critics.

The opener touched down in Colombo yesterday with his England team-mates, having been recalled to the Test squad, thanks to Rory Burn's ankle injury and his previous fine form in Sri Lanka.

But, after a century in Mumbai on his debut in 2018 and sweeping his way to a career-best 146 not out in Galle, the Lancashire batsman (right) admitted: "I've had an absolute battering at times - the sport section can be hard reading. But there are going to be times when you see things you don't want to see or hear things in the street. But I don't want to run away from my failures or my shortcomings."

Jennings hopes to put pressure on Dom Sibley and Zak Crawley for the opener spots in the two-match series. England play the first Test in Galle, starting a fortnight tomorrow.

ENGLAND v WALES

GUINNESS SIX NATIONS 2020
TWICKENHAM, SATURDAY, KO 4.45PM

PAINFUL Biggar picked up an injury playing for Northampton

BIGGAR SET FOR SHOCK COMEBACK

BY ALEX BYWATER

DAN BIGGAR is set to hand Wales a huge boost in their bid to win at Twickenham for the first time in the Six Nations since 2012.

The fly-half suffered a knee injury for Northampton Saints last weekend but is expected to be fine to face England.

Biggar has joined Liam Williams, George North and Josh Navidi back in full training.

Williams (ankle) and Navidi (hamstring) have not played in the tournament while North has recovered from the head knock he took against France.

With Jarrod Evans the only other fit fly-half, Wales drafted Sam Davies in to their training camp as cover.

But Wales' breakdown technical advisor Sam Warburton said: "Dan is looking good. The initial signs are positive. I would say we're confident at this stage."

"The feedback from the physios has been good and he's ticking all the boxes. Training will climax towards the end of the week, but the first two days have been all good."

North suffered his sixth head injury as a professional against France but has passed the required return-to-play protocols and been assessed by an independent specialist.

Warburton insists Wales would be ready to throw full-back Williams and back-row ace Navidi straight into action despite neither having played Test rugby since the World Cup.

"If you ask Liam, he felt he was ready to play against France," he said. "It will be great to have some big-game players back."

GRANDMASTER BASH

Tuilagi is not just England's battering-ram enforcer, he's also a deep-thinking chess nut

BY ALEX SPINK
Rugby Correspondent
@alexspinkmirror

MANU TUILAGI is preparing for Wales by rehearsing his wrecking-ball tactics - on the chess board.

England's plans for Saturday's Twickenham clash may have been disrupted by prop Mako Vunipola having to self-isolate as a coronavirus precaution after flying home from Tonga via Hong Kong.

But Tuilagi focuses on the task at hand by heading to the games room at England's hotel and schooling his team-mates.

"He killed me at chess, he is unbelievable at it," said Henry Slade. "It lasted about 30 seconds. It was a rude awakening."

England are at their best when they make a fast start on the back of a marauding Tuilagi. New Zealand could not cope at the World Cup, Ireland were equally powerless 10 days ago.

And now his team-mates, used to playing alongside him, are getting a taste of the treatment he inflicts on the opposition, without even picking up a ball.

Tuilagi said: "I only started playing chess in Japan during the World Cup, but I am obsessed."

"The way I play is pretty much the same as my rugby. If I'm in white, I'll attack as you get to go first. And when you attack you have to go all in, because as soon as you let your foot off the gas you'll be losing."

The Irish team well beaten at Twickenham would recognise that approach. "I try to get us over the gain line early on, get some momentum," he added. "It's easier to play off it, whether to kick or carry on running."

"We got it last week and we had a good start. Hopefully we will look to do the same against Wales."

After England's win over Ireland, forwards coach Matt Proudfoot asked his family which player caught their eye. All said Tuilagi.

"He just offers so much," said Proudfoot. "He gives you direction. His personality is dependable."

Slade must wait to see whether Eddie Jones considers the time is right to restore his centre partnership with Tuilagi against Wales.

"Manu gives the team a massive lift," said the Exeter ace. "If you run into him, he hits you bloody hard."

Hong Kong, where there have been 100 confirmed cases, the 29-year-old was instructed to stay at home.

"Mako is not in camp on medical grounds," a Rugby Football Union spokesman said. "He is not sick, but it is a precaution."

And forwards coach Matt Proudfoot (right) said: "I can guarantee you it is not coronavirus."

Only England know why they did not instruct Vunipola to take a different route, given Hong Kong is on the NHS list of 16 countries or areas posing a "higher risk" of coronavirus - and the recommended period of self-isolation is up to 14 days. Vunipola will now almost certainly miss England's final match in Italy on Saturday week, a fixture already under threat due to the scale of the outbreak in the north of the country.

Yesterday's development follows Ireland postponing Saturday's game with Italy.

SALE CAN SHINE WITHOUT ASH

BY NEIL SQUIRES

SALE boss Steve Diamond thinks his high-flying side can overcome the abrupt departure of Chris Ashton to maintain their push for a first Premiership title in 14 years.

Second-placed Sharks washed their hands of the ex-England wing after what Diamond called a "disagreement on how we want to play the game".

"He wants to do it one way, I want to do it another - that's it," said Diamond (right).

"We had a disagreement about various things, it's a bit of a shame, but these things happen. We have to move on." Diamond is confident his side, who go top if they beat London Irish on Friday at the AJ Bell Stadium, can cope.

"We have Marland Yarde, Arron Reed, Byron McGuigan, Denny Solomona, Tom Roebuck - plenty of players," he said. "We can cope with one or two people coming and going."

ANGRY Damiani hit out at how his riders were treated

'I'll hunger strike over lockdown'

BY NEIL MCLEMAN

A CYCLING director has threatened to go on hunger strike after his Cofidis team were quarantined and "treated like plague victims" in Abu Dhabi.

The final two stages of the UAE Tour were cancelled last Thursday after two suspected coronavirus cases among team mechanics.

All riders, including Brits Chris Froome and Adam Yates, were isolated before all returning negative tests.

But while most were allowed to leave, French teams Cofidis and Groupama-FDJ, the UAE team and Russian Gazprom team stay under lockdown as other guests on their hotel floor were reported to have tested positive.

Cofidis' Italian sports director Roberto Damiani said his team are detained on the fourth floor, despite showing no symptoms.

In a statement, Damiani said: "I think we are already past the point of decency, even if it is in the name of public safety. The rooms have never been cleaned and there are heaps of rubbish in the corridor. "If in the next hours the situation is not unblocked, I will start a hunger strike to defend the cyclists and directors of the team."

Cofidis team president Thierry Vittu added: "We're being held against our will.

"When we meet someone in the corridor from the hotel, he runs away. We are treated like plague victims."

However, Bahrain is set to waive a 14-day quarantine for Formula One personnel from virus-hit countries, including Italy, to let the Grand Prix go ahead on March 22. F1 is working on a similar deal for April 5's Vietnamese Grand Prix.

Fans must prove they are not from virus-affected areas for tonight's Coppa Italia semi-final between Juventus and AC Milan.

The second leg of Valencia's Champions League last-16 tie with Atalanta on March 10 will be played in an empty stadium, as will the second leg of Getafe's Europa League clash with Inter Milan.

NATIONS LEAGUE DRAW

ICE CHANGE FOR REVENGE

Southgate handed big chance to erase memory of Euro 2016 humiliation

FROM JOHN CROSS
Chief Football Writer
in Amsterdam
@johncrossmirror

GARETH SOUTHGATE has been given the chance to lay the ghosts to rest of England's Euro 2016 nightmare.

The Three Lions were drawn against Iceland in their Nations League group, the first time England have faced them since that humiliating 2-1 defeat in Nice four years ago.

Manager Southgate said: "We've been trying to take steps towards doing that (laying ghosts) with our general performances since then anyway.

"Now there's a game that is a different sort of test. I've just seen Gudni Bergsson (Iceland FA president) and they're looking forward to it.

"Iceland have had a difficult 12 months in terms of where their team are at. But it's a game we've obviously got to be extremely well prepared for because we know the risk involved."

Iceland boss Erik Hamren said: "I can see you want a better result this time! I was not the coach, but saw the game, and it was a fantastic moment for a small country like Iceland.

"You can imagine what it felt like to beat England."

The draw also pits England against Denmark and Belgium, FIFA's No.1 ranked side. Belgium boss Roberto Martinez (above right, with Southgate,) said: "It's a great group. The teams know each other very well.

"Going to Wembley is always a very special occasion for all the fans, for us as a team, and we've improved since we played in the World Cup."

Southgate made it very clear he is backing Everton keeper Jordan Pickford to be his No.1, despite watching him make another high-profile error at Goodison Park on Sunday against Manchester United.

He added: "Jordan's performances for us, throughout, have been outstanding. He has been a key part of some big, big results.

"He is a very resilient character, so I expect him to bounce back. The weekend goal is one he would want to do better with, but then he made outstanding saves.

"That is the life of a goalkeeper."

faces a race to be fit for the summer having been sidelined since January with a double stress fracture in his back.

But Southgate will not take any chances, and even left the door open for an SOS call to Jamie Vardy who quit international football in 2018.

The England boss said: "They have to get back playing club football. Their clubs have important matches. Then we are hoping both come through with no issues ahead of the summer."

Spurs striker Kane is confident of playing again by next month while Manchester United say Rashford will be fit for the run-in.

Southgate is likely to pick Everton hitman Dominic Calvert-Lewin (above) for this month's friendlies with Denmark and Italy.

Giggs wary of this SOS

FROM JOHN CROSS

IT'S the same old story for Wales boss Ryan Giggs - another chance to meet the Republic of Ireland.

The nations have met in three of their last four campaigns, including the previous Nations League.

Wales will also face Finland and Bulgaria - and Giggs (above) said: "The Republic are a team you must respect.

"We had two very different games against them last time, fantastic quality and brilliant goals at home. The away game, we didn't play well but dug out a result with a bit of magic from Harry Wilson."

Scotland will play Czech Republic, Slovakia and Euro 2020 play-off opponents Israel. Northern Ireland were grouped with Austria, Norway and Romania.

NATIONS LEAGUE: HOW IT WORKS

THE teams who win each group in the top division - as England did last time - will go into the finals tournament in June 2021.

Nations who finish bottom will be relegated to League B.

Unlike the previous campaign, when everybody was competing to qualify for the Euro 2020 play-offs, there will be only two World Cup play-off spots on offer to the 55 countries this time.

The best two Nations League group winners who do not qualify for the World Cup or play-offs through normal qualifying, will go into the 12-team World Cup play-offs in March 2022.

The first group games take place in September this year, with the finals scheduled for the summer.

CLOTET RECKONS VENABLES WAS DECADES AHEAD OF THE REST..

BY JOHN CROSS
Chief Football Writer
@johncrossmirror

PEP CLOTET has worked with some of Europe's top managers, but believes Terry Venables was 30 years ahead of his time.

Birmingham boss Clotet, 42, is a keen student of the game having learned as a youth coach under the likes of Manuel Pellegrini and Mauricio Pochettino.

He is now trying to take something from each of them, but says Venables' time at Barcelona in the mid-1980s was the template for what Pep Guardiola has gone on to achieve.

Clotet said: "My dad is a member at Barcelona. We went to the games and I grew up watching Venables, Gary Lineker, and Mark Hughes. I met Hughes and said to him, 'I remember seeing you there, watching you score a lot of headers'.

"He said in that first season it was fantastic – 'No one could play against us, we were pressing all the way up the pitch. But the next season, we couldn't even run! We were exhausted'.

"It was Venables who brought the English mentality to Spain. I met him a couple of years ago and said, 'What you did there, it's even better than you think'. What he did, no one has done that again, until Guardiola was in charge. That was 30 years ago.

"Now you have players here that are using concepts they were not using before. The clubs are also making it possible. I remember working with Roberto Martinez at Swansea, being told it's hard to play football, keep possession, because the fans always wanted to get forward.

"But Swansea created a culture at the club. The same at Bournemouth. The same at Brentford. What a fantastic achievement. All within FFP, and now Brentford move to a new stadium. What England is doing with its football is incredible."

By his own admission, Clotet had an average playing career curtailed by injury. He worked at Espanyol during Pochettino's time in charge, with ex-Malaga boss Pellegrini, then moved to Swansea and Leeds, before becoming manager at Oxford and now Birmingham.

His Blues are 13 games unbeaten in all competitions and go to Leicester in the FA Cup fifth round tonight full of belief, with Clotet a contender for manager of the month in the Championship.

He added: "The challenge was massive. It's been good to have the owner's representative at the training ground because he can see the difficulties of the job.

"Sometimes, you do a great job, and you still don't win.

"Overall, we are very satisfied with the way it's going. Last season, the only game of the season we weren't fighting against relegation was in the last one, against Reading. And now, we're not suffering like that."

DEMARAI GRAY has been urged to follow the lead of Raheem Sterling to kickstart his Leicester career at old club Birmingham tonight.

Wideman Gray, 23, has had to be patient with the high-flying Foxes this season.

He has not started a league game in 2020 and been limited to just two top-flight starts and 412 minutes of action.

But boss Brendan Rodgers wants more from Gray (both below) after comparing his stats of one goal and one assist to England's Manchester City ace Sterling, who has 11 goals and an assist in the Premier League.

Rodgers was Sterling's manager at Liverpool and said: "Attacking players are judged on what you can create and score.

"If you are comparing him and looking at that similar type of player, you are looking at a Raheem Sterling.

These are the levels. Demarai has all the tools to play at the very highest level.

"If you look at speed and power, explosiveness, technique, those are attributes he has.

"He is a good lad. Demarai has played in the England Under-21s and has a lot of caps at that level.

"Then it is how can you grow and be consistent when you get to that age of 22 or 23.

"I know it is something he is conscious of and something I have spoken to him about.

"If you look at the games he has played, he has to produce more. I have worked with a number of wingers who go from scoring three to four goals a season to 15 plus."

Former Birmingham trainee Gray, snapped up in January 2016 for £3.5million, has been promised action tonight against his old club, as Rodgers is set to make changes.

QPR boss Frank Sibley hit out at Brian Clough after the Forest manager accused his team of 'kicking'. Sibley's team were defeated by Forest in the FA Cup. And they faced the prospect of a trip back up to Nottingham for a rearranged league match.
"We don't owe them any favours," said Sibley. "Sure we played hard. But we certainly didn't kick."

STAYING PUT Gerrard is committed to Rangers task

Gerrard scotches Gers fear

STEVEN GERRARD insists he's "all in" at Rangers - after rubbingish claims he was ready to quit.

The Ibrox boss admitted Saturday's 1-0 Scottish Cup defeat by Hearts was "the lowest I felt since I came into the job by a long way".

And it led to speculation ex-England and Liverpool skipper Gerrard was on the verge of walking away after almost two years in charge.

But when quizzed if he had thought about his future, Gerrard, 39, said: "Long term? No, no."

"From the end of the game at the weekend, which was bitterly disappointing, I have done a real lot of thinking to myself and shared those thoughts with people around me - and I'm ready to go again."

"I've signed up to something here. I'm in, I'm all in. I always knew there would be periods like this that were tough, real setbacks."

"I think this is when the club needs me most, and that is to stay strong and fight on and push and continue to try to improve this and build on the progress we have made in a lot of areas."

Rangers trail leaders Celtic by 12 points in the Scottish Premiership but have marched into the last 16 of the Europa League.

Gerrard said: "If you want to survive at this level you have to bounce back pretty quickly from setbacks."

JOSE MOURINHO will resist the clamour to start teenage striker Troy Parrott because he says Tottenham fans have not seen him in action - nor even know what he looks like.

And the former Manchester United boss said the Irishman had to learn "to keep his feet on the ground" like Scott McTominay at the start of his career.

Injuries to Harry Kane and Heung-min Son have led to calls for the 18-year-old forward to ease Spurs' striker crisis. But Mourinho said Parrott, who has played six minutes in two Premier League appearances, would be back on the bench against Norwich tonight.

"He's a kid, so we need to take care of him," said the Spurs boss. "He has potential, but is not the end product. This is a world where lots of people don't even know if Troy has long hair or short hair. Or is blond or is dark."

"They don't even know that and speak about, 'Troy, Troy, Troy, Troy, he should play'. There was a guy behind me on the bench the other day, 'Play Troy, play Troy'. I don't think he knows Troy."

Mourinho sent Parrott back to the Under-23s on Monday as part of his "educational process" after questioning the Republic of Ireland player's attitude.

He said: "He needs to have his feet on the ground, we need to help him do that. To behave like a very young professional, that has a career ahead of him, not as somebody in the last part of his career."

"I was worried about attitude. I told him, 'Every time you play with kids of your age, you have to show them why you are the privileged one. Why you are training in the first team every day and some of them are not'. Because it was something he was not doing. He cannot go there with contempt."

"I had exactly the same words with McTominay. He did not have the right frame of mind. The moment that improved, lots of things started changing for him."

"Kids have things too easy in life. So if he plays against Norwich and scores the winning goal, and is on the back page of your newspapers, nothing changes. The next week he goes back to the Under-23s."

DOWN MEMORY LANE

BY JON WEST

DANIEL FARKE wants his Norwich players to make some FA Cup memories this season.

And if they end up replicating Wigan's Cup and relegation double of seven years ago, then so be it.

The Canaries - bottom of the Premier League and six points from safety - are taking 9,000 fans to Spurs tonight. But boss Farke does not see Wembley as a distraction. The last time Norwich lifted a trophy - the 1985 League Cup - they also went down.

He said: "Cup competitions are always the easiest and shortest way to create something extraordinary. We play this game to create memories."

"Cups remind us why we first started to play football with our mates."

Pep tells City stars to forget Wembley triumph and concentrate on NEXT trophy

BY DAVID McDONNELL
@DiscoMirror

PEP GUARDIOLA wants his Manchester City players to shower him with more success - after telling them to forget their Carabao Cup triumph.

Sunday's 2-1 win over Aston Villa at Wembley was the third year in a row City have lifted the League Cup.

They have now claimed eight of the last nine domestic trophies, with Guardiola (right) and his players celebrating on the Wembley turf and in the dressing room.

But, as soon as they had showered and changed, Guardiola said the collective focus immediately switched to tonight's FA Cup fifth-round tie at Sheffield Wednesday.

"I learned in big clubs I was at before - and with their history - that when they win a trophy they go and take a shower and they're thinking in that moment about the next one," said Guardiola. "It's nice what we've done in that competition in the last three years, but in this game we have another final.

"Playing away in the FA Cup is always difficult because of how important this competition is in this country.

"We can go through to the quarter-finals and that's what we have to do.

"There's been a lot of effort behind this and it started more than a decade ago.

"The most important thing was winning the league when Roberto Mancini was here, it changed the mentality of the club.

"The first one is always the most difficult one and Roberto and his people and players did it. Then other people came after them and continued the process."

Despite relinquishing the title to Liverpool and UEFA handing them a two-year European ban, City can still end a difficult season on a high with three trophies.

City lead Real Madrid 2-1, heading into the second leg of their Champions League last-16 tie and are big favourites to progress to the FA Cup quarter-finals tonight.

Although Guardiola has his sights set on another treble, he claimed silverware is not the only way of judging if a season has been a success.

"I see if players were better than last season, the way we play, how we react in bad moments," added Guardiola. "It's not just 'winning the title is good, not winning the title is bad'."

MONK: IF YOU THINK WE CAN'T WIN, YOU SHOULDN'T BE IN THIS SPORT

BY DAVID ANDERSON

GARRY MONK claims his Sheffield Wednesday players should pack in football if they do not believe they can upset Manchester City.

They are huge underdogs against Pep Guardiola's side and City's latest League Cup triumph was the 19th straight domestic cup tie they have won since February 2018. By contrast, the Owls have won just one of their last nine Championship games, yet Monk insists they must believe they can shock City.

"I've got a feeling the lads will give their all in this game," said the Wednesday boss.

"They've earned the right to play against this type of team, they've earned the right to be in this round and we want to try - even though it's a small chance - to make it to the next round. It can happen. Of course, it needs a lot for that to happen. But if you don't believe in that, you shouldn't be in professional sport, certainly not in football."

Monk (right) claims Wednesday must play without fear, despite City being a world-class team.

"Everything you want from a football team makes them formidable," he said. "Quality of their players, quality of their play, quality of their manager and how they set up to play.

"That's the challenge ahead of us and we need to rise to that. There's no fear in any of that. This is why you play, this is why you manage.

"All the odds are against us, we have to be at our very best and have a bit of luck - but who says we can't do that?"

ON A HIGH Rooney at United and Derby

ROONEY ALL SET TO STUN UNITED PALS

Derby County v Man Utd
FA Cup 5th round, tomorrow, 7.45pm

BY JAMES NURSEY

WAYNE ROONEY admits he will always love Manchester United but is aiming to inflict an FA Cup shock on them tomorrow.

Manchester United's record goalscorer will captain Derby against his old club in a fifth-round clash.

Rooney, 34, scored 253 goals in 559 games for United from 2004-2017 after joining from Everton for £27million.

And he is relishing coming up against his former club again - after losing in both games against them in his season back at Everton when he left Old Trafford in 2017.

"For me it is a big game playing against my former team," said the former England captain, who is now revelling in his midfield role for the Rams. "They will be favourites.

"I captained Everton against them and it is always strange when you play against a former team, especially when you have been there so long. I love the club and it is a team I want to do well and win.

HERO Rooney celebrates goal for Rams

"But for this 90 minutes I want us to win and to try and go through.

"I have visited Derby as a Manchester United player in the FA Cup before and know what it means to the fans and staff here.

"It is for us as players to go on the pitch to try and get a good result.

"But it is a big challenge for us playing against a very good team."

Rooney has four goals in 14 starts for the Rams since arriving in January from MLS side DC United on an 18-month contract worth £100,000 a week. During his 13 years at United he won the Premier League five times, the Champions League, FA Cup and three League Cups.

"My time there was great," he added. "We won the Premier League and Champions League and everything really. To win the FA Cup as captain was a huge honour.

"We had some low moments too, but I enjoyed it and loved working every day at the club and will always look back on it with fond memories."

FRUSTRATED Sokratis' Gunners future is in doubt

Gunning for new City date

BY JOHN CROSS
THE Premier League is in talks with Manchester City and Arsenal about rearranging their clash for next Wednesday.

The Gunners were due to play at the Etihad last Sunday, but it was postponed because of the Carabao Cup final.

They are looking at next week as both clubs have a free midweek. It would be Arsenal boss Mikel Arteta's first return to City after leaving in December to take over at the Emirates.

A decision on the rearranged date is expected in the next 24 hours. Arsenal face West Ham on Saturday while City have the Manchester derby on Sunday, meaning Arteta's men have an extra 24 hours to prepare.

Sokratis has opened the door to an Arsenal exit if he is not playing next season.

The Greek defender, 31, is under contract until summer 2021 and said: "I never sit on my contract. It is important I feel good and the team is happy with me. If not, I finish."

Lucas Torreira could still play for Arsenal again this season despite leaving Portsmouth on crutches.

The Uruguay midfielder was carried off 16 minutes into Monday's 2-0 FA Cup victory and will have further assessments.

But the club remain hopeful he will not be ruled out for the rest of the campaign.

GOLDEN-OLDIE Billy Sharp proved the last thing which deserts a natural goalscorer is his instinct.

At 34, Sharp may be raging against the fading light of youth – but he is still one in a billion among his Sheffield United flock.

And the Blades' pious piper came off the bench to send Chris Wilder's men into the FA Cup quarter-finals for the first time in six years with only his third goal of the season.

A tedious impasse was drifting towards penalties until Billy the King arrived at the far post to head home Luke Freeman's cross at the end of the first period of extra time.

The Blades had taken just 85 seconds to lead this Cup tie. From Ben Osborn's wicked left-wing cross, unmarked David McGoldrick rose to head his first goal of the season.

When goal-shy centre-forwards hit the target with barely a minute on the clock, you are entitled to think your luck's out.

But the Royals summoned a decent response, and United keeper Dean Henderson did well to parry Yakou Meite's swerving missile from distance.

And they were level two minutes before the break when George Puscas rammed his penalty beyond Henderson after George Baldock was penalised for pushing Andy Rinomhota.

It was not clear how much force, if any, Baldock exerted in his challenge, and referee Kevin Friend's decision appeared to be based on the dramatic artistry of Rinomhota's fall.

The Blades didn't always look comfortable on a lively pitch with a trampoline bounce, but they had looked likelier to extend their lead than concede an equaliser.

Skipper John Egan's glancing header from Luke Freeman's corner was just too high, while McGoldrick extended Rafael Cabral. Once they were level, however, Reading were excellent.

Optimism has drained away since the giddy heights of Steve Coppell and Brian McDermott's heyday, and they have banks of empty seats to prove it.

But if the Royals were going nowhere fast until Mark Bowen took over as manager, they gave Wilder's high flyers all the trouble they could handle.

NEWCASTLE have every right to think the FA Cup gods are smiling on them again as Steve Bruce's side clinched a quarter-final spot.

The Geordies have not been able to buy a goal of late, but suddenly their dismal Premier League form went out of the window.

If you believe in fate then there is an ominous ring about this result.

This was the fifth FA Cup meeting between these two grand old clubs and all have been at The Hawthorns.

Newcastle had only won once – back in 1974 – when they ended up going all the way to Wembley.

And Miguel Almiron certainly seems to like the competition – his double making it four FA Cup goals.

The £21million midfielder struck twice in the first half and when Valentino Lazaro was gifted Newcastle's third straight after the break it was suddenly all looking unusually comfortable. Still, they couldn't stop themselves giving their fans the jitters as they survived an Albion onslaught in the last 20 minutes which threatened to make all their hard work count for nothing.

Late goals from Matt Phillips and Kenneth Zohore had Newcastle reeling, but they dug deep to hold on.

For Toon boss Bruce (right) it proved welcome respite from an alarming slide in the league where they haven't even scored in four games and find themselves just five points clear of the drop zone.

West Brom made a sweeping 11 changes – though it must be said that in Gareth Barry, Chris Brunt, Kieran Gibbs and Charlie Austin they picked four players with just shy of 1,500 League appearances between them.

Allan Saint-Maximin was causing all sorts of problems for the home side and eventually created the breakthrough in the 33rd minute with a superb piece of creative play.

Minutes after rattling the post, Saint-Maximin sent Almiron through and he drew the keeper before curling a left-foot shot into the bottom corner of the net to give the visitors the lead.

Then Almiron gave the 5,000 travelling fans real cause to think the long journey was worthwhile on the stroke of half-time when he stuck a great finish at the end of a penetrating move.

Lazaro carved the Baggies open down the right flank, the ball dropped to Joelinton, who put the ball into Almiron's path with a clever back heel and the Paraguayan fired another left-foot shot into the roof of the net.

Next it was Lazaro's turn, though he was fortunate that back-up keeper Jonathan Bond pushed the ball on to him trying to deal with Saint-Maximin's 47th-minute centre.

West Brom staged a desperate attempt to get back into it in the final 20 minutes and caused a few moments of panic, especially when Phillips clawed one back in the 74th minute when his shot flew in off the underside of the bar.

Then Fabian Schar managed to scramble away a goal-bound Phillips effort before substitute Zohore grabbed a late consolation when he tapped home with seconds left.

DEAL ME IN Holgate has signed a five-year deal

Holgate is tied up to stop City

BY CHRIS McKENNA
MASON HOLGATE has signed a new five-year contract at Everton following interest from Manchester City.

The 23-year-old defender has become an important part of Carlo Ancelotti's first team since the Italian took over in December and the new deal ties him to the club until June 2025.

Holgate said: "This is my fifth year at Everton and my development as a person and a player in that period has been massive.

"The direction the club is going, it is a great club to be at and I am really excited about it.

"We want to move to the next step and push for bigger and better things.

"I want to win things - and winning some silverware is where I see us." Holgate joined the from Barnsley in 2015 and has made 74 first-team appearances since his debut against Tottenham in August 2016.

He spent last season on loan at West Brom before returning in the summer and has become Yerry Mina's central defensive partner ahead of England's Michael Keane.

'English is only way'

BY CHRIS McKENNA
EVERTON boss Carlo Ancelotti is forcing his staff to learn English to help the Toffees progress.

The Italian brought in six staff when he replaced Marco Silva in December.

They include his son Davide, fitness coach Francesco Mauri, video analyst Simeone Montanaro and head of performance Mino Fulco.

They have teamed up with Duncan Ferguson, who became interim boss when Silva was sacked, and Ancelotti (above) said: "Just a few staff are not speaking English properly but I force them to learn English."

Lampard banks on Barkley and Evertonian fires a cracker to knock out Reds

NOT for the first time, Ross Barkley was getting a bit of stick from his fellow Scousers.

It has happened to him before and will happen to him again.

But never has he answered his red tormentors in such a spectacular and emphatic fashion.

And the chances are he will never do so again.

The goal that rubber-stamped Chelsea's progression to the quarter-finals was the goal those who have watched Barkley since he was a kid at Everton know is in his armoury.

That it is not the type rolled out more often is down to an array of factors, probably not all of them confined to his on-the-field development. But to use the common phraseology, he has the 50-yard run and thumping finish in his locker.

And when he produced it in the second half to see off Liverpool, it was also a reminder that, amidst the emergence of so many younger, talented English midfielders, Barkley remains a rough diamond.

While his stunning effort officially condemned Liverpool to a second straight defeat, there was an element of own foot-shooting in another reverse for Jurgen Klopp's side.

Rotating goalkeepers has always been a slightly unfathomable practice, designed only to keep the warm-up guys sweet.

It is not as though any goalkeeper needs a physical rest and Alisson's workload has hardly been exhaustive this season.

Fielding the reserve guy just feels like a thank you - gratitude that was not returned by Adrian.

He had actually kept out a Willian howitzer before a rocket also upset that trolls have now targeted Congo-born Leko on social media.

In their written reasons confirming Mirror Sport's story on Saturday, the FA argued a draconian punishment was needed as a deterrent.

But the governing body was overruled, despite pointing out Casilla's bizarre claim that he had never heard of the N-word.

The FA felt Casilla, 33, had tried "to deceive the tribunal" and his high-profile character witnesses, including former Liverpool, Real Madrid and Newcastle boss Rafa Benitez, were a "shameless play".

The three-man independent panel consisted of Graeme McPherson QC, former Blackburn striker Marvin Robinson and England winger Stuart Ripley (right).

Casilla was alleged to have insulted Leko during Charlton's 1-0 win at The Valley in September.

His words were heard by Leno and team-mate Macauley Bonne, who both gave evidence.

The keeper denied the charge, but the commission rejected his evidence and that of Leeds team manager Matt Grice, who "was not seeking to assist us to ascertain the truth".

Under rules introduced for the 2019-20 season, the minimum ban for a player found guilty of an aggravated breach of the FA's racism rules is six games. But that penalty can be increased depending on additional aggravating factors.

Casilla was also fined £60,000 and ordered to attend a face-to-face education session. But the FA argued that Casilla's evidence along with a lack of any apology to Leko, 20, were aggravating factors requiring a longer ban.

Instead, he will be available for promotion-chasing Leeds' final three games of the season - including their home match against Charlton.

Kop rivals can smell blood now

BY DARREN LEWIS

FIRST Atletico, then that collapse at Watford. Now this.

Glass half-full? The FA Cup is not that high on Liverpool's list of priorities anyway.

The Premier League title is pretty much wrapped up and a side this good does not lose their class overnight.

That Champions League showdown against Atletico Madrid in front of the Kop next week, however, does take on an entirely new complexion.

Jürgen Klopp will not panic. Nor will the assembled avengers in the Anfield dressing room.

But given their recent form, Liverpool's opponents will be acutely aware of the seeds of doubt now planted in the minds of some of the younger players and the B-listers.

The recent run is also a stark reminder of the importance of Jordan Henderson to this team.

After Dejan Lovren laboured at Watford on Saturday, it was said that stability would return to the Reds' defence once Joe Gomez was fit again.

Yet without Henderson's leadership and industry in midfield, the jigsaw still isn't quite complete.

So that's three defeats in four and a Liverpool side for whom the winter break proved a hindrance rather than a help.

Their momentum has gone. Their belief is clearly still there but they are no longer imposing their will on rivals.

Chelsea had won more games on the road than at the Bridge before last night.

But they might have had five goals had Mason Mount and Olivier Giroud (above) not hit the bar - and Pedro not been denied in a one-on-one with Adrian.

Chelsea showed more guile, more quality and might have won even more handsomely.

As it is, Klopp has some thinking to do.

His rivals are smelling blood - and they are going in for the kill.

enjoyed behind Williams was occasionally disconcerting.

But there is no doubt he is a major talent, along with Curtis Jones, who grew into the game in the second half.

His increasing influence was symptomatic of Liverpool taking a grip on proceedings.

Although Chelsea were hardly helped by the premature departures of Mateo Kovacic - just before half-time - and Willian (right), just after half-time.

Not that their replacements, Mason Mount and Jorginho, were too shabby.

Mount finds himself in a log-jam of talented young English midfielders.

But, in this extended cameo, gave more evidence to support Gareth Southgate's apparent trust in him.

His sharpness drew one dangerous free-kick from which he hit the crossbar.

But several eye-catching midfield performances were eclipsed by the one moment of surging brilliance from Barkley.

Pedro missed a sitter and Olivier Giroud hit the crossbar.

But Barkley's beauty after 64 minutes ensured Chelsea were out of sight.

KLOPP'S CALAMITY KEEPER

Liverpool is massive for me. As an Everton fan, it's always a dream to score against them."

Boss Frank Lampard said: "I'm really proud. Liverpool are the best team in the league and what they are doing is incredible. "So for us to put in a performance like that, the effort, the quality was something special. We know we've got a long way to go, but you have to celebrate those moments."

The FA Cup exit continued a remarkable loss of form for Jürgen Klopp's Premier League champions-elect.

They have now suffered three defeats in four games after a 1-0 loss to Atletico Madrid in the Champions League and their remarkable Premier League 3-0 defeat at Watford.

Chelsea's win would have been even more emphatic had Adrian not denied Pedro in a one-on-one and Mason Mount and Olivier Giroud not hit the bar.

But the Blues had to count the cost of marching into the quarter-finals.

Midfielder Mateo Kovacic had to go off just before half-time and Willian also limped off with an injury shortly after the break.

Two letters have already been placed in this grid. Now enter the other 18 given letters to form a rectangle of words, four reading across and five reading down. Each of the letters must take its place in the column or row against which it appears. So the letter P may only appear in the first column, and the letter R only in the first row.

Aries March 21-April 20

You're tired of hearing a friend's excuses when you are let down again. You've always been there for this person and you're disappointed your kind nature is taken so much for granted. You had expected more from this friendship and this is causing you to look at it in a different light.

Taurus April 21 - May 21

People have different tastes and that's why you're trying to gear an outing or celebration to everyone's preferences. This won't be easy. In fact, you might find it virtually impossible. In the end you will make a booking, set an itinerary and leave it to others to decide whether they want to join in.

Gemini May 22 - June 21

A severe critic is making you question your knowledge or abilities. He or she doesn't seem to have a kind word to say about your efforts. It is possible that this tormentor is actually very jealous of you. But you must not let a pompous person like this destroy your confidence.

For more call 0905 789 4173 (80p/min + network access charge)

Cancer June 22 - July 23

You're working hard towards achieving a lofty goal. It might look as if you're finding it easy but people don't see all the work you are doing in the background. There is someone who is watching your progress behind the scenes and this could lead to you receiving an exciting job offer.

Leo July 24 - August 23

A change of plans that work against your interests won't please you. It might feel as if your boss is overlooking your needs while steering his or her favourites to the best opportunities. If this is a regular occurrence, one way to take control of your destiny is to start looking for another job.

For more call 0905 789 4175 (80p/min + network access charge)

Virgo Aug 24 - Sept 23

There are people who rely on you for security. Your presence gives others a sense of calm and stability. The problem is, in being a support system for them, you are missing out on opportunities that could be good for you. It is time to balance what you do for others with taking care of yourself.

Libra Sept 24-Oct 23

Routine tasks can be surprisingly therapeutic. A breakthrough could occur while you are washing dishes, putting away groceries or chopping vegetables. Anxiety has been blocking your creativity. Stop trying to be all things to all people. It is time to put your own needs first.

For more call 0905 789 4177 (80p/min + network access charge)

Scorpio Oct 24 - Nov 23

It can be exhausting constantly having to take other people's feelings into account. You are sensitive to the atmosphere around you and you can't ignore this side of your personality. This is why spending time alone can help ground you. Treat yourself to a walk in the park or a soak in the bath.

For more call 0905 789 4178 (80p/min + network access charge)

Sagittarius Nov 23 - Dec 21

Computer crashes and mechanical breakdowns cause you a lot of frustration. You might wish you had dealt with a problem earlier when a stitch in time would have saved nine. Treat this as a lesson for the future. If other repairs are needed, hire a professional to take care of them.

For more call 0905 789 4179 (80p/min + network access charge)

Capricorn Dec 22 - Jan 20

Your partner or best friend won't share all your views and interests. This can be annoying at times but it will also foster greater independence. You can pursue your own dreams without this person's support. Once you've discussed your differences, you will either agree to disagree or part ways.

For more call 0905 789 4180 (80p/min + network access charge)

Aquarius Jan 21 - Feb 19

A group project will give you lots of mental stimulation. You're mixing with some very witty people who always have a lot to talk about. If you find the need to learn more about an offer, opportunity or a future event, a Virgo friend will offer to help you track down all the information you want.

For more call 0905 789 4181 (80p/min + network access charge)

Pisces Feb 20 - Mar 20

You will feel inspired to launch a creative project after visiting a concert or museum. Teaming up with a writer, artist or musician will keep you focused on your goal. Creating beautiful objects will be a change from work. Expect to rub shoulders with creative types at a seminar or workshop.

Chilli Marrakech

If you love spicy, aromatic dishes like tagine, this one-pot will become an instant favourite - it uses lean lamb mince but beef also works just as well

- 1½ tbsp cumin seed
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 3 onions, halved and thinly sliced
- 3 x 400g packs lean lamb mince
- 2 tbsp finely chopped ginger
- 4 garlic cloves, finely chopped
- 2 x 400g cans chopped tomatoes
- 1 tbsp paprika
- 1 tbsp ground cinnamon
- 1½ tbsp ground coriander
- 3 tbsp harissa
- 3 red peppers, deseeded and cut into large chunks
- 2 x 400g cans chickpeas, drained
- 2 x 20g packs coriander, most chopped, a few leaves left whole to serve
- 500ml beef or lamb stock, made with 2 cubes

PREP: 30 MINS
COOK: 1 HR (PLUS HEATING FROM FROZEN)
SERVES 10

- 1 Heat your largest non-stick wok or pan, tip in the cumin seeds and toast for a few secs. Remove. Add the oil to the pan and fry the onions for 5 mins until starting to colour. Add the mince, ginger and garlic, and cook, breaking up the mince with your wooden spoon, until no longer pink. Drain any excess liquid or fat from the pan.
- 2 Stir in the tomatoes, toasted cumin, remaining spices and harissa - add more spice if you like an extra kick. Add the peppers, chickpeas, three-quarters of the chopped coriander and the stock. Cover and cook for 40 mins, stirring occasionally, until the sauce is slightly thickened. Remove from the heat. Cool, then stir in the remaining chopped coriander. Can be served or frozen at this point.
- 3 Pack into freezer bags and smooth the mince through the bag to flatten. Use within 3 months. To serve, remove from the bags and heat from frozen in a pan on the hob with a little water until bubbling hot, then scatter with coriander.
