The sweet spot

In 2023, eight and a half million international tourists chose South Africa as their destination – an astounding 49% increase from the previous year. It seems 2024 proved to perform even better, with a further growth of 7% in the first eight months of the year.

It's clear our country is a popular choice among world travellers, though for us, who travel across its length and breadth, that comes as no surprise.

South Africa is synonymous with sunshine, natural beauty and exceptional wildlife. The Big Five remain a highlight, even for us as local tourists, and our country is dotted with reserves and parks to ensure the survival of these and other animals. Best of all, many of these reserves allow us to camp.

SANParks is responsible for several parks across most provinces, with the Kruger National Park not only the clear favourite but also covering the largest area.

SANParks oversees no fewer than 19 areas, and this year, we list at least 14 of them. Of course, you can camp in each of them, including all 13 campsites in the Kruger.

In this Resort Guide, we also look at other local reserves, including KZN Wildlife in KwaZulu-Natal, CapeNature in the Western Cape, and the Eastern Cape Parks and Tourism Agency (ECPTA), along with a range of private reserves and game farms.

We camp to be in nature, and then there are people like Armand Grobbelaar from Durbanville, who takes it a step further. The more remote, the better, as you'll see when you turn the page to read more about his exciting travels.

The universe exists in balance, and the same could be said for camping.

While many campers seek the quiet of the bush, others find joy in lively campsites.

Some resorts even offer a blend of the two: a slice of Africa with wild animals and a pleasure park like no other. We've included these resorts as well.

Whether it's a bush camp, an activity-rich resort, or a combination of both, nearly a quarter of the resorts in this guide are either new or haven't featured in our guides in the past five years.

Let us know about your favourite camping spot, and who knows, perhaps we'll see each other in that sweet spot where nature meets delight.

Happy camping!

Second nature

He's as at home in the bush as you can get – and well on his way to surpassing the mark of 20 000 km in camping trips over the past two years. And that's only the beginning, says Armand Grobbelaar from Durbanville.

As a primary school kid, Armand practically grew up at the campsite with his family. Every December holiday, they'd spend a month and a half camping at Leentjiesklip in Langebaan.

This is where Armand developed his love for camping, even though they didn't really visit other camping spots. Along with this camping seed planted so early, he was always curious to explore other places, leading to the ongoing camping trips he takes today.

A year of three after school, Armand bought his first bakkie, a Toyota Hilux 3.0 D-4D Xtra Cab, a manual model with 4x2 drive. He geared up for his first camping trip to Nona Rosa near Heidelberg, and Rooiberg near Vanwyksdorp. His camping gear included only the essentials: a dome tent, gazebo, groundsheet, two camp beds with mattresses, two camping chairs and rechargeable lights.

Besides camping, Armand also enjoys 4x4 trails, even if it's just a weekend route through scenic landscapes. He does this regularly to satisfy his urge to be in nature.

His love of nature means he steers clear of busy places and instead settles down in quieter spots. However, he doesn't mind if he bumps into someone out in the middle of nowhere; they're likely to share the same interests.

You do need to be well-prepared, though. On a two-week trip, for instance, Armand will pack food and water for four weeks. He realises it's not always the safest to face the world alone, but that's precisely where the adventure begins and the adrenaline kicks in.

After the Hilux came a Nissan Navara, and one of the biggest factors for this choice was the coil springs on the bakkie's rear axle. To be honest, Armand would never have considered a Nissan, but friends in Australia gave him a new perspective. The Navara has a 2,3 l diesel engine and is a double cab with 4x4 drive. However, the standard equipment fell short, so Armand upgraded the tyres and suspension. The road tyres made way for mud tyres, and the suspension for the best Ironman has to offer.

Besides camping, Armand also enjoys 4x4 trails, even if it's just a weekend route through scenic landscapes

In the meantime, Armand's overland travels were no longer just about driving from one point to another; it had become a serious pastime. This meant the bakkie got even more gear: an Australian rooftop tent and a 75 l fridge-freezer.

Verneukpan, now one of Armand's favourite camping spots, was next on the agenda – a route that would eventually take him past Augrabies, Vioolsdrif, the Richtersveld and Port Nolloth. Speaking of routes: Armand's journeys aren't meticulously planned. He simply sets daily targets and avoids the usual routes. Ordinary roads are off-limits because that's how you discover new places. "Nothing stops you from hitting the road nice and early. Discover the world and enrich your journey instead of sticking to a predetermined route."

He believes in spending only one night at a campsite, but if Armand could spend two nights somewhere, it would be at Hartbeesmond on the Namaqua Eco Route. There's so much beauty to take in, he says.

Although Armand mostly camps alone, he's not completely alone – his sheepdog, Buks, goes along. Buks is Armand's campsite commander and has a specially fitted seat on the back seat of the bakkie. It's also where he sleeps while Armand snuggles into his rooftop tent at night. When Armand arrives at his destination for the day, he grabs a beer and takes a walk with Buks to explore the immediate surroundings. The camping chairs follow, and then Armand takes in the scenery. If campfires pose a risk to the environment, the gas is at the ready. He travels with an espresso machine for that special late-night coffee.

Armand would love to travel through Namibia and Botswana, but there's still too much he wants to see locally first.

Camping in nature is the perfect escape because it provides peace while refreshing your soul, says Armand.

Armand wins a camera bag worth R700 from Camp Cover for his entry on Facebook about his favourite campsite. Feel free to email leon.botha@media24.com and tell us about your favourite camping spot, and who knows, the camera bag in our next Resort Guide might just be yours!
